What You Should Know About Retinitis Pigmentosa

Most cases of night blindness and a reduction in side vision can't be cured. While research to find a cause and treatment continues, there is help available to make the most of the vision you still have.

If you know of someone with difficulty seeing at night or in dimly lit places (night blindness), or with a reduction in side (peripheral) vision, you may be seeing symptoms of a group of diseases called retinitis pigmentosa.

Called RP for short, these degenerative diseases are known to run in families. What causes the gradual deterioration of cells in the retina—the part of the eye that transmits pictures to the brain—is unknown. But, says the Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation, research is pointing the way to a solution.

The RP Foundation, which supports research at a number of medical centers and hospitals internationally to find the cause, prevention and treatment of this family of diseases, emphasizes that if you experience any of the symptoms of RP you should see an ophthalmologist.

The Foundation points out that, at present, there's no treatment to arrest the progression of RP. However, many unproven "treatments" have been attempted. To date, no convincing scientific evidence has been offered to demonstrate any benefits from these so called treatments.

Despite the lack of a provable treatment, many aids, services and techniques are available which provide a visually impaired person with increased mobility and independence. Special lenses, orientation and mobility training and illumination are several examples.

The Department of Vocational Rehabilitation or Commission for the Blind or Visually Impaired, offers a number of training programs to assist in adapting to such situations as travel, housekeeping, employment and education.

The Night Vision Aid, developed and manufactured by International Telephone and Telegraph, is a handheld device that may be helpful to some individuals with RP who have functional daytime vision. If you're interested in testing the Aid, or want free information write: National Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation, Department PA, 8331 Mindale Circle, Baltimore, MD. 21207.

TOUCHDOWN . . . we all know the thrill that lifts us to our feet when OUR team scores. We cheer, we sing and shout.

It takes teamwork to put a man over that goal line. The whole team must work together to move that ball down the field . . . "the right way." The guards and tackles must hold the line. The ends must be "on target" to receive passes. The quarterback must know his plays and execute them with speed and skill.

Likewise, in the game of life we need wisdom and strength beyond our individual endeavor. It is essential to receive inspiration and help in order to achieve successfully our goals in life. Your church or synagogue can provide that faith which leads to everlasting victory.

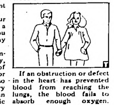
Your Baby

What are your Baby's Chances of a Heart Defect?



Attention expectant parents:

If you're worried your baby might be born with a critical heart defect, you probably shouldn't be, say medical authorities.

"The odds are overwhelmingly in favor of a healthy, normal child. The chance of having a baby with a major heart malformation is so small one needn't worry about it," according to Alan Lewis, M.D., a pediatric cardiologist at Children's Hospital of Los Angeles.

The chances of having a baby with the heart defect that produces a "blue baby" are about four in ten thousand.

Doctors believe heart defects form within the first 30 to 40 days after conception when the heart develops in the embryo. Authorities have no clear understanding of what causes such defects. For a small percentage of cases they suspect the damage may occur if the pregnant mother contracts a viral infection such as German measles. Exposure to radiation, alcohol and certain drugs may also be a factor.

Advances in microsurgery have aided surgeons in repairing heart damage in newborns in many cases. With this technique surgeons work to make a heart repair using very small instruments and observe their work through powerful microscopes.

If an obstruction or defect in the heart has prevented blood from reaching the lungs, the blood fails to absorb enough oxygen. Babies with such heart defects are called "blue babies" because of the coloring their skin develops.

A new drug being developed by The Upjohn Company of Kalamazoo, Mich., has been tested since 1976 and has been found an important aid in treating some rare heart defect cases—including blue babies.

Upjohn expects U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) approval for the drug this year.

The drug, called Prostin VR Pediatric Sterile Solution, is used to keep open a special blood vessel near the heart. Before birth this blood vessel provides blood flow and oxygen from mother to fetus. After birth, the blood vessel—because its work is done—closes naturally. The new medication enables the medical team to keep the vessel open and provide an alternate blood flow until corrective surgery can be performed.

Different Wavelength

With the strike of Thief River Falls teachers beginning yesterday morning, and a number of other districts being affected by walk-outs of faculty members, thoughts and opinions on strikes, negotiations, contracts and settlements are on many people's minds.

If one wonders why there seems to be so much difficulty reaching a contract agreement, consider the numbers of people involved, the state associations seeking to improve their positions of strength, and the difficulty of communicating so that all people affected are fully aware of what is taking place and why circumstances are what they are.

As an example, chairman Don Hill of the Minnesota Education association told us about the commitment of the MEA state office toward the $16,000 minimum salary for first year teachers. That magical number was considered a paramount goal for the MEA organization.

But an article in the Anoka Union recently said teachers had rejected a board offer of a 1981-82 starting salary of $14,550 and a 1982-83 starting salary of $16,200 — a combined increase on the average of $5,700 or 27.9 per cent.

Why was the offer turned down? Walt Munsterman, negotiator for the Anoka-Hennepin Education association, explained: "All the money in the district's offer is at the bottom. There is very little for the career teachers." He said teachers were encouraged by the district's movement for beginning teachers, but felt "that same attitude should also apply for the veteran teachers."

"The district's proposal," stated negotiator Paul Rogne of the AHEA, "will drive out career teachers. The district's proposal entices people into the district, then shuts them off."

Who has lost contact with whom? Hill would agree that experienced teachers should be rewarded for their experience and longevity, but he believes the base must be established first. He forgets that the experienced teacher wants those increments right now, not at the next contract or the one after that. Should the district teacher be subservient to the MEA goal? Or should he or she scratch for all he or she can get wherever that position falls on the salary schedule?

If people in the same organization are on different wavelengths, no wonder it is hard to reach agreement between boards and teachers. It would be easy for the teachers to settle by taking what the board offers. It would be easy for the board to settle by granting what the teachers ask. If money was not a problem — either earning it or paying it — settlement would probably be accomplished in a very short time.

Tenure: Help or Hindrance?

Following editorial is from the Litchfield Indepdendent Review:

Pick up a weekly newspaper in just about any community across the state of Minnesota these autumn days, and you'll almost certainly find a front page story relative to the teacher's salary situation.

Teachers at nearby Paynesville are already on strike, and work stoppages by teachers could be widespread across the state as we move into October.

Negotiating faculty salaries is almost always an unpleasant business in smaller communities.

The old mechanical phrases about teachers working "only nine months of the year" are always hauled out by those who think salary demands are too high.

And that ancient aphorism that "those who can do, and those who can't teach" pops up.

And then there's that old standby that "when teachers' salaries go up, the poor teachers get the raises just as do the good teachers."

I don't know how many times I've heard people say they don't begrudge a good salary to a good teacher but they hate paying those who are below average.

On that latter point there's some concrete action that could be taken to remedy that complaint.

How about easing, or maybe completely tossing out this idea of teacher tenure.

Isn't it possible that this time-honored tradition in education has become something of an anachronism in our modern times and detracts from, rather than promotes effective education?

Even this suggestion would probably bring howels of protest from some teacher organizations, but I think this tenure idea should get some very careful scrutiny.

From my experience in being around school boards for a quarter century or so, I'm convinved the good teachers would have absolutely nothing to fear with abolition of tenure.

The board idea behind tenure, as I understand it, is to protect individual teachers from situations where a person with a particular grudge against an individual teacher could get on a school board and work to have this person discharged.

That's possible, and I'm sure it has happened, but it isn't at all common in our modern day.

There are usually five or six people on a school board. It isn't likely that all would be swayed by one member with an axe to grind.

What teachers would be doing by giving up tenure, or at least the rigid restrictions of tenure as it exists today, would be giving up some job security for a chance to make more money, and that's a pretty good trade-off.

There's no doubt that there's quite a few teachers on the Litchfield school system faculty today who, by virtue of their training, skills and just plain dedication to their jobs, are worth considerably more money than they are getting.

On the reverse side of the coin, only those most blind to reality would reject that notion that some teachers are indeed not deserving of anything more than an average salary.

Under present laws it is extremely difficult-well nigh impossible- in fact, to discharge a teacher for anything less than flagrant incompetence.

The procedures is so complicated, and generally gets so unpleasant, that most school boards put up with mediocrity and the image of the entire teaching profession is tarnished.

But if school districts are expected to pay wages at the levels of industry and business — and I think thev should be — school board members should have some of the prerequisites of those who run factories and businesses and that includes the right to discharge upon reasonable grounds, one of which is plain and simple unproductivity.

Public education appears to be in difficulty not only in Minnesota but all across the nation.

Perhaps some new approaches in education are necessary to preserve our school systems as most of us know them.

Overhauling the regulations pertaining to tenure just might be a sensible step toward making this usually difficult business of setting teaching salaries a bit easier and a bit more realistic too.

The Basic Problem

According to the International Federation of Agricultural Producers, the number one problem in farming today — from Denmark to Argentina and North America to New Zealand — is access to capital and financing agricultural borrowing.

These difficulties have little or nothing to do with the farmer's competence to farm, but with economic conditions over which he, and the farming community as a whole, have no control.

The average age of farmers is already higher than in any other sector of business. The dynamic development of world agriculture calls for young people to take over. Yet far from being attracted to farming, young people are being driven away by the prospect of a lifetime of debt.

Amount of capital required to set up in agriculture, and the interest payments on borrowed capital, cannot possibly be financed from current farm income at today's costs and prices.

While industry can raise capital through share issues and thus spread their risk, the burden of financing in farming is heavily concentrated on the farm family alone.

Borrowed Nonsense:

The religion teacher was telling her class several stories about the life of Jesus and the children seemed responsive, eager to comment. A new member of the class raised his hand after one of the stories and enthusiastically recalled, "We had a Jesus a lot like that back home in Pennsylvania!"

The big game hunter's wife convinced him that she and her mother should accompany him on his next safari. The first night they awakened to find that "mama" was missing. At last they found her at the edge of camp with a huge lion standing over her. "What are we going to do?" the horrified wife asked. "Not a thing," the hunter replied. "That lion got himself into that fix — let him get himself out of it."

Men are creatures who can wait all day for a fish to bite but can't wait 10 minutes for their wives to dress.

The world's highest arson rate is in the U.S. where 25% of all fires are intentionally started.

Fire experts estimate that more then 600,000 fires per year are the work of arsonists.

More than half of all arsonists arrested during the 1970s were under 18 years old. More than 10% of those were under age 10.

According to Figgie International's "Automatic" Sprinkler Corporation of America, less than 1% of all arsonists are convicted.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q — Are Veterans Administration benefits subject to taxation?

A — Almost all veterans benefits are non-taxable. However, there are two exceptions. One is interest paid on accrued GI insurance dividends left on deposit. The other is death settlement proceeds.

Q — I am a widow of a Korean Conflict veteran who died as a result of a service-connected disability before using his GI home loan entitlement. Am I eligible for this benefit?

A — Yes. If not currently married, widows of veterans of World War II and later periods who died of service-connected causes are eligible for this Veterans Administration benefit.

Q — If I encounter legal difficulties while purchasing a home under the GI home loan benefit, will the Veterans Administration pay or provide for any legal assistance I may need?

A — No. The VA does not pay or provide for any legal assistance a veteran may need to deal with troubles encountered in the purchase or construction of a home.

Q — My husband wants to be buried in Arlington National Cemetery. What should he do?

A — This cemetery is under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Army, and burial is limited to specific categories of military personnel and veterans, except in the case of cremated remains to be placed in the columbarium. Jet Age Begins Flight Of Worldly Changes

by Rita C. Bobowski
Smithsonian News Service

At 4 a.m. Aug. 27, 1939, only a few days before the Nazi invasion of Poland and the beginning of World War II, the first aircraft powered by the jet thrust of a gas turbine engine lifted off the ground at Germany's Marieneche airfield. The plane was the Heinkel He. 178 and its historic flight marked the start of a new era — the jet age.

The small group of men meeting secretly in that predawn darkness more than 42 years ago was witnessing the most important advance in aviation since the 1903 flight of the Wright brothers. Not one of them, however — not test pilot Erich Warsitz, not aircraft designed Ernst Heinkel, not the developer of the revolutionary jet engine, Hans von Ohain — could have guessed at the immense impact of the flight. For, as the recent air controllers strike dramatically demonstrated, jet aviation has changed the very world in which we live — from communications to economics to defense.

Ironically, although it took a major war to produce a major technological achievement, the theory behind today's jet engine has been known for hundreds of years. In 120 B.C., Hero of Alexandria applied the principle of jet propulsion to the design of a machine, called an "aeolipile," to harness the power of steam. Hero's device used jets of steam escaping through two nozzles to spin a hollow sphere, certainly one of the first examples of jet propulsion. By the 12th century, the Chinese had built the first rockets that burned powder to create gases for propulsion. In 1687, Sir Isaac Newton published his three laws of motion. The third law, which stated that "to every action there is always an equal and opposite reaction," describes precisely what occurs in a jet engine as high-velocity gases are expelled from the exhaust.

But the development of the jet engine had to await advances in the physical sciences and in the technology of heat-resistant metals. All these events came together in the years preceding World War II.

The time was ripe for the development of the jet engine, according to Walter J. Boyne, assistant director for resource management and operations at the Smithsonian's National air and space museum in Washington, D.C. "Up until this time, most aircraft were powered by piston engines," says Boyne, a retired Air Force colonel with 5,000 hours flying time. "Here you have the massive weight of pistons slamming back and forth, producing the needed power. A jet engine has a smoothly turning rotor. Mass is reduced, vibration almost eliminated and the result is a happier, more harmonious engine."

During the 1930s, the use of the piston engine had reached its peak. "Piston engines had become maintenance nightmares," Boyne points out, "with their many cylinders and scores of spark plugs. Jet engines came in where pistons left off, providing more power in a more efficient manner."

With the first flight of the Heinkel and the operational use of jet aircraft in combat a few years later, the Germans took the lead in aircraft design. But they were not alone in the race. As early as 1929, a 22-year-old Royal Air Force officer in England, Frank Whittle, conceived the idea of using a gas turbine to produce a propelling jet.

Whittle's patent of the turbojet was granted in 1932 and published widely, but he received little encouragement from the British Air Ministry or from private enterprise. Finally, in 1936, with support from a firm of investment bankers, Whittle began work on the design and development of his concepts. Test flights of the engine in the Gloster E. 28-39 began in 1941, two years after the Heinkel had flown.

"What is facinating," Boyne notes, "is that Whittle and von Ohain were working independently on the same project, yet they were unknown to each other."

Germany again led the way with the world's first operational jet fighter, the Messerschmitt Me 262, on exhibit in the national air and space museum's new jet aviation gallery. When the Me 262 first appeared in combat in April 1944, its sleek looks were as formidable as its performance; it was a fighter of amazing speed and firepower. Fortunately for the Allied forces, the Germans did not provide enough support early on for its development. The war ended before the new jets could be produced in large quanities.

After World War II, most of the work on jet engines and aircraft continued to be applied to military purposes. But as knowledge of the jet's potential increased, aircraft manufacturers began to think in terms of commercial jet airliners. The history-making flight in 1947 of Charles E. "Chuck" Yeager, the first to fly faster than the speed of sound, opened the way for safer and faster aircraft at transonic and supersonic speeds. By early 1952, a civil jet engine had flown. By 1958, the revolutionary Boeing 707 was on the market. Today's Concorde, which entered service in early 1976, flies passengers across the Atlantic in just over four hours, at a cruising speed of 1,350 mph.

The transition from military to commercial jet fleets also brought new problems. Ground equipment to service jet airliners had to be specially designed. Flight and ground crews had to be retrained. Passenger and baggage-handling capabilities had to be expanded because jet airplanes were larger than piston-engined planes and could make more flights and carry more passengers. Pollution, noise and fuel consumption became major concerns.

But the many advantages of jet aviation far outweighed these problems. The lighter weight of the engine provided greater power; cheaper fuel made for more efficient operation; simpler construction and fewer working parts reduced the level of maintenance required.

"Jet travel homogenized the world," Boyne says. "Obvious changes include the areas of world travel, communications and business. Shuttle diplomacy became the latest development in world politics."

What lies ahead in the jet age? Supersonic transports may become truly commonplace, with such planes traveling more than twice the speed of sound. (The speed of sound varies with altitude; at sea level it is 741 mph.) The development of the rocket-powered space shuttle and other reusable craft also may have implications for future travelers.

One of the biggest unknowns is whether governments and corporations will be able to afford what is technologically possible and whether the technologically possible will be acceptable in terms of noise, pollution and fuel consumption.

Whatever the future may hold, there is little uncertainty over what has already been accomplished. "Measured by its achievement of man's fundamental goal, jet aviation has been a great success," Najeeb E. Halaby, former head of Pan American World Airways and president of Halaby International Corp., maintains.

"Militarily, the jet has attacked and defended nations in the lethal cycle of man's suicidal tendencies, but on balance has served more than it has slain," Halaby says. "More benignly, the jet transport has greatly reduced the nonproductive time in getting from here to there, conserving human resources, facilitating production of more goods and services, creating new technologies and jobs, freeing more leisure time, easing universal social contacts and meeting emergency needs. All the while, the risk and price of jet transportation have steadily declined. . . There is unevenness, however, and much left to be done to optimize man's use of the airspace, one of our planet's greatest assets."

Chevy Trucks Rolling Into '82

On the left is Chevrolet's regular light-duty pickup truck powered by the optional new 6.2-liter diesel engine produced by General Motors at the Chevy engine plant in Moraine, Ohio, and in the inside lane is the Division's new size S10 pickup truck—that is smaller than its big brother but larger than Chevy's LUV. The new S10 is available in two wheelbases (108 and 118 inches), two payload ratings (1000 and 1500 pounds), four trim levels, and two gasoline power plants—the base four-cylinder, 1.9-liter, 82-horsepower engine or an optional V6, 2.8-liter, 110-horsepower engine—the only V6 available in the small truck market. The base engine with four-speed manual overdrive transmission has an EPA ratings of 28 city and 39 highway, while the same engine coupled with the optional three-speed automatic transmission is rated at 25 and 34. The 6.2-liter, 130-horsepower diesel—offered in regular pickups, Suburbans, four-wheel-drive Blazers, and Chassis Cabs—is expected to achieve 22 miles-per-gallon in city driving and about 27 highway.

New Surgical Techniques Aid Patients With TGV

by William Hoffman
'U' News Service

Medical science has made great strides in treating infants born with heart defects, but perhaps in no area has progress been greater than in treating patients whose major arteries are transposed.

About one in every hundred infants is born with a heart defect. One in every 10 of them suffers from a cardiovascular malformation called transposition of the great vessels (TVG). University of Minnesota doctors treat 20 to 25 new TGV patients every year, according to James Moller, professor of pediatric cardiology on the Twin Cities campus.

In TGV, the aorta (through which blood travels from the heart to the body) arises from the heart's right ventricle, and the pulmonary artery (through which blood travels from the heart to the lungs) arises from the heart's left ventricle — the exact opposite of normal circulation.

As a result, two independent circulatory systems exist: in one system blood circulates between the heart and the lungs, and in the other it circulates from the heart through the rest of the body, but fails to get oxygen from the lungs. Complete TGV is thus fatal unless another defect allows some mixing of the blood in the two systems.

Only 25 years ago, 90 per cent of children with TVG died before they were six months old, Moller said. Today, that dismal outlook has been reversed: 90 per cent "are active, healthy, and doing well in school. One of our patients has become a champion downhill skier," he said.

A third of the patients with TGV have an opening between the left and right ventricle that permits some oxygenated blood to circulate through the body, Moller said.

In the other two-thirds of the patients, there is communication between the two circulation systems through the ductus arteriosus, a fetal vessel normally connecting the pulmonary artery with the aorta. The ductus usually closes within 48 hours of birth, however, leaving the infant with inadequate circulation, according to Moller.

Doctors must create or maintain an opening between the two circulatory systems so that some oxygenated blood can make its way to the aorta and then to the body. A drug can be administered to newborns that helps to keep the ductus arteriosus open and makes safer a procedure called cardiac catheterization, in which an opening is created between the systems.

In this procedure, a balloon-tipped catheter is inserted into the left atrium, inflated, and then forcefully withdrawn across the atrial septum, which separates the two systems. The action tears the atrial septum and permits blood from the two systems to mix, Moller said.

This is a "temporizing procedure" that maintains adequate circulation and heart function, though the child still has a bluish color from insufficient oxygenation of the blood, Moller said.

When the child is about a year old, surgery is performed in order to establish a normal circulatory pattern, he said. The preferred technique involves sewing a Dacron patch in the atrium to redirect venous blood to the left ventricle and then to the lungs and oxygenated blood to the right ventricle and then into the aorta.

"This operation allows a normal circulatory pattern, and the patient's condition improves remarkably," Moller said, adding that the child is no longer bluish from insufficient oxygen. Surgery forestalls numerous complications, including pulmonary vascular disease, that would develop without it, and the risk is very small, he said.

The operation itself has certain complications, though they are usually not severe.

Because doctors are working in the immediate area of the sino-atrial node — the heart's pacemaker — there is a risk of damaging it and throwing the heartbeat out of rhythm. However, advances in the field of electrophysiology have allowed better understanding of the rhythm disturbances in TGV, Moller said.

Another problem is the capacity of the heart's right ventricle to pump blood through the circulatory system — a task normally done by the more powerful left ventricle. Whether the right ventricle can do the job over a prolonged period remains to be seen, Moller said.

No one knows what causes TGV. It is congenital, but it is not inheritable, Moller said. "We suspect it occurs before the fetus is six weeks old."

The application of new diagnositc, surgical, and treatment techniques has had "a greater effect on the outlook for patients with TGV than perhaps any other cardiac anomaly, and we are still learning," he said.

'U' Pharmacy, Nursing Depts. Get New Home

New ten-story building housing the college of pharmacy and school of nursing is now open on the University of Minnesota Minneapolis campus.

Called unit "F" until an official name is chosen, the $22.9 million concrete block structure contains 108,000 square feet of teaching, research and office space.

Located on the corner of Washington Avenue and Harvard Street, the futuristic-looking building is connected to the rest of the health sciences complex through a system of indoor walkways.

Construction began in November 1979, although planning for the facility began more than a decade earlier. Funds came from a variety of sources, including the state, federal Department of Health and Human Services and donations from professional pharmacy and nursing groups.

"This is a quality facility," said Lawrence C. Weaver, dean of the College of Pharmacy. "Now, for the first time, our faculty is housed together in one place in the health sciences complex" rather than in five buildings throughout the campus.

Unit F is the first facility designed specifically to meet needs of the College of Pharmacy. Since its establishment by the state legislature in 1981, the college has occupied space in buildings constructed for other purposes and then renovated to meet the expanding needs of the pharmacy program. Until relocation to Unit F, the majority of pharmacy laboratories and offices were located in Appleby Hall on the main campus.

College of pharmacy occupies space on all but two floors of the new building. In addition to larger and better-equipped laboratories, Unit F offers a greenhouse on the roof for the growing of plants used in pharmacy courses in medicinal chemistry.

"This is a highly funcational building with phenomenal classroom and research capability," said Ellen T. Fahy, dean of the school of nursing.

After 50 years in Powell Hall, the nursing school began its move into Unit F last January. Like the college of pharmacy, the nursing school outgrew its quarters as the student population increased. Nursing school faculty were previously scattered in three campus buildings.

Majority of nursing space is located on fourth, fifth and sixth floors of Unit F. The 33,260 square feet of space is nearly double that available in Powell and associated buildings.

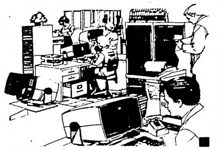
New quarters contain a 20-bed simulated hospital intensive care ward for teaching and two large research suites, one designed for behavioral-environmental studies, and the other for animal-physiological research. Other new features include a conference center and eight fully equipped laboratories.

College of pharmacy and school of nursing also share some common areas, including a 1,000-locker student lounge and a faculty-staff lounge. The building contains an open five-story stairway with a view of a landscaped courtyard.

The October 9 dedication of Unit F came 48 years to the month after dedication ceremonies for Powell Hall in 1933. The old nursing school and dormitory building was razed in September to make room for a new addition to University Hospital's complex.

Powell Hall's giant fireplace mantle and cupola were salvaged, however. The mantle will be placed in the lobby of Unit F's suite of administrative offices, and the cupola will be placed in the courtyard of the new hospital facility when completed in 1985.

The Computers Are Coming



Everything the lay person wants to know about computers is the subject of a new book by Irv Brechner. "The Computers Are Coming", written and also self-published by the author, has gained wide recognition due to the tremendous explosion in the computer industry.

The tongue in cheek "first" book is a basic, easy introduction to computers, written from a fresh, non-technical angle.

With such lively chapter headings as "Try It . . . You'll Like It", "Thanks For The Memories" and "And, on Tonight's Program . . .", this book covers every topic to give a beginner a good understanding. "The Computers Are Coming" is perfect for the average person who knows nothing of computers but wants to.

It's a quick, two hour, easy education by an author who knows computing and who knows how to write well. Computers will play a major part in everyone's lives in the near future. They'll effect everyone from truckers to doctors, from musicians to lawyers. Everyone will need to be "computer literate" to be able to function effectively in our society. This book makes this phenominal change easily understandable.

It's also a great gift for people who want to learn more about personal computing, as most homes will have them in the years to come.

This is Mr Brechner's fourth book, his second which has been self-published. The College Survival Kit was self published in 1977 and sold 20,000 copies, resulting from appearances on the Today Show and many other TV, radio and newspapers and magazines. The Bantam Books edition of the same book currently has 250,000 copies in print.

His other books include The Career Finder and a forthcoming book on Careers in Computing, to be published next fall.

The Computers Are Coming is available from the publisher at $4.95 plus 75¢ handling. Write to: Irv Brechner Enterprises, Box 264-WOB-Dept. D., West Orange, N.J. 07052.

Council Votes On Priorities For Handicapped

All around the state, people are gearing up for the 1982 Legislative session, and the Minnesota state council for the handicapped is no exception.

In its Septmeber 18 meeting, the council voted unanimously on four priorities for legislative action this year. These priorities will guide the council in its exploration of specific bills to be introduced. The council plans not only to initiate bills, but also to be a strong supporter of other legislation it feels will achieve its goals. Priorites are as follows:

(1.) Work disincentives. This may include pursuing legislation that would not only remove work disincentives but would expand the employemnt base so that more jobs are available to persons with disabilities.

(2.) Independent living centers funding. Maintaining funding is the minimum goal, with the exploration of expanding the funding to the centers as a high priority.

(3.) Transportation. The council will respond immediately to changes occuring in the area of transportation, not waiting for the start of the legislative session for work to begin. This is a continuation of the council's active involvement in the development of transportation options for persons with disabilites.

(4.) Crimes. Given the recent growing concern about crimes against elderly and disabled persons, the council is actively exploring possible legislative measures to control this problem.

Specific legislation which will be introduced this session is being explored by the council's legislative committee, chaired by Marilyn Bothun, council member from Region 10. In general, the council is strongly supportive of legislation that would increase a disabled person's ability to live as independently as possible and all legislative action will reflect this philosophy.

Safety Belts Not Used By Most Drivers

Recent national studies show seat belt use by just 11 per cent of U.S. drivers. Only 12 per cent of Minnesota drivers and adult passengers were seen wearing seat belts during a recent survey. The one per cent difference is not considered significant.

Department of Public Safety crew observed a total of 2,243 vehicles at 14 sites in 10 communites from July 6-17. Roads were clear and dry and temperatures ranges from 65 to 90 degrees.

Only 272 of the drivers observed bothered to use any safety restraints. Lap belts were worn by 39, another 228 used lap and shoulder belt restraints and five were in vehicles with passive restraint systems. The vast majority, 1,786, drove unrestrained.

Among 1,065 adult passengers observed, 101 were restrained, 21 had lap belts, 77 wore shoulder and lap safety restraints and three were in cars with passive restraint systems. The other 968 rode unrestrained.

Of 104 infants (age one and under) observed by teams, only 46 were properly using infant restraints. Some vehicles were observed with restraints but children not riding in them.

Among 352 young children (age two to four) observed, 52 were properly secured in a child restraint. Among 489 older children (age five to 10), only 16 were seen wearing lap belts.

Observation sites included I-94 rest stops in the Fergus Falls area; three malls in East Grand Forks; Brainerd's Paul Bunyan amusement park; Mill Hill Mall in Duluth; I-35 rest stop at Rush City; Apache Mall in Rochester; Maplewood, Rosedale and Southdale Malls in the Twin Cities and two shopping malls at Mankato.

cancer answers

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

I live on a farm in North Dakota and for several years I have used chewing tobacco. Recently my wife told me I can get some kind of mouth cancer from it. Would it help if I switched to a pipe?

D.B.

Dear D.B.:

No, pipe smoking is just as bad as chewing tobacco. There are few cancers that have such definite causes as cancer of the mouth. One of those causes is tobacco.

Besides tobacco, however, there are several other possible causes of oral cancer. These include chronic irritation, prolonged heavy use of alcohol, and poor dental care. The first sign of oral cancer is a small painless sore (or ulcer) that doesn't go away. If you notice a persistent sore, see your physician or dentist promptly.

As part of each routine dental examination, your dentist or dental hygienist will examine your mouth for signs of cancer. Regular dental care is particularly important for people who use any form of tobacco.

Dear Cancer Answers:

My mother had cancer surgery recently, and she will be starting chemotherapy soon. She's worried about losing her hair. Does everyone who has chemotherapy lose their hair? Is there anything she can do to protect her hair?

Mrs. J.M.

Dear Mrs. J.M.:

There are many different types of drugs and dosages used in chemotherapy for different types of cancer. Some, but not all, of them can cause hair loss. Individual patients also react differently to treatment, so that it's difficult to predict which side effects will affect which patients. It also is important to remember that all side effects of chemotherapy, including loss of hair, are temporary.

Your mother should discuss her concerns with her doctor before her treatment begins. If the doctor thinks it is likely that she will lose some of her hair, she should consider buying a wig. It's a good idea to shop for a wig before hair loss begins because it will be easier to match closely her natural length, style and color. Having the wig early also will insure that she is prepared if she loses her hair quickly.

There are a number of precautions your mother can take to help minimize damage to her hair. She should:

—not use hair coloring or have a permanent immediately before or during treatment;

—use gentle hair products, like baby shampoo;

—use a satin-covered pillowcase;

—shampoo less frequently;

—consider cutting hair to reduce its weight;

—brush or comb gently (try a baby hairbrush);

—avoid heated rollers and blow dryers;

—choose a soft, loose hair style free of braids, combs, pins, barrettes, or rubber bands.

These suggestions and others are contained in a booklet titled, Hair Care: Helpful Hints for Chemotherapy Patients. For a free copy, call or write the Cancer Information Service. The toll-free number in Minnesota is 1-800-582-5262, and in North Dakota and South Dakota it is 1-800-328-5188. The mailing address is 2750 Park Avenue, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55407.

Dear Cancer Answers:

What are the seven warning signals of cancer?

Miss M.W.

Dear Miss M.W.:

The seven warning signals of cancer can be easily remembered by the word CAUTION: each letter stands for one of the possible signals of cancer.

1. Change in bowel or bladder habits;
2. A sore that does not heal normally;
3. Unusual bleeding or discharge;
4. Thickening or lump in the breast or elsewhere;
5. Indigestions or difficulty in swallowing;
6. Obvious change in a wart or mole;
7. Nagging cough or hoarseness.

These seven signs, listed by the American Cancer Society, are based on the experiences of many physicians. They do not always mean cancer is present, but they should never be ignored. Remember, the first warning signs of cancer are usually painless.

If you develop any of these symptoms and it lasts for more than two weeks, see your doctor. Should you discover blood in your urine, for example or vaginal bleeding between periods, consult him or her immediately. Your doctor will then determine what diagnostic tests should be done.

Even in the absence of symptoms, it is extremely important to have complete physical examinations at regular intervals. Many times a doctor can discover cancer in its earliest stages, before any warning signs are apparent. For example, a rectal examination, especially important for men and women over 40, enables the diagnosis of many bowel tumors while they are still curable.

Dear Cancer Answers:

A friend of mine had been diagnosed with chronic lymphocytic leukemia. The disease was discovered by accident when she was having some blood tests. After four months she's doing okay, even though her white count is much too high. I don't understand why she isn't being treated for this. I thought cancer was supposed to be curable when found and treated early.

Barb

Dear Barb:

Although many cancers are most successfully managed when they are caught and treated early, the nature of chronic lymphocytic leukemia is a bit different. It affects the blood and cannot be treated surgically. This disease usually occurs in older people and progresses slowly.

When chronic leukemia is accidently discovered and there are no symptoms, as in your friend's case, it may be left untreated. Then the patient is simply examined at regular intervals.

Many of these patients continue to do well for many months or years. People who have chronic lymphocytic leukemia do not require treatment unless or until the disease progresses and they begin to have symptoms. Chemotherapy or radiation therapy may then be used to treat it.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I am 17-years-old and in good health. Lately, though, I've been having pain that feels like menstrual cramps between periods. Should I see a doctor? I'm worried that I may have cancer of the ovaries.

Mary J.

Dear Mary J.:

It would be extremely rare for someone your age to have ovarian cancer. Generally, people don't develop this kind of cancer until they are between the ages of 40 and 59. In the teenage woman, mid-cycle pain or discomfort is usually due to ovulation. Most of the time the sensation will occur on only one side rather than both sides. However, you should see a doctor to discuss your pain. Your doctor can examine you and determine what the causes may be.

Show Off Your Dog's Personality In Pictures You'll Prize

There are two basic ways to picture your dog, or other pet. You can make a simple snapshot, or you can take a picture that reveals something of the pet's personality. For the first, you aim and shoot. For the second, you plan ahead to produce the effect you want.

A Kodak Ektralite camera, with its built-in electronic flash and its ability to stop action, is an excellent choice for both types of picture taking. It's ready for all of those wonderful picture opportunities your dog will create spontaneously. (Crawling into the kids' wading pool or trying to make friends with a kitten are only starters.) At the same time, the camera's operating simplicity allows you to concentrate on the elements of your picture when you are deliberately posing the dog.

Before you even reach for your camera to make a posed, portrait shot, take a few minutes with a brush and groom him so he'll look his best. Remember the details of grooming show up when you stay in close enough to show expression.

In addition to staying close, you should, for best results, stay level. Shooting down at the dog might produce an interesting shot once in a while, but in general the results will be better if you, and your camera, get down so that you can aim straight at him. (Or, if he's big enough, up at him — the sky makes a great background.)

Backgrounds are important, too, as every photographer knows. The general rule about keeping them uncluttered still applies, but in pet photography there is also the matter of selecting one that will contrast with the dog and show him off.

The help of an assistant to provide an intriguing noise (a rattle in a box or crinkling paper, perhaps) can help to give the dog an alert, interested look. The helper can also, by talking to the dog or offering a toy or bit of food, or by just being there, keep the dog where you want him.

Protecting your dollar!

By
Warren Spannaus
Attorney General
State of Minnesota

Have you ever received unordered merchandise through the mail and wondered what to do with it?

If you have, you're not alone. It is something that happens to most of us at one time or another. But annoyance occasionally becomes something else when recipients who have chosen not to spend the time and money returning an unsolicited item are then contacted by the sender who tries to convince them that they must pay for the merchandise, whether they want it or not.

The fact is, no one is legally obligated to pay for merchandise that has not been ordered.

Minnesota and federal laws protect you and your dollar against these sales practices. If you are sent goods which you have not ordered, and which you have not agreed to pay for, state law allows you simply to refuse to accept delivery. Furthermore, if you prefer, you may treat the goods as a gift and use them in any way you choose. You are under no obligation to pay for them.

Some businesses employ what are called "negative option" sales plans: the merchandise will be mailed to a customer unless the company is notified in writing that the customer does not want the goods.

Book and record clubs are frequent users of these negative option plans. Each month, such a club will notify its members that a particular book or record will be sent to them. Unless they promptly notify the company in wrlring that they do not want the merchandise, it will be delivered to them — with a bill.

These plans are enforceable only if they comply with certain requirements prescribed by law. They are definitely not enforceable if you have not agreed to them in advance.

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has established rules by which negative option sales must abide. Such companies must:

1. Disclose the conditions of the negative option plan in its promotional materials;
2. Provide a form on which the buyer can indicate that he or she does not want to receive specific merchandise; and
3. Allow the buyer ten days to make a decision and return the form.

Some negative option plans can be converted into "positive option" plans. Under a positive option plan, the customer receives only merchandise which he or she has specifically ordered. The customer is not obligated simply because he or she has failed to return a card. If you are enrolled in a negative option plan, you may want to inquire whether the plan can be converted into a positive option plan. It should be understood, however, that, ordinarily the company is under no legal obligation to make this conversion. It may, however, agree to do so voluntarily.

If you have any questions about this or any other consumer matter, please contact the Office of the Attorney General, Consumer Division, 117 University Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota 55155.

If you're planning a vacation, beware of those vacation packages which look too good to be true—they're probably just that!

Many Minnesotans have recently been contacted by companies promoting vacation certificate packages which offer a Las Vegas, California, or Florida vacation at a cost ranging from $60.00 to $130.00. These vacation packages may appear to include more benefits than they actually provide. The trips have been offered to Minnesotans through "mail grams," display booths at local trade shows, telephone calls, and direct mail.

Called "vacation certificate packages," they generally promise hotel accommodations for several days and nights, meals, coupons for special shows and attractions, and a casino package. The casino package may include coupons for food, drinks, slot machine tokens, and "free plays" at the gambling tables. Transportation, phone calls, and "other incidental expenses" are typically not included in the vacation package.

Unfortunately, the promoters seldom inform consumers that the vacation packages are often subject to restrictions on a daily and hourly basis. Most of the benefits such as meals, gambling money, and shows are provided in the form of coupons. The coupons may be valid only at out-of-the-way locations and only during specific hours of the day. Often, the coupons require the consumer to "buy one" in order to get one free. Thus, a consumer who receives a coupon package valued at $500.00 may be required to spend $500.00 to use the coupons. Some packages restrict the time of the year or days of the week when hotel reservations can be made.

The promoters often request that payment be made with a Visa or Master-card charge. Giving Mastercard numbers to unknown persons over the telephone may result in future problems with unauthorized charges.

We would advise consumers to take the following steps before purchasing a vacation certificate package:

— Contact the Better Business Bureau in the city where the promoting company is located and request a report on the company offering the promotion.

— Contact the Better Business Bureau in the city where the vacation is being offered. This city may also have a report on the satisfactory or unsatisfactory rating of the company promoting the certificates.

— Contact the Chamber of Commerce in the city in which you plan to vacation. Often, the Chamber of Commerce can provide you with the same coupons which are offered in the vacation certificate package.

— Comparison shop to be sure that the vacation package is a good buy. Many times a local travel agency will provide a similar package which includes air fare, hotel accommodations, and coupons similar to those offered by vacation certificate programs. You can assure yourself that the travel agent is reliable and you may arrange a vacation package at a lower cost.

Comparison shopping is the best way to determine whether the vacation certificate package is actually a good deal.

If you have any questions about this, or any other consumer matter, please write to the Attorney General's Office, Consumer Division, 2nd Floor, 117 University Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota 55155.

PIZZA...HALLOWEEN STYLE

Get into the spirit of Halloween with "Jack-O-Pizza," a special dish guaranteed to make little ghosts and goblins smile with delight. It has all the appeal of traditional pizza, but with a delicious twist. A crust of cooked egg noodles is topped with a savory meat sauce, seasoned perfectly with onion-mushroom soup mix. When decorated as a happy face this pizza will shout "Happy Halloween!"

JACK-O-PIZZA

8 ounces packaged fine egg noodles
3/4 pound ground beef
1 can (16 oz.) tomato puree
1 envelope Lipton® Onion-Mushroom Soup Mix
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
3 eggs, beaten
1 package (8 oz.) mozzarella cheese, shredded
Green pepper garnishes

Preheat oven to 350°.

Cook noodles according to package directions; drain. Reserve 1/2 cup for garnish.

Meanwhile, in medium skillet, brown ground beef; drain. Stir in tomato puree, onion-mushroom soup mix, oregano and garlic powder. Simmer covered, stirring occasionally, 20 minutes.

In large bowl, combine noodles, eggs and 2 cups cheese. Press mixture evenly into greased 12-inch pizza pan. Bake 20 minutes or until lightly browned.

Spoon sauce mixture onto crust. Garnish pizza to form "face" as follows: use remaining cheese and green pepper pieces for eyes, mouth and nose, and reserved noodles for hair. Bake an additional 10 minutes or until heated through. Makes about 8 servings.

NW Hospital Observes Physical Therapy Week

LISA BOUTAIN, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rick Boutain, Thief River Falls, works with registered physical therapist, Charlie Bigelow on strengthening weak neck muscles during a therapy treatment session at Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls. Lisa, a victim of cerebral palsy, lacks head control and voluntary control of her arms and legs. Bigelow works with Lisa three days a week, one and one-half hours each day on the exercises, while Lisa's parents as well as an aide, Sally Erickson, work with the child at home.

by Bonnie Wentzel
Times Reporter

'A dream' is how Candi DuChamp, 23, describes an unfortunate experience that caused her to lose her speech, ability to walk and transfer herself, impair her eyesight, and cause extensive paralysis to her right side.

Candi's condition, a type of stroke (intracranial arterial venous malformation) more commonly referred to as a brain hemorrhage, hospitalized her June 11 of this year at United Hospital in Grand Forks where she remained in the intensive care unit until July 23. July 30, when Candi was transferred to the medical center rehabilitation hospital in Grand Forks, was when she began what she believes to be a dream.

Candi remained in a comatose state for five weeks and then began responding to those around her before entering her 'dream', according to her mother, "Bunny" DuChamp of Plummer.

Since her arrival at Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls a month ago, Candi has substantially regained her ability to speak, she walks with a cane and assistance from therapists and she is relearning many of the functional abilities the stroke had taken from her, including sitting up, balancing, climbing stairs and kneeling.

Candi, along with other rehabilitation, chronic and nursing care patients at the hospital will exemplify the importance of physical therapy week noted at the hospital October 18-24.

Work in the physical therapy department at the hospital involves a coordinated effort between therapists and other staff members including dieticians, patient educators, chaplains, nurses and social workers, along with community agencies and families. Physical therapists coordinate with public health nurses and home health aides to follow-up patients who are going home. Family members are instructed to assist in the continued treatment of patients going home, particularly stroke patients, such as Candi.

Patients remaining long-term rehabilitative care, like Candi, and acute care patients are not the only persons physical therapists work with. Others referred to the department are outpatients (burn victims, persons with back, neck or hand injuries, paraplegics, post-operative orthopedic patients, and

Letter Gives Board Position On Its Offer

A letter being sent out by the Thief River Falls board of education to parents and taxpayers in School District 564 lists the financial condition of the district and a salary comparison with the settlement average for the first 80 school districts in the state to reach agreement with their teachers.

It notes that the average increase offered by the board of $4,500 over the two-year contract would bring the average salary and benefits for an individual teacher in the local school system to $20,800 for this year and $23,000 for next year.

With an audited fund balance of $833,000 as of July 1, 1981, the raise offered would result in a deficit of approximately $300,000 by the end of next year, the letter states.

Cuts in programs and services would be necessary, the letter notes, and the demands made by the TRFEA would increase the size of the deficit and the cuts involved.

Compared with the first 80 settlements in the state, the board's offer is $1,105 higher at the BA starting level this year, $1,375 higher at the BA top level, $1,867 higher at the MA starting level and $1,098 higher at the MA degree top.

For next year the board offer is $902 higher at the BA starting level, $1,331 higher at the BA top, $1,739 higher at the MA starting level and $910 higher at the MA top.

Tax Increment Topic Tonight At Joint Meet

A joint meeting of the Thief River Falls city council and planning commission will be held at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the city auditorium. Special guest will be Mike Auger of the Minnesota department of energy, planning and economic development, who will discuss tax increment and other avenues of financing.

Although the city of Thief River Falls has never utilized tax increment financing, according to city officials, it has been employed by other communities in the state to pursue redevelopment. Recent changes in the state statute governing such financing may make it more feasible to use.

City planner Jack Quinlivan said, "I would urge those who can to attend. I believe it will be interesting and informative."

Welfare Board Meets Tuesday

Pennington county welfare board will meet Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the welfare office at the county courthouse in Thief River Falls.

WALKING is one of several activities Candi DuChamp, 23, must relearn following a brian hemmorhage which caused her to lose her speech, ability to walk and transfer herself, impaired her eyesight and caused extensive paralysis to her right side. Since returning to Thief River Falls about a month ago, Candi has regained her ability to speak, walks with a cane and assistance, and is regaining many functional abilities such as balancing, kneeling and climbing stairs. Assisting her above is Steve Young, chief physical therapist at Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls.

Hearing Tues. On Highway 59

Minnesota department of transportation will be conducting a public hearing on October 20 to discuss the location and design features of improvements to highway 59 between First street and C.S.A.H. 62 in Thief River Falls. Hearing will be sponsored by the city of Thief River Falls and begin at 7 p.m. at the Thief River Falls city auditorium.

The proposed project will involve construction of traffic signals at First street, widening of the highway 59 roadway to construct right and left turn lanes with concrete and painted medians, and construction of frontage roads. The design concept calls for the closure of most business entrances to highway 59, replacing them with access to frontage roads having access to highway 59 at First street, Sherwood avenue, Greenwood avenue and C.S.A.H. 62.

Improvements to be discussed at this public hearing have been developed in response to requests from the Thief River Falls city council. City officials have been included in discussions of the project since June of 1979 and two separate resolutions have been passed by the city council supporting improvements to this section.

The general public is invited to present testimony at the public hearing regarding this project or submit written testimony postmarked no later than October 30, 1981, to R.E. Wolfe, District Engineer, Attn. Steve Baker, Mn-DOT, Box 727, Bemidji, Minnesota 56601.

In addition to location and design features, the items to be discussed include social,

DRIVEWAY APPROACH to the Harlow Johnson farmyard offers this view of the well-clipped lawn, trimmed shrubbery and modern home. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and their family were selected as winners for 1981 in the farm beautification contest conducted by the Pennington soil and water conservation district. The Johnsons maintain about three acres of mowed area around the farmstead and use three mowers in keeping the area in trim. They built the house in the fall of 1969 and took occupancy in the spring of 1970.

Johnson Family Earns Beautification Award

Family activity which has resulted in the maintenance of about three acres of mowed and trimmed farmstead has earned the Harlow Johnson family of rural Thief River Falls designation as the farm beautification award winner for 1981 by the Pennington soil and water conservation district.

Johnson bought the farm located just south of the Thief River Falls regional airport in 1962. He married Gloria Aanerud of the Lancaster area in 1963 and they moved into the existing house on the 160-acre farm. Johnson, who had previously farmed with his brother Grant east of St. Hilaire, sold his interest in that operation to buy the quarter section here in 1962. Their father, Axel T. Johnson, died in 1969.

Since then the farm has been expanded to 920 acres, nearly all of which is open for farming. With the able assistance of Allan Wilson, who has been the Johnson's valued "hired man" for the past 10 years, the family operates all but 80 acres of the farm. Those 80 acres are rented to another farmer. All of the farm is located in Rocksbury and River Falls townships.

Impressive in addition to the clipped lawn and trimmed shrubbery are the well-maintained buildings on the

Teachers Back On Strike Here

Thief River Falls teachers are back on the picket lines again today following a four-day break including the weekend and the non-duty days Thursday and Friday for the Minnesota Education association convention. The strike by teachers against School District 564 began last Tuesday.

The board of education will be meeting in general session tonight and one of the agenda items is negotiations with the Thief River Falls Education association (TRFEA). The two groups have not met since a mediation session was held Thursday, October 8.

Tonight's meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the school district service center board room. Other items on the agenda include discussion of curtailing of activities; reduction of general non-certified staff including bus drivers, cooks, aides and swimming pool personnel; leave requests for Don Hejlik, Bev Olson, Ray Olson and Mary Almquist; resignation of Dave Lysaker as AVTI sales and marketing instructor; discussion on employment and the RIC bill; and a resolution on return to work of certified staff.

Another mediation session has been scheduled for Monday, October 26, and a decision will likely be made by the board tonight if it intends to meet with the TRFEA representatives prior to that scheduled session. Mike Lehrer, president of the TRFEA and spokesman for the organization, said that the teachers are prepared at any time to offer a written counter-proposal to the last offer made by the board in mediation. At that time the last official positions had the board offering a two-year average increase of $4,500 per teacher and the TRFEA requesting an average of $5,600.

In unofficial discussion, Lehrer said, the teachers offered to "split the difference" with the board between the last two positions. The TRFEA has been reluctant to submit the matter to binding arbitration by a third party, however, feeling that the last two arbitration settlements have been to the teacher's disadvantage. He did not indicate what the association is prepared to request at the next meeting.

Picketing during the first two days of the strike was orderly and there were no serious incidents, according to the Thief River Falls police department. Sometime between 9 p.m. Wednesday and 8 a.m. Thursday, however, a person or persons as yet unknown reportedly smeared manure on the windows of the TRFEA crisis headquarters on Main avenue.

Police chief Ken Froschheiser said he had held a joint meeting last Tuesday, the first day of the strike, with officials from both sides, explaining the department's policy on labor disputes and how complaints are handled. He said the department's main concern is the protection of lives and property. At this time there has been no extra patrol, he said, and he commended participants and public for being orderly and law-abiding.

Attending the meeting were Supt. Robert Block, board member Merle Carlson, board attorney John Novacek, TRFEA members Cal Lindberg, Don Hejlik and Vern Isaacson and county attorney David Olin. Laws relating to strikes were summarized by Olin.

By mutual agreement because postmen and United

SPOKESMAN for the Thief River Falls Education association (TRFEA) is Mike Lehrer, instrumental music instructor at Franklin middle school and chairman of the association. Lehrer said the organization is prepared to present a proposal in writing to the Thief River Falls board of education whenever a negotiating session between the two groups can be arranged. The board of education will discuss negotiations at its meeting tonight. The TRFEA has been on strike since last Tuesday.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Lee Ralph are at home in Oklee, following an exchange of marriage vows at the Ebenezer Lutheran church in Oklee, and a wedding trip to the Lake of the Woods area.

The bride, the former Sherry Lynn Knutson, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Knutson, Sr., of Oklee. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ralph, also of Oklee.

Rev. Tim Miller officiated at the double ring ceremony. Music was provided by Alice Skreland, pianist. Margaret Knutson, sister-in-law of the bride, was soloist.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her parents, was attired in an old-fashioned Victorian lace over bridal satin gown, which she had designed and made. The princess styled gown was fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, chapel-length train and full sleeves of illusion and Victorian lace gathered at the wrist into a lace band. Her veil of nylon tulle, edged with lace, was attached to a pearl headpiece. She carried a bouquet of roses, carnations, daisies and babies' breath.

Matron of honor was Wanda Christianson, a friend of the couple. Bridesmatrons were Margaret Knutson and Tami Knutson, sisters-in-law of the bride. They wore peasant styled cotton gowns of robin-egg blue and white print, featuring gathered floor-length skirts with a deep ruffled flounce edged with lace. Their bouquets were of roses, daisies, carnations and babies' breath.

Wearing a similar gown and carrying a single blue carnation was the flower girl, Shauna Knutson, a niece of the bride.

Attending the groom as best man was Joe Longtin, a friend of the couple. Groomsmen were Kevin Roisland and Kevin Bergeron, friends of the groom. Like the groom, they wore white tuxedos and blue carnation boutonnieres.

Ushers were Danny Joppru, a cousin of the bride, and Dean Thompson, friend of the couple.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Knutson wore a green floor-length gown topped by a coordinating sheer diamond print cape. The mother of the groom was attired in a white dress with a blue jacket. Their corsages were of red roses and blue and white carnations.

Cindy Janssen and LeAnn Person, friends of the bride, were personal attendants.

At the reception that followed, Karen Knutson, sister of the bride, and Adelma Roberts, a cousin of the bride, presided at the guest book. Serving at the punch bowl were Cindy Christianson and Steve Kvasager, friends of the couple. Gift bearers were Gerald Knutson, a brother of the bride, and Tammy Geiger, a cousin.

The wedding cake, made by the groom's mother, was cut and served by Mrs. Sander Joppru, and Mrs. Arnold Geiger, aunts of the bride. Miss Patti Robert, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Ted Hamm, a friend, poured coffee.

Waitresses were Debbie Rindahl, Wendy Hanson, Diane Tougas and Brenda Olson. Mrs. Joyce Austad made the flowers for the wedding and Mrs. Margaret Peterson was the photographer.

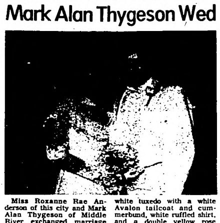
Roxanne Rae Anderson - Mark Alan Thygeson Wed



Miss Roxanne Rae Anderson of this city and Mark Alan Thygeson of Middle River exchanged marriage vows recently at Zion Lutheran church, Thief River Falls.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Anderson of Anchorage, Alaska, and formerly of this city. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. DuWayn Thygeson of Middle River.

Rev. Richard Larson officiated at the double ring ceremony, before an altar centered with an arrangement of yellow and mint green roses and carnations. On either side, forming a background for the wedding party, were 15 branch candelabra. Marking the pews were hurricane candelabra with greenery and yellow ribbon, corresponding to the candelabra in front of the church.

Jerry Joringdal served as organist. He played the traditional wedding march as the bride was escorted to the altar by her father. During the ceremony, Tom Eckstein, a cousin of the bride, sang "Colour My World," "Wedding Song," and "Always and Forever." Following the lighting of the unity candle, the couple proceeded down the ailse and presented their mothers with fresh yellow roses.

The bride was attired in a white crystal organza gown with a chapel-length train appliqued with Chantilly lace collar and long, fitted sleeves with lace trim. A wide ruffle of Chantilly lace edged the sheer yoke complemented by Schiffli lace motif with seed pearls. The skirt, fashioned with a pleated front panel, was edged with double rows of ruffled lace and organza. To complete her attire, she wore a veil attached to a white picture hat trimmed with Schiffli lace and seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of yellow and mint green Sweetheart roses, daisies and babies' breath, with cascading lilies of the valley and ribbon streamers in mint green, yellow and white. Her only jewelry was a diamond centered gold cross necklace, a gift from her grandmother.

Gaylene Lamb of Anchorage, Alaska attended her sister as matron of honor. Other attendants were Stephanie Anderson, sister-in-law of the bride; Jerri Larson and Kris Larson, cousins of the bride; and Laurie Semrud, a friend of the bride. Serving as flower girl was Beth Happersett of this city, a friend of the bride. All wore floor-length gowns of lemon yellow organza featuring scoop necklines and sheer capelet sleeves. Creating back interest was the deeply flounced skirt, picked-up to form a ruffled bustle. Their headpieces were lemon yellow wide-brimmed mesh hats accented with a bow and streamers of polyester knit. The attendants carried bouquets of yellow rosebuds and mint green full-blown roses, accented with daisies, babies' breath, greenery and ribbon streamers. Similar flowers filled the white woven basket carried by the flower girl.

The rings were carried by Monty Thygeson, a brother of the groom. Like the men of the wedding party, he wore a Lord West walnut brown tuxedo with a brown bow tie, yellow ruffled shirt and a yellow rose boutonniere.

The groom was attired in a white tuxedo with a white Avalon tailcoat and cummerbund, white ruffled shirt, and a double yellow rose boutonniere.

The groom's brother, Mike Thygeson, Middle River was best man. Bryan Thygeson, a brother of the groom; Sid Anderson, a brother of the bride, Chuck Larson, and Tony Burda, friends of the groom, were groomsmen. The ushers were Randy Holmgreen and Steve Czek, cousins of the groom.

The mother of the bride wore a sleeveless, empire fashioned gown of lustrous polyester knit styled with a pleated skirt, banded neckline and an attached capelet of sheer polyester chiffon. The groom's mother was attired in mint green gown, similarly styled, only with a V-neckline. Their corsages were of yellow roses, babies' breath and greenery. Their flowers, like all the flowers at the wedding, were made by the bride's mother.

Honor guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Eckstein, grandparents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Czeh and Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Thygeson, grandparents of the groom. Following the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served at the church with Ida Brouse catering. Host and hostess were LeRoy and Carol Larson and Dennis Anderson, godparents of the bride. Cathy Chalmers registered the guests as Connie Czeh and Ron Forbister served the punch.

Highlighting the serving table was a three-tiered chocolate and white wedding cake, iced in white and decorated with yellow roses with mint green accents. Between the tall Roman pillars which separated the bottom tiers was a lighted, flowing-water fountain. Topping the cake were wedding bells, accented with tulle and filigreed arches. At the base were smaller tiered cakes connected by stairways with miniature members of the wedding party on the steps. The cake was baked and decorated by Margaret Rupprecht, and was cut and served by Janice Eckstein, aunt of the bride, and Louise Anderson, aunt of the groom. The Kransekaka, the traditional Scandinavian wedding cake surrounded by yellow sugar bells, was also served to the guests.

Pouring coffee were Darlene Eckstein and Betty Holmgren, aunts of the couple. Brenda Eckstein and Tammy Eckstein served as waitresses and Kathy Hout and Nancy Eckstein arranged the gifts. All are cousins of the bride.

A wedding dance at the Eagles club followed. Music was provided by the groom's father's band, "The Smokey Mountain Boys."

The bride is a graduate of East Anchorage high school, Anchorage, Alaska, and prior to her marriage was employed in this city at Northwestern hospital. The groom is a graduate of Middle River high school and was employed by Thygeson Construction.

The couple is at home in Anchorage, Alaska where the bride is enrolled in the associate nursing program at University of Anchorage; and the groom is employed by a construction comany. Photo, LeMar studio, Crookston.

A Child Learns Many Lessons, Says Professor

A child's "educational program" includes far more than teachers, textbooks and tests, according to an article in the October issue of "PTA Today" — the journal of the national PTA.

Robert C. Putt, associate professor of education, Mansfield state college, Mansfield, Pa., calls on parents and educators to expand their definition of "education" to include factors outside of school which have impact on a child's growth to adulthood. This broader view, he says, places responsibility for a child's education on all adults who have contact with children.

A child has many "teachers," according to Putt. Parents need to ask themselves the following questions:

+What kind of teacher is the TV set?

+What kind of "teachers about life" are my child's friends?

+What kind of teacher am I as I prepare my child for life?

+What kind of person is my child's school teacher?

+What kinds of teachers does my child encounter outside school and the family?

"It seems to me that one of the most awesome and too often ignored responsibilities of parenthood is the responsibility to scrutinize carefully and keep in perspective all of the life experiences that comprise the total 'education' a child receives each day," he says. "Maybe we just need to apply the same questions to all aspects of a child's 'educational program' that have too long been applied only to the job the school is doing or not doing."

Putt offers a second set of questions and analysis of responses for parents to consider:

+What motivational techniques are being used to stimulate my child's interest in learning? He says parents should use, and expect their child's teacher to use, techniques other than fear, techniques such as praising and rewarding and setting goals.

+Is my child being taught to live in a democratic society? Children should be given a balance of freedoms and responsibilities.

+What is being done to foster my child's creativity? A child should be allowed to explore, experiment and manipulate objects and ideas.

+Are those adults who work with children aware of the typical characteristics children should reflect at a particular age level? According to Putt, adults should know what to expect from children at certain stages in their development.

"I would suggest that parents carefully scrutinize not only what the professionally trained teachers are doing but also what we as parents are doing in the rest of the 'educational program' that will help children learn to live in the world they well inherit from us," says Putt.

October 18-24 Declared Lupus Week

Congress has declared the week of October 18-24 as national Lupus week.

Minnesota chapter, Lupus foundation of America, Inc., (LFA) was formed five years ago to unite those individuals with Lupus for the purpose of education and support.

Chapter is conducting an awareness campaign throughout Minnesota in keeping with this week. Lupus Erythematosus is a chronic, inflammatory disease, affecting nearly one million Americans, whose cause and cure are unknown. Disease can involve the skin as well as many different organs of the body, and can be difficult to diagnose.

Symptoms vary with each individual depending on which part of the body is affected. Common symptoms are fever, fatigue, weight loss, joint pain and a butterfly rash over the bridge of the nose and cheeks which is usually sun-sensitive, although only 43 per cent of Lupus patients will have the rash.

Prognosis, today, is much better than it was even 10 years ago. Increased awareness of the disease and improvement in diagnostic tests makes early diagnosis possible, thus making possible the initiation of treatment before damage is done to a vital organ.

Minnesota chapter, which has become one of the largest chapters in the country, will have information booths located at the Skyway building in St. Paul and at the government center and Apache shopping plaza, Minneapolis, during National Lupus week. Literature will be available and chapter representatives will be on hand to answer questions. October 20, Dick Pommerantz will host two chapter representatives, for a discussion of Lupus on KSTP radio at 10 a.m.

Membership in the Minnesota chapter, L.F.A. is open to anyone interested in becoming more aware about Lupus and the foundation. Members receive the latest information about Lupus research, including a newsletter which is mailed regularly.

For more information write or call, Minnesota chapter, L.F.A. 640-11th Ave. S. Hopkins, MN 55343, phone (612) 933-4137.

K. Nesland Herd Tops In County DHIA

Jerry Hamre, supervisor of the Pennington county dairy herd improvement association (DHIA), has listed the top 10 herds in the association for July.

In first place is Knute Nesland, whose herd produced an average of 48.2 pounds of milk and 1.61 pounds of butterfat, followed by Gene Nelson, 48.1 and 1.85; Gordon Wetterlund & Son, 47.6 and 1.77; Hanson Heritage Farm, 46.9 and 1.59; Duane Krohn, 46.2 and 1.68; Warren & Lowell Hamrick, 45.5 and 1.64; Mylo Carlson, 45.3 and 1.74; Darrow Lundeen and Sons, 43.7 and 1.58; Duane Vatsaas, 43.3 and 1.58; and Orlan Stolaas, 41.9 and 1.50.

Herd averages are affected by the number of dry cows in the herd. Amount of milk or butterfat produced is averaged out over all the cows. This gives the farmer a record of the earning power of the herd for the month. If many dry cows are included in the herd, the average for the month may be low, even though the cows which are milking are high producers.

There are 29 DHIA herds and six owner-sampler herds on July test for a total of 35 herds on test. There were 17 cows that completed records with over 625 pounds of fat in 305 days or less.

Halloween Safety Tips Are Offered

Halloween draws more children to outdoor areas than any other event of the year.

Situation is made more dangerous since the event is during the evening hours, said public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

Sopsic has these suggestions to enhance Halloween safety:

+Remind children to cross streets at corners only, to stay away from stray animals and strangers and stay in their immediate neighborhood.

+ Have children wear light colored costumes or costumes accented by reflectorized tape. A flashlight or battery powered lantern can also make the difference between being seen and not being seen.

+ Have children try on their costumes before Halloween night. Avoid loose, flowing costumes that might tangle and cause a child to fall while crossing a street. Make certain masks do not interfere with vision.

+ Before buying a costume, beard, wig or mask, check to make sure it is fire resistant. If the costume is homemade and you wish to make it flameproof, soak the garment in a solution of seven ounces of borax, three ounces of boric acid and two quarts of warm water.

+ Caution children against eating their treats until they return home so parents have a chance to inspect everything.

+ If you are a motorist, drive with special caution on Halloween night.

"Today, family physicians enjoy a status within the medical community which never would have been possible without the support you and other members have provided," he added.

Poland Shipped Million Pounds Of Nonfat Milk

Catholic relief services (CRS) has shipped 1,100,000 pounds of nonfat dry milk to Poland to launch the second phase of its Tribute to Poland project. It is the largest emergency food shipment to date and is the first of a projected 20 million pounds of dairy products to be purchased from the U.S. government.

President Ronald Reagan congratulated CRS saying, "Through the initiative of Catholic relief services, the spirited people of Poland will feel the compassion of the American people, who have frequently demonstrated their willingness to lend a hand to the needy around the world."

Noting that the milk will be distributed according to need, the President continued, "It is through voluntary agencies that the American people can express their concern for those who suffer from hunger and poverty."

Using private money contributions, and food from U.S. corporations, Catholic Relief Services has already shipped some 2.2 million pounds of milk, flour, cereal, meat and baby food. The food is distributed by the Polish Catholic Bishops organization to the aged, the ill and schoolchildren.

On hand at Port Newark, to bless the cargo were John Cardinal Krol, Archbishop of Philadelphia, Archbishop Peter Gerety of Newark and CRS Executive Director Bishop Edwin Broderick. Bishop Broderick described the significance of the shipment saying, "We are fortunate to be able to provide this basic food to our Polish brothers and sisters who have endured such hardship. Our agreement with the U.S. government," he continued, "allows up to purchase massive quantities of milk, butter, and cheese at the best possible price. The amount available to us is limited only by the contributions to our Tribute to Poland Fund."

CRS, the official overseas aid and development agency of American Catholics worked in Poland during and after World War II. The current program for Poland is a short-term food project, designed to provide basic food-stuffs for 6 to 9 months.

Cash contributions to the Tribute to Poland Fund are tax-deductible and may be sent to Catholic Relief Services, 1011 First Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022.

The Norris-LaGuardia Act of 1932 prohibited federal court injunctions in labor disputes, except as specified, and outlawed so-called "yellow dog" contracts, according to the U.S. Department of Labor's "Important Events in American Labor History."

Dear Readers,

Many families cannot tolerate open expressions of grief. They will say, "For your own good, don't cry so much." Translated, it means, "When you cry you upset me and I can't tolerate your grief."

A grief counselor will encourage the mourner to cry openly and to discuss any aspect of the deceased's life. This has a healing effect.

Respectfully,

Teachers Back On Strike Here This Morning

Parcel drivers prefer not to cross the picket lines, the school district is picking up all mail at the post office and delivering it to all schools, as well as picking up packages from United Parcel service and making individual school deliveries. The system has worked well, according to Harry Nelson, school district business manager, since the school deliveryman normally goes to each school two or more times a day.

Nelson added that computer center material normally delivered to the school district service center by Purolator delivery service is being dropped elsewhere and being picked up by district personnel. He also noted that a truck with food items which arrived Wednesday did not cross the picket lines, but the driver stayed overnight and delivered the goods on Thursday when no picket lines were set up due to the MEA convention.

Need Heart Attack Victims For Research

"Can heart attacks be prevented by lowering cholesterol?" This is the question asked by a team of researchers conducting a national study of the relationship between heart disease and cholesterol. Most heart trouble results from atherosclerosis or hardening of the arteries.

A clue to the cause of atherosclerosis may be that cholesterol, a fatty substance, is found in diseased arteries, but it is still uncertain whether lowering cholesterol can actually prevent heart attacks. Research team working at four clinical centers hopes to answer this question. University of Minnesota clinical center is seeking persons aged 29 through 64 who have had their first and only heart attack within the past 5 years and are free of diabetes, stroke and heart surgery.

Anyone interested in more information may call the University of Minnesota Hyperlipidemia study collect at 612-376-4494.

Cost Of Goods Varies With Tax Bracket

How much does a two-dollar magazine cost? On the magazine cover, the price may appear firm; but the real cost, measured in terms of your purchasing power, varies according to your tax bracket.

If you are married and your joint taxable income (that's what you pay tax on after deductions and exemptions) is $20,000 to $24,000, you fall in the 28 per cent tax bracket and you pay $2.78 in pre-tax income for a $2 publication. In the 49 per cent bracket you may pay as much as $3.82 for the same glossy little publication.

The difference, as explained by the Minnesota society of certified public accountants, (CPAs) lies in the amount of spendable income left to you after meeting your tax obligations. The higher the bracket, the more you must earn to have $2 available to spend. Viewed in these terms, taxes become a significant factor in every financial decision you make.

The money you spend is usually money you have earned — and that means you pay a tax on it. You must earn $80 before you can spend $40 on a dinner for two if you're in the 50 per cent tax bracket. Think about how long it takes you to earn that much before you decide how to spend it.

Here's how you can figure out the impact of taxes on your purchasing power, once you know your taxable income. Divide the cost of the item you want to purchase by "one" minus your tax bracket. For instance, if you want to buy a $20 ticket to a concert and your taxable income is in the 43 per cent marginal tax bracket, do this. Divide 20 by one minus .43. This equals 20 divided by .57 and that comes to $35.09, so that's what you need to earn before spending the $20.

The difference between just getting by or becoming rich can be attributed to financial wisdom exercised, CPAs say. Here's an example that may be extreme, but it's a clear illustration of how this wisdom, or lack of it, works. One can earn $80,000 a year, but wind up with no capital, while others with the same income grow wealthy. If you are among those few who are in the 50 per cent tax bracket, a $12,000 automobile would cost you $24,000 of income. In five years, its value would be $2,000. If instead of buying a car you had purchased a tax shelter, investing the whole $24,000 with only a 10 per cent return, that would grow to $38,640 over five years. There are two options — one leads to $2,000 and the other leads to $38,640, or almost 20 times as much.

Tax planning should be a consideration in all of your spending. Not only should you calculate purchasing power according to your income tax bracket, but you should consider other ways to reduce tax liability. For instance, when buying durable goods, consider the future value of the item. Quality clothing can usually be donated to thrift shops, then claimed as a tax deduction, whereas clothing of lesser value may simply wear out and be discarded. Spending more initially may actually result in more value to you in the long run. The same may apply to a piece of furniture. Before buying it, ask yourself whether it is likely to appreciate in value or become a valuable antique.

The easy credit of our former "buy now, pay later" society encouraged people to buy more "things" than they really needed. Quality, future value, or the tax implications were not considerations in the throw-away society. Today, we are more concerned with ways to get more from our money.

Let's say you buy a $45 pair of shoes, which really cost you $62.50 in income because you are in the 28 per cent tax bracket. Now add the finance charges. Then, figure the tax deduction for the finance charge. Obviously, you won't go through these computations every time you pay the babysitter or get a shoeshine, but, CPAs say, the more carefully you plan discretionary spending, the more you will have for the future.

Severinson In Concert At GF Sun.

Doc Severinson, master musician and trumpeter, will be presented in concert by the SPOKE concerts Sunday (October 25) at 8:15 p.m. in the Chester Fritz auditorium in Grand Forks.

Severinson, who has served as musical director of NBC's "Tonight Show," since 1967 will perform an entirely new program of fusion jazz titled, "The Magical Valley of Xebron."

"I guess I was tired of mining the same vein of music and feeling so secure," Severinson said. "It was time for me emotionally, to dig in a new place to see what else I could pull out. It was frightening, but then some people at this stage of the game would take up parachuting. For me, Xebron is something I simply had to do."

Appearing with Severinson will be a four piece jazz ensemble formed this year by Severinson. For information contact Jolene Carmen at (701) 777-3130.

Higher Education Spends $65 Billion

Higher education will spend close to $65 billion in 1981-82, according to the American council on education. In 1979-80 it spent $50 billion. However, that figure does not include the value of the buildings and other capital investments used in the production of educational services— unlike the figures used for industry. Fifty billion dollars, then, is a conservative estimate of the relative size of the higher education sector in 1979-80.

In 1977, the last year for which comparative figures are available, higher education's contribution to the gross national product (GNP) was about $42 billion — larger than that of the automobile industry ($36 billion) and the petroleum refining industry ($15 billion), and almost as much as agriculture ($43.3 billion).

Few people are aware that higher education is important to our economy, the council on education states. Policy-makers who study the GNP discover that the department of commerce lists only the private higher education slice of the educational pie under "Educational Services." Yet higher education, when both private and public institutions are considered together, is among the biggest segments of the entire nonprofit sector.

You may ask: How can we compare education and industry when the latter pays corporate and real estate taxes, and the former benefits from a special tax-exempt status? This is an important difference, but higher education is not exempt from paying employment taxes. And because higher education is more labor-intensive than many other industries, it may pay more in employment taxes than some industries pay in employment and income taxes combined.

The economic policies of the new administration provide tax incentives for investment on the part of private industries, but these incentives do not apply to colleges or universities, the council reports.

Private industries also receive tax incentives that allow them to renovate energy-wasting facilities. Universities, on the other hand, often cannot afford insulation for lecture halls with utility bills that seem to double annually, and they get no government incentives to make those expenditures.

Further, the millions of people who work in higher education pay federal, state and local taxes. Many taxpayers depend for their livelihood on the business of higher education. Faculty members make up almost 800,000 of the nearly 1.9 million people employed in higher education. Managerial and administrative personnel — accountants as well as deans, typists as well as presidents — make up another 280,000. Hospital and sanitation workers, cooks, groundskeepers and other nonprofessional staff comprise another 791,000 of the workers paid by colleges and universities.

In many communities, a college or university is the largest single employer and accounts for the largest share of retail sales in the market area.

Colleges and universities, as well as training our scientists and engineers, also employ most of these professionals with doctoral degrees. Scholars at universities conduct more than 50 per cent of the applied research carried out in the United States. Although industries themselves conduct most of their own applied research, they conduct only 16 per cent of basic research on which that applied research depends. Industries rely on higher education to do much of the rest.

In 1980-81, over 12 million people enrolled in college as part-time or full-time students. Another 20 million people participated in non-credit continuing education, off-campus extension, or community service programs.

In addition, university medical centers train physicians, dentists, nurses and other health professionals, conduct medical research, and offer health services to their communities.

One indication of higher education's importance to society is that the demand for it is still strong, in spite of the reduced birth rates of the 1960s.

Youth Exchange Program Open To Students

International youth exchange committee of the Rotary club of Thief River Falls will receive applications from youths who qualify to participate in one year of international living in another country. Available areas include any country where a working Rotary youth exchange is now in existence. Sponsored and administered by members of the hosting foreign Rotary Club, the experience will include a full term of study in a senior secondary school.

Rotary International is a world-wide organization comprised of more than 18,000 Rotary clubs with over 850,000 members situated in more than 150 countries and geographical regions. Over half of these areas in Rotary International are engaged in youth exchange. Under this program youths must be between the ages of 16 and 18 at the time of exchange.

A youth applicant who is selected by the Thief River Falls Rotary club and who is interviewed and selected by the Rotary district committee, will have the opportunity for overseas experience. Applicants may be male or female, and there is no requirement that they be from a Rotary family. Program is designed to function at the senior secondary school level only. Youth applicant must be in the upper one-third of his or her class scholastically.

Youths applying for the program should give thought as to why they wish to enter the program; evaluate their participation in school, church, or community activities; and during the personal interview be prepared to discuss their knowledge of their community, state and nation, their approach to world problems and affairs, and their spirit of helpfulness in the community and home. One or both parents must be present at each interview session.

While it is best that the youth has made a study of the language of the country to which he or she is going, it is not a requirement. Every effort will be made to prepare the student for living abroad during the orientation period prior to his or her departure. When overseas, the youth will live in Rotary or Rotary-approved homes, and will become a part of the family life of that country.

Those wishing to become youth applicants, or who know someone who does should study the rules and regulations and obtain an application form from the school principal's office, or from the International youth exchange committee of the Rotary Club of Thief River Falls.

Application forms may be picked up at Lincoln high school in Thief River Falls from Whitey Olson, school guidance counselor.

Applicants For Gov's. Council Are Requested

Gov. Al Quie is seeking qualified applicants to fill 14 anticipated vacancies on the governor's planning council on developmental disabilities.

The three-year appointments will begin Jan. 1, 1982. People who have a developmental disability are particularly encouraged to apply. Other eligible applicants would include parents or guardians (especially of a child residing in a state hospital), providers of disability services and those having a special interest in developmental disabilities.

Council represents a broadly based approach to planning and promoting better coordination of services for people having such disabilities. Those participating assist in the development of an annual plan and advise the governor on matters relating to developmental disabilities.

In addition to serving on the council, members are encouraged to participate in working committees or task forces. Travel and living expenses are reimbursed.

Application forms may be requested by contacting the governor's office, Room 130, Capitol Building, St. Paul, MN 55155. Telephone (612) 296-3391. Applications must be received no later than Dec. 1, 1981.

Overpaid Vets Being Sued For GI Bill Debts

Veterans Administration (VA) in Minnesota has several thousand GI Bill overpayment cases under review in which legal action could be filed unless the debts are paid.

Dale E. Parker, VA's district counsel for the state, said that new cases of uncollected overpayments are being referred to his office on an average of 250 cases each month, noting that they will bring suit against approximately 175 Minnesota veterans this month.

Parker, whose office is in the federal building at Fort Snelling, said the VA is "more serious than ever" in seeking to recover GI Bill overpayments made to veterans. The majority of these debts are long-standing overpayments for education under the GI Bill.

His collection activities are part of a nationwide effort to recover debts over $1,200 from veterans who have not arranged for repayment. Debts over $1,200 owed the VA are referred to the Department of Justice for this same purpose.

Cases of possible overpayments are detected by the VA's central accounts receivable section in St. Paul. That office sends three notification letters to indebted veterans at intervals of at lest 30 days. If the veteran remains in arrears, his case is then sent to the appropriate VA district counsel or U.S. attorney aroud the nation.

After Parker's office receives the case, a letter is sent to the veteran requesting payment or a conference to set up a repayment plan. If that fails, the VA official said, "The only choice is to sue."

Due to increased authority to proceed directly with a lawsuit, and automated work-processing equipment, legal action for even small amounts has become cost-effective, he said.

"A veteran owing debts to the Veterans Administration must realize the seriousness of the matter," Parker said. "The filing of a suit, if deemed necessary, is a part of the collection effort. It is important for veterans receiving letters from this office to answer and arrange repayment. Otherwise, suit is almost a certainty."

Frosty Bridges Dangerous This Time Of Year

Motorists should be alert to the danger of frost-covered bridges at this time of year, warns, the Minnesota Department of Transportation (Mn-DOT).

Frost, sometimes not visible, can form any time that the bridge deck temperature is below freezing.

Drivers should cautiously approach bridges, particularly when they look wet or frosty. Slowing down immediately without applying brakes is advised.

If one bridge is slippery, look out! The rest are probably slippery too, frequently when the roadway is not.

Right Mix Of Retirement Plans Needed

Minnesota Senator Dave Durenberger said that strengthening social security will require "the right mix of social security, private savings and investments, and private pensions to assure a secure retirement for everybody."

During the discussion of social security with Robert J. Myers, deputy commissioner of social security, Senator Durenberger noted the importance of making social security's problem-solving a bi-partisan effort. "We have to take the politics out of it in order to do it right," he said.

Senator Durenberger is a member of the social security subcommittee and the Senate special committee on aging.

Myers has been around social security even before the program's first day. In 1934 — a year before social security was started by Congress — Myers was called to Washington to work out the actuarial table for a new retirement income insurance program for America's workers. From 1947 to 1970 he was the chief actuary of social security.

Myers returned to Washington this year with "the hope that perhaps I could help the Reagan administration solve this very important, very serious problem about what I consider to be a great program."

Myers told Durenberger that social security is entering the first of three distinct period. "The three periods are this decade when there are definite problems because there's still a growing number of aged people and the economic conditions are most uncertain. Then we come to the period from 1990 for roughly 15 to 20 years when the cost situation will get much better. It won't completely vanish, but during that period there will be a relatively low number of people age 65 and over in the country.

"But then come about the year 2010 and thereafter we have the great problem that the baby boom that followed World War II will be reaching retirement age. And at the same time the number of workers in the country will not be growing rapidly, in fact might even be decreasing because of currently low birthrates and what we've had in the past 10 years."

Durenberger and Myers agreed that social security would be strengthened and that people would not use the benefits they've earned.

But Durenberger said Congress should go farther in assuring retirement security. "Right now our tax policies in the his country penalize us for saving, investing and having insurance policies and retirement programs and they reward us for borrowing," he said. "That causes inflation which again eats away at the kind of money we'd like to put aside.

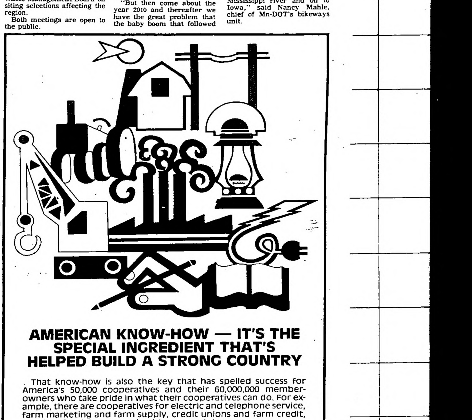
"So it seems to me that if we're really going to do something about social security, not only do we have to strengthen the program itself, but we have to make it good for people to save, to invest, to create private pensions and retirement accounts on which social security can be a supplementary part of their retirement.

Scenic Route For Bicycles Finished Now

A bikeway which fully opens the scenic Mississippi river valley in southeastern Minnesota to cyclists has been completed in Winona county by the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

The six-mile-long, paved bikeway parallels the route of Interstate 90 between Dakota and Dresbach, providing a north-south connection for the existing bikeway on US 61. Before completion, US 61 ended at I-90, leaving cyclists a long and difficult detour in the hilly bluff country along the river.

"Our objective was to open this link for cyclists and allow bicycle transportation from the North Shore, along the St. Croix river and the Mississippi river and on to Iowa," said Nancy Mahle, chief of Mn-DOT's bikeways unit.



AMERICAN KNOW-HOW — IT'S THE SPECIAL INGREDIENT THAT'S HELPED BUILD A STRONG COUNTRY

That know-how is also the key that has spelled success for America's 50,000 cooperatives and their 60,000,000 member-owners who take pride in what their cooperatives can do. For example, there are cooperatives for electric and telephone service, farm marketing and farm supply, credit unions and farm credit, housing, food, insurance, health care and day care.

The cooperative way of conducting business has proven to be both highly efficient and economical. That's why cooperatives have been around for so long — in urban, rural and suburban areas — located in every state from coast to coast. And that's why new cooperatives are being formed today.

Cooperatives are good for their communities — they provide jobs and services that benefit everyone. And thriving communities mean a better America in every way.

The Height of Stupidity

It is hard to imagine an act that makes less sense and shows more stupidity than the smearing of manure on windows at the crisis headquarters of the striking Thief River Falls Education association. The act was reported to the local law enforcement center Thursday morning and apparently took place between 9 p.m. Wednesday and 8 a.m. Thursday.

Perhaps it takes all kinds of people to make a world, but the world needs fewer of the kind who take part in such an incredibly disgusting action. It is difficult to imagine anyone with such low self esteem that resorting to such a lowbrown tactic would make him or her achieve any gratification.

Emotions play a role in any controversy, and the teacher strike is certainly controversial. But disagreement is entirely possible on a high plane and reporting to such nonsense as the act in question has no place in this situation. We would hope that this first thoughtless move will also be the last. Stupidity can scarcely ascend to any greater heights.

Giving To Receive

Only a true bureaucrat could come up with a statement like the one attributed to Minnesota Commissioner of Revenue Clyde Allen in a news release about property tax refund checks which was sent out by Governor Quie's office recently.

I quote: "Allen said the checks, mailed Tuesday, are timed to provide tax relief to Minnesota homeowners before the October 31, 1981 deadline for the second half of a homeowner's property tax payment."

That's really nice. They're going to send some of our money back just in time for us to send it back to them. It should make sense to the postal department if no one else.

Will they offer us a refund on the second half too?

Actually, I like getting money back as much as the next person (and the sooner the better), but by the time the bureaucrats have finished shuffling the paperwork, is it any wonder there doesn't seem to be enough left to do anything else?

Time For The Tests

Following editorial is from the Grand Rapids Herald-Review:

Enough accumulated theories and studies about peat is available to develop experimental private and public testing locations for Minnesota's vast peat natural resource.

That was a suggestion which emerged after two days of meetings among people from Minnesota, Canada and other areas of the Midwest when they met in Grand Rapids to discuss northern Minnesota's peat resource Sept. 24 and 25.

The time has arrived to end studies which result in reams of theories and statistics, peat experts maintained at the seminar. Enough groundwork has been established to put collected information to the test with small, carefully monitored experiments.

Foremost in the minds of many concerned about the future of the potentially enormous uses of the resource was the preservation of the area during and after the development of the peat resource. Raping the land without thought for future uses and generations was strongly discouraged, thus the go-slow attitude of many seminar participants.

Amid the various aspects of peat development for horticulturical or energy uses was the prospective fear that development of the resource, if not carefully controlled, could lead to a boom or bust northern Minnesota economy.

Regulations must be devised and put into effect to safeguard the resource and the people who will be positively or negatively affected if the resource is developed on a large scale. Policy makers should not be unduly influenced by bright short range prospects while the total future impact is unknown. Care should be taken that a short boom period is not engaged in at the expense of long range disaster for the economy, the land, the resource or future generations.

A decision, whatever it may be, should keep the future in mind, not included as an afterthought.

Man has been placed on earth as trustees, stewards, of nature. Carefully developed plans are not out of the question and intitiating them should be paramount.

Many participants said paper studies about peat and the peat resource are enough to be used as a solid basis of practical and thoroughly controlled on-site application. Because of the diverse ways in which peat can potentially be used, small test projects encompassing the range of possibilities should begin.

Long range development of the resource can be considered, based upon the knowledge and expertise gained through the small monitored experiments. If it is determined that the best application and use of the resource is not known now, it is not unwise to admit that more studies should be undertaken to secure better answers.

If peat is to be considered a renewable resource, steps should be taken to insure that it is. Under no circumstances should harvesting of peat be considered an answer to today's energy or agricultural dilemmas without equal consideration that the future may hold the key to the wisest use of the resource.

Local Arrowhead Regional Development Commission representative Colleen Nardone, a member of one of many panels, suggested that the peat resource will be developed because people want and need a livelihood.

"Let's get in front of development and see that it goes in the right direction," she begged, and added that waiting too long for strict regulations and controls could result in a "mess" after peat land development is substantially underway. Acting, not reacting, should be the viewpoint of local communities and regulatory bodies.

In the process of developing the peat resource, local consideration should not be neglected. Communities affected by development of the resource should be approached and informed before out-of- the-area planning is complete.

Because localities take the positive and negative brunt of development, they should be included in decision making from the first to the final planning step and not forgotten after development.

Enough knowledge has been accumulated to begin small scale experimental research. Conclusions drawn from those experiments should be the basis for future use of northern Minnesota's peat resource.

A Note On Letters

Once again the Times has received letters to the editor intended for publication which we can't use because the writers can't be identified. Both letters contain handwritten signatures, and that is what we want, but in neither case can we contact the writer to verify the source.

The first letter received Thursday was signed with a name familiar to us, but a contact with that person revealed that the letter did not originate there. The name is not uncommon, and the signature may likely be legitimate. But we don't know that it is and so we can't use the letter.

The second letter arrived Friday and contains a name which may or may not be that of a real local person. There is no person by that name in the telephone directory and the name is not familiar to us. In both cases the letters were postmarked in Thief River Falls but neither the envelope nor the letter contained an address or phone number.

If the writers who took the time to send these letters are wondering why they don't appear in print, the reason is obvious. We are responsible for the content of our newspaper — including the comment of letter writers — and we must know the source of those letters. It is not fair for people with familiar names to be mistakenly associated with letters they did not write, nor is it responsible for writers to use fictitious names to avoid identification.

We don't know how to make our position more clear. We want your letters of comment and opinion on local issues, but we must be able to identify the writer. With your signature include an address or telephone number where you can be contacted for verification. If we can't identify you, we can't use your letter, no matter how good it might be.

Interesting Opinions:

"Farmers must take the offensive in expanding markets for their products, especially now as we face high interest rates, escalating input costs and the largest corn and soybean crops in Iowa's history. If. . . farmers intend to sit back and let the government fend for their interests, we'd better draw our wagons into a tight circle right now, since less than four per cent of the country's population doesn't carry an appreciable amount of political clout." —Varel Bailey, President, Iowa Corn Growers Ass'n.

Knapp will visit the hospital October 22 during physical therapy week noted October 18-24 to talk to legislators about the role of physical therapy in rehabilitation.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Anwar Sadat's Other Dream

President Anwar Sadat's legacy as a peacemaker has been eloquently documented in the sad days since his tragic death. But most Americans do not realize that this courageous leader had devoted his life to the pursuit of another dream which, in the past two years, brought him twice to the halls of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in Washington. The mission was economic progress — for his people and all peoples of the world who have known nothing but centuries of grinding poverty.

In many ways, this dream proved to be more elusive than his dream of peace in the Mideast. In fact, President Sadat viewed economic prosperity as something of a riddle — the solution to which rested in the minds of the men and women of the American business community.

President Sadat understood that vast natural resources alone were not enough to ensure a nation's economic prosperity. During his first visit to the U.S. Chamber in 1979, he told us, "We found gas. We produce our oil. Vast resources in the country with no energy problem, with six million cubic meters of water going to the Mediterranean, and one of the richest soils in the world. . . Water we have, land we have, climate we have, farming we have."

But still, no prosperity. Yet, Anwar Sadat understood why. He looked us in the eye and issued a challenge:

"Would you solve this riddle? I am dreaming. Really, I am dreaming of a drive like the drive of your grandfathers. . . I want you to be pioneers like your grandfathers who opened the West and built in 2000 years the most powerful country, the richest country, the great United States of America.

"We need technology, we need know-how, new ways of irrigation, new ways in agriculture. All this one can find here (in America)."

It will be some time before we will understand fully the consequences of the great loss the world has suffered with the assassination of President Sadat. When a tragedy of this magnitude strikes, we all have a natural desire to put the pieces of our fragile world back together quickly and nearly.

This isn't possible. That is why I was disturbed by the comments of certain news correspondents who missed the larger picture of these tragic events when they seemed to blame our own government for refusing to confirm President Sadat's death until the government of Egypt was ready to announce it to the Egyptian people.

What we do know now is that one of the world's most courageous, visionary leaders has left in our hands two great challenges: To build upon a foundation of peace for which he continually risked, and finally sacrificed his life. And to share with all nations who are willing to listen, the great genius of America's private enterprise system, so that the prosperity which we often take for granted can become a reality for all peoples of the world.

Can we succeed in these missions? Anwar Sadat never stopped believing that we could. As President Reagan so aptly described the slain Egyptian President, "In a world filled with hatred, he was a man of hope."

Papa Bear 4-H Clean-A-Thon Best In State

Members of the Papa Bear 4-H club of Thief River Falls have been informed by the Minnesota chapter of the Arthritis Foundation that their club is the best in the state thus far in the 1981 clean-a-thon.

Nine club members participated in the program of securing pledges for roadside clean-up August 8 and collected $260 which was sent to the foundation. The clean-up project involved cleaning ditches on both sides of county road 62 for two miles east from highway 59.

Working on the clean-up and collecting 35 bags of trash plus two bedframes with springs and a tire were Jodi Finke, Danielle Anderson, Kay Lyn Espe, Stephanie Clow, Kimberley and Hillary Peterson, Peggy Cruz, Jennifer Westlund and Kristi Suronen.

In a letter addressed to Mrs. Gary Finke, adult leader in the 4-H club, chairman John F. Finn of the Minnesota chapter board expressed appreciation for the project work and contribution. "Your good work has contributed to the fight against the nation's number one crippler," he said. "You have helped 540,000 Minnesotans in pain with your community pride project."

Notice of the "best in the state" designation was received from George Michaelson, director of development for the Minnesota chapter.

Area Extension Agent Gains Promotion

Carlyle Holen, area extension agent, crop pest management (CPM), has been promoted from instructor to assistant professor in the University of Minnesota's agricultural extension service, effective July 1, 1981.

Holen, who transferred to the area agent CPM position April 1, was cited for his work with agricultural programs as extension agent in Kittson county, where he was commended for programs on minimum tillage, energy and sunflower insects and diseases. He holds his B.S. degree in agronomy from the University of Minnesota, where he has also begun work on a master's degree.

This promotion does not change the responsibilities, assignment or future contributions Holen is making to the extension program. Rather, it is a recognition of his achievements and professional growth as a faculty member of the University of Minnesota.

SHARE To Make Human-Animal Studies

Pet haters are rare in our society. Everyone, it seems, owns or has befriended a cat, dog, gerbil or parakeet at one time in their lives.

But despite the large number of companion animals — there's one in over half of American households — very little is known about the health, social and psychological implications of pet ownership.

A new center at the University of Minnesota has been established to look at the nature of America's fascination with pets. At the same time a number of other areas, including the controversy surrounding new methods of livestock production, will be investigated.

Called SHARE, for Study of Human-Animal Relationships and Environments, the program is jointly sponsored by the college of veterinary medicine and the shcool of public health. Center will draw on more than 40 faculty members from the two health disciplines.

'Most people accept that pets offer benefits, but the nature of these benefits has been inadequately characterized," said Stan Diesch, the center's director. There is little scientific evidence on when, where, or whom and under what conditions pets are beneficial or harmful, he said.

In the controversal area of intensive livestock production, so-called "factory farming," Diesch said there has been a polarization of farmers and humane societies concerned about the effects of animal confinement and slaughter methods.

Scientific community lacks adequate basic knowledge to advise the livestock producer on production methods that are acceptable to welfare organizations, Diesch said. At the same time, humane socieities lobbying for animal rights need to be made aware of the economic constraints of food production, he added.

"Research by unbiased scientists who have credibility with both groups will provide answers to these problems," Diesch said.

Use of animals as therapeutic agents to satisfy emotional needs of the elderly and the physically and mentally handicapped also deserves further study, Diesch said.

"There are many ancedotal observations and intuitive judgments which indicate the need and use of animal relationships," Diesch said. "It has been said that pets may provide companionship, reduce stress, encourage exercise and reduce loneliness. While there has been some research to confirm this, much more study is needed if effective programs are to be developed."

Diesch said the center will serve as a clearinghouse of information for students and faculty members pursuing research. Several projects related to the health and psychological implications of animal ownership are already under way at the University of Minnesota.

Center will also offer a course on the "Interrelationships of People and animals in Society" and plans to promote the dissemination of scientific findings to the public.

Interstate Road Signs Are Explained

Ever wondered why those interstate highway signs are numbered the way they are? Knowing what they mean can help you make a quick driving decision when you haven't taken the time to look at a map, says the automotive information council (AIC).

All interstate routes are marked with red-white-blue signs shaped like shields, which carry the interstate route number. All major routes with even numbers, such as I-80, go east and west. Odd-numbered routes, I-75 for example, go north and south.

In urban areas, auxiliary routes that loop around cities have three-digit numbers, using the route number as the last two digits and an even number for the first digit. For example, if you are traveling on route I-25 and come to an auxiliary route marked I-825, you will know this route goes around the city.

Three-digit auxiliary route numbers with the first digit odd are for spur routes, which connect with the major route at only one end. For example, if you are on route I-80 and see an auxiliary route marked I-380, you will know this will take you into the city, not around it.

Another designation which may come in handy is the white-green interstate shield route marker. The color will tell you that the road will lead you to the business district.

Knowing what interstate markers mean can simplify planning routes of travel in unfamiliar surroundings.

Vandalism Of Highway Signs Costs $300,000

Vandalism of highway signs costs Minnesota taxpayers $300,000 annually, according to Curt Christie, state maintenance engineer, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

About 4,800 signs are vandalized each year. Sign vandalism is primarily due to theft or damage by gunfire or paint and accounts for about 11 per cent of the signs replaced each year, Christie said.

Sign theft and alteration is a dangerous practice which can cause a motorist injury or even death, Christie warns. When signs have been stolen or speed limit signs have been altered, motorists have either no warning or misleading information.

He also reminds that sign vandalism is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $500 and-or a jail sentence of up to 90 days. Possession of highway signs is a petty misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $100.

National Day Of Unity Set For October 17

Nalonal coalition against domestic violence has declared October 17 as a "national day of unity." The NCADV is a national network of community-based programs for battered women and their families. This day will be observed and celebrated nationwide by people who are affiliated with the 300 member organizations which work to end violence against women.

Communities in Region 1 are urged to observe a moment of silence for those women who have died by violence and those women imprisoned for murdering their mates as a result of being victims of violence. They are also asked to acknowledge and celebrate the work being done across the nation in the shelters for battered women and their children, the hotlines, community education and other domestic violence programs.

The Ripley shelter in Thief River Falls has asked regligious organizations to combine efforts in this remembrance. The time set for Region 1 is 7:55 p.m. for silence, with the religious response being twofold: First, by announcing the moment of silence in the previous Saturday or Sunday's announcements; and second by the ringing of the church bells breaking the silence. Those responding with bells or chimes at 8 p.m. will be effectively echoing remembrance and celebration.

National day of unity is a statement of the organizations that they are working to change attitudes and values that support violence against women and their belief that this consciousness-raising work must occur hand in hand with the emergency services which are provided to victims of domestic violence and their children.

Toll-Free No. Provides Help For Smokers

A Help Yourself Quit Smoking kit is being offered free to Minnesotans who call the Minnesota D-Day toll-free number 1-800-652-9770 any time of day or night, October 15 through November 30. D-Day, the statewide "don't smoke" project sponsored by the American Lung association of Minnesota and the American Cancer society, Minnesota division will occur November 19.

In announcing the toll-free phone number, general D-Day chairperson Buddy Ferguson said, "We intend to make it as simple as possible for state smokers to secure some help in quitting cigarettes. We urge them to 'call for help'."

Ferguson explained that the D-Day Help Yourself Kit contains information about a variety of quit-smoking methods. "It allows the smoker to choose his or her own way to stop smoking," he said.

Callers of the D-Day toll-free number will hear a very brief recorded message and then have the opportunity to leave their names and addresses so that the packet of stop-smoking materials can be mailed to them prior to D-Day.

It is recommended that if you have difficulty getting through on the toll-free phone number, you write to: Quitter's Packet, D-Day Headquarters, 614 Portland Av., St. Paul, MN 55102. The free materials will be mailed to you.

Organ Donation Encouraged By Church Body

For the first time ever a national church body has publicly called for Americans to donate their kidneys and other organs after death by signing an organ donor card.

The Lutheran church-Missouri Synod adopted a resolution during its 54th regular conventin held in St. Louis, MO.

The resolution was passed by the 1,100 delegates attending the convention who represent 6,000 congregations with 2.7 million members. Passage had been recommended by the churches' board of social ministry and world relief.

"The National Kidney foundation is extremely gratified that the Lutheran church-Missouri Synod has publicly endorsed the concept of organ donation," Oliver W. Porter, chairman of the Foundation, commented. "The resolution brings new hope to the 15,000 Americans who are presently awaiting a kidney transplant and cannot get one because of a lack of suitable donors."

"We also hope it will set a precedent that will result in other church bodies making similar public declarations," Porter added.

CCC Reserve Of Feedgrains Is Reopened

Senator Rudy Boschwitz has announced that USDA will open the Commodity Credit corporation's (CCC) farmer-owned feedgrain reserve for immediate entry of 1981 crop corn, barley and grain sorghum. Old crop grain currently being held in the basic CCC loan program will also be allowed to enter the reserve if the farmer wishes.

"Opening of the reserve hopefully will boost the sagging markets for corn and other feedgrains," Boschwitz said. "This is a wise move at a time when prices are low and the harvests are just beginning."

Boschwitz recently urged both Secretary of Agriculture John Block and OMB director David Stockman to open the feedgrain reserve.

"I'm pleased that they saw fit to take this action. It will provide the farmers with a great deal of flexibility," Boschwitz said. "Many farmers have been very concerned whether to sell their crops or store them and hope for better prices. Opening the program will allow for additional marketing options and the opportunity for better prices," Boschwitz said.

In other action, the Senate agriculture committee voted to lower dairy price supports from $13.49 to $13.10 per hundred-weight. The reserve loan rate of $2.55 is 15 cents higher than the $2.40 basic loan rate. A stroage payment of 26.5 cents per bushel (paid in advance) coupled with no interest charged on the loan after the first year should help to encourage participation. (The interest rate charged in the first year will be 14.5 per cent.) The target or release price that will allow the grain to move back out of the reserve is $3.15.

"I could not support this move as it will cause disorderly marketing with first a price jump and then a decrease," said Boschwitz. "The price supports will now be back to their pre-October levels."

Northland community college football team suffered a 16-0 loss at the hands of highly regarded Fergus Falls Saturday and will begin preparation today (Monday) for a Saturday afternoon game against Brainerd on the Thief River Falls athletic field that will close out the 1981 home schedule for the Northmen.

However, neither game is uppermost in the minds of the players and coaches right now. Instead, they're much more concerned about the condition of a teammate — sophomore Dave Gorski of Lancaster — who was involved in an automobile accident Friday night.

Gorski, who suffered possible head injuries when he was thrown from the car, is listed in serious condition in the intensive care unit of United Hospital in Grand Forks, N.D., according to a hospital report this morning.

The single-car mishap occurred when Gorski and Northland teammate Nate Kiel were headed to Hoople, N.D. to watch a high school football game involving Lancaster, Gorski's former team, and Valley. Kiel, a freshman from Kasilof, Alaska, suffered a fractured collarbone in the accident, but was treated and released.

Those involved with the Northland team did not hear of the mishap until they returned Saturday evening from the football game at Fergus Falls. Northland coach John Helley was concerned when the two players weren't on hand when the bus left Thief River Falls at 8 that morning, and even wondered about an accident, had hopes just prior to the kickoff that they perhaps simply overslept and would drive themselves to Fergus Falls.

News of the accident when they arrived back at the school shocked the team, whose biggest asset this fall is its camaraderie. "The spirit on this team is really something," explained Helley. "It's really a close-knit bunch.

Gorski, who earned post-season honors as a tight end for the Northmen as a freshman, has been a starting defensive tackle this fall while also seeing action as a tight end and a fullback. Kiel, meanwhile, has been used as the starting tight end.

In addition to the absence of Gorski and Kiel, the Northmen played most of Saturday's game without starting fullback John Dillion, a Thief River Falls sophomore who was carried from the field on a stretcher with 6:38 remaining in the first half. An ankle that was at first thought to be broken was later diagnosed as a severe sprain. And Dean Dokkin, a Thief River Falls freshman who is a starter at defensive end, missed his second start because of an ankle injury suffered against Vermilion earlier this month. That left the Northmen, who are short on numbers in the first place, minus four starters against the best football team in the Northern Division, and they still played the Spartans on near-even terms.

"We played the best we possibly could have played," said Helley.

TRF Foes Battle For Playoff Spots

A pair of unbeaten high school football teams familiar to Thief River Falls football players, coaches and fans will clash Tuesday when Bemidji visits Grand Rapids. The 7-0 Indians are headed for the Class AA playoffs as the Northern Lakes Conference champions, while the 6-0 Lumberjacks are trying to land a state playoff spot as a Class AA independent.

It'll be a tough week for the Lumberjacks, who will turn around and face Moorhead Saturday in Bemidji. Thief River Falls saw all three teams this fall, playing each one of them tough, but losing all three starts: 13-6 to Grand Rapids, 16-0 to Moorhead and 3-0 to Bemidji in overtime.

The Bemidji-Moorhead winner will probably compete in post-season play. As Class AA independents, Bemidji, Moorhead and Fergus Falls (grouped together much like Thief River Falls, Crookston and East Grand Forks as Class A independets) qualify for a playoff spot only by (1) beating one another; (2) by posting a record in which the number of losses does not exceed one; (3) or if its losses do not exceed the number of losses suffered by a Class AA conference champion.

Bemidji and Moorhead have both beaten Fergus falls, with the Lumberjacks posting a 13-0 win and the Spuds winning 24-0. Moorhead is 6-1 and ends its 1981 season against Bemidji. The Spuds are in the playoffs with a win over the Lumberjacks. Bemidji, after its tough Grand Rapids-Moorhead tandem, will close out the year Oct. 30 at Hermantown.

Miscellaneous

+ Baseball boosters in Bemidji met recently to discuss the city's lack of adequate playing facilities. Frank Pelawa arranged the meeting, with discussion centered on ways to complete the Bemidji arena field, which has seen little or no work over the past ten years. The meeting was called after it was learned that softball interests in Bemidji were pressuring city officials to have the field turned into another softball diamond, according to a story in the Bemidji Pioneer. Pewawa said that adult apathy over the years has been the biggest deterrent toward the baseball program in Bemidji obtaining adequate playing fields.

Unbeaten Fergus Falls Blanks Northland 16-0, But . . .

Nationally Ranked Spartans Have Trouble With Northmen

by Mike Lundgren,

"How often the highest talents are wrapped in obscurity."
—Plautus.

Fergus Falls community college football team is unbeaten in six games; leads the Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) Northern Division; stands No. 6 in the latest national junior college athletic association (NJCAA) poll; and figures to improve on its best-ever season in 1980 when the Spartans led the nation in total defense, allowing 130.8 yards per game. They're winning and gaining national publicity in the process.

And the Spartans did nothing to tarnish their image Saturday in a 16-0 victory over Northland in the wind and rain at Fergus Falls.

Meanwhile, Northland lost for the fourth time in six starts and slipped toward the bottom of the nine-team Northern Division standings — and into obscurity. And that's the sad part of it, because Northland played Fergus Falls — supposedly one of the very best football teams in the nation — on even terms. Only the continued failure of the Northmen on offense kept them from beating the Spartans.

Northland coach John Helley was more than satisfied with his team's play. "I don't think I could have asked for any more out of any of the players," he said. "We couldn't move on offense," he admitted, "but they did the best they could. They never gave up. And what can you say about our defense; they were just great."

Fergus Falls coach Steve LeGrand was impressed, too. "We knew they (Northland) had a good defensive football team, but we thought we would be able to run the ball on them. We couldn't," he confessed, giving a lot of the credit to Northland's Mark Stock, one of the talented Northmen wrapped in obscurity because of the team's lack of success. But the sophomore defensive lineman from Mahnomen is making a name for himself around the league with consistently outstanding play.

"Stock is just sensational," praised Helley.

"We couldn't handle Stock," noted LeGrand. "We think we've got some pretty good people up front (in the offensive line), but they couldn't handle him. He's outstanding."

Neither offense was effective, with strong defenses on both sides also aided by strong wind and rain. Northland netted just 101 yards, while Fergus Falls collected 188. Drives were almost nonexistent, with Northland mustering just six first downs and Fergus Falls getting only five.

Fergus Falls led 7-0 at halftime. The Spartans' initial first down of the game was a 25-yard pass completion from quarterback Perry Homan of Royal Oak, Mich. to 6-5 tight end LeeRoy Anderson of Sauk Rapids, who made an acrobatic catch in out-leaping a defender that was with him step-for-step at the Northland 49 midway through the second quarter. It was the Spartans' only pass completion of the day.

Six plays later fullback Tony Arampatzis of Miami, Fla. broke a 29-yard run off the right side and went into the end zone untouched. Brian Jensen's kick made it 7-0 with 6:52 remaining in the first half.

Only other points came in the fourth quarter when the Spartans had the stiff wind at their backs again. A 14-yard punt into the wind by Northland sophomore Jeff Westberg, who otherwise did an admirable job battling the elements during his busy 12-punt afternoon, put Fergus Falls in business at midfield with 11:27 left in the game. The Spartans collected two first downs in the seven-play drive — their only first downs of the second half — to set up a 13-yard scoring run by sophomore tailback Nolan Beverly of Columbia, Mo., who took the ball on a delay, read his blocks on the right side and like Arampatzis, was untouched on his touchdown run. The snap on the conversion kick was bobbled, leaving it 13-0 with 8:37 to play.

A fumble recovery by freshman defensive tackle Steve Forsberg of St. Cloud Tech at the Northland 20 gave Fergus Falls another shot, and even in losing three yards on three plays against the aggressive Northland defense, the winners captalized when Jensen, a freshman from Monticello, kicked a 40-yard field goal with 4:33 remaining. The wind helped the kick float through the uprights even though Northland's Mike Busse broke through and got a hand on the ball.

Fergus Falls' offense did little else the rest of the afternoon. The Spartans lost a touchdown when a 69-yard

ROLLING TO HIS right, Northland quarterback Scott Wiebolt ran the option as center Dave Kays (57) tried to help out with the backside blocking in the first quarter of Saturday's community college football game at Fergus Falls. The unbeaten Spartans, ranked No. 6 in the latest national polls, blanked the Northmen 16-0. Strong wind and rain, which started at halftime and continued throughout the second half, made playing conditions less than ideal, but the Fergus Falls field remained in remarkably near-perfect condition.

Bill Johnson scored three touchdowns and rushed for 115 yards; Dave Kragness threw two touchdown passes; and the defense scored eight points Thursday as Marshall County Central overwhelmed Tri-County 55-0 in a Top of the State nine-man high school football game played at Karlstad.

"We came out ready to play football," explained Marshall County Central coach Sam Gebhart, whose team has struggled through an up-and-down 4-3 season. "Attitude makes a lot of difference," he added. "They decided to come out and play football, and they did. We finally put things together for a change. We had some fun."

It wasn't fun for Tri-County, a surprise 15-10 winner over Hallock the week before. Hallock, in turn, had beaten Marshall County Central 10-6. The host Rabbits found themselves down 13-0 at the end of the first quarter and went into halftime trailing 26-0. The Nordics took a 34-0 game and made it an official rout with 21 fourth quarter points.

"It was probably one of our best games all year," noted Gebhart.

Scoring started when Rick Van Camp hauled in a 15-yard touchdown pass from Kragness in the first quarter, with Johnson going in from a yard out for his first touchdown of the night.

Johnson, who carried the ball 25 times for his 115 yards, scored on runs of three and five yards in the second quarter.

First of the two scoring plays by the Marshall County Central defense was a safety awarded to Grent Nelson, who tackled a Tri-County ball carrier in the end zone for the two-pointer. Kragness then passed 31 yards to Jeff Dahl to make it 34-0.

Fourth quarter scores included a 21-yard pass from Todd Stokke to Jamie Sagstuen; a 40-yard pass from Troy Broderson to Ross Olson; and a 20-yard return of a fumble recovery by Lowell Engen.

Marshall County Central finished with 368 yards, 247 on the ground and 121 in the air. Stokke complemented Johnson's yardage with 83 yards on just six carried. Dahl had 42 yards on just two pass receptions.

Defensively, Troy Swan was credited with nine tackles and a blocked punt; Ron Koesnter had seven tackles, including three quarterback sackes; Dahl came up with eight tackles; while Chris Hodne and Stokke both had interceptions.

Marshall County Central will visit Argyle Wednesday. It'll be the second meeting of the year between the two teams, with the Eagles posting a 28-7 decision the first time. The Nordics close out their 1981 season Tuesday, October 27, vs. Hallock.

Tuesday Games Are Scheduled

Another full round of Tuesday games in the North Tri County high school football conference will be played tomorrow, with unbeaten Middle River trying to clinch a shot at a Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) nine-man state football playoff berth at home against defending conference champion McIntosh-Winger.

A win by the Skippers will put them into the qualifying round of the MSHSL state playoffs, where they would face the winner of a preliminary game matching the Northern Lights and Top of the State conference winners. Actual nine-man state playoffs start at the next step — the quarterfinal stage.

Last week's North Tri County Conference games were all Tuesday affairs, too, with McIntosh-Winger beating Grygla-Gatzke 34-14, Gonvick-Trail handled Goodridge 36-8, Middle River routed Mentor 44-6, Erskine defeated Oklee 36-6 and Clearbrook stopped Plummer 40-6.

Final week of North Tri County Conference games will also be played on a Tuesday, October 27, because those state nine-man qualifying games must be completed no later than Nov. 3. State playoff quarterfinals will be completed by Nov. 7.

Sites for qualifying games will be played at the school which is located geographically east of the other participating schools, while state playoff quarterfinal games will be played at the school which is located geographically west.

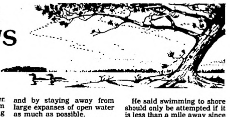
TURNING HIS BACK and trying to run away didn't help Fergus Falls quarterback Perry Holman, who was sacked by Northland defensive end Mike Busse Saturday on the Spartans' first offensive series of Saturday's community college football game played in Fergus Falls. The Northmen continued their outstanding defensive play, but still lost by a 16-0 margin to the MJCAA Northern Division-leading Spartans.

LINED UP IN a shotgun formation, Northland community college quarterback Scott Wiebolt had to run down a high center snap near mid-field in the second quarter of Saturday's Northern Division football game at Fergus Falls. Wiebolt got to the ball and even got a pass off on the play — incomplete. The unbeaten Spartans beat the Northmen 16-0.

DNR NEWS



Duck hunters run a greater risk from drowing than from being shot by a hunting campanion, according to Kim Elverum, boat and water safety coordinator for the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources.

Elverum told duck hunters they can avoid falling overboard or capsizing their craft by remaining low in the boat, avoiding overloading it with hunters, dogs, and equipment and by staying away from large expanses of open water as much as possible.

He said hunters can now buy comfortable personal flotation devices (PFD's or life preservers) in camouflage colors with full sleeves that will not only keep the hunter afloat but help retain body heat, increasing survival time in the cold water.

And he said that even if the hunter falls overboard wearing heavy clothing and chest waders he is not necessarily doomed.

"On the contrary," he said, "warm clothing is an asset in cold water. Those layers of clothing and the waders contain pockets of air that can increase buoyancy.

"In addition, water trapped between the clothing and the skin is warmed by body heat and acts as an insulator."

Elverum said that a hunter who falls overboard should try to re-enter the boat. If unable to do so, a hunter wearing a PFD should draw up his knees and keep his arms close to his sides for maximum heat conservation.

"If the hunter has no PFD," he said, "items such as gas cans, decoys and vacuum jugs can be used to remain afloat."

He said swimming to shore should only be attempted if it is less than a mile away since it will increase heat loss and shorten survival time.

An annual auction of firearms and other items of hunting and fishing equipment netted the Department of Natural Resources $31,410 at a sale held in the St. Paul Armory September 26.

Receipts topped last year's aution by $10,000, according to officials of the DNR's Enforcement Division.

The sale is held to dispose of guns and other equipment confiscated from violators of state game and fish laws. Returns from the sale are deposited in the state game and fish fund.

Monies in the fund are appropriated to the department for fish and wildlife management and for enforcement purposes.

A total of 447 items were auctioned off at the recent sale including 179 firearms. Highest price paid for any item was $475 bid on a 10 gauge Ithaca shotgun.

Study Being Done On Leech Life Cycle . . .

Leech Coveted As Prime Walleye-Catching Bait

(Editor's note: the following article, which should be of interest to fishing enthusiasts in the area, was written by Larry Windom of Detroit Lakes and appeared recently in the Becker County Record).

The leech.

Bloodsucker.

Animals that rank right down there with snakes, rats, maggots, grubs and the like.

Slimy, slippery, formless things usually seen only by man when they are found repugnantly attacked on his or her legs, feet or toes.

The term "leech" is one of the lowest of terms used in the English vocabulary. Synonyms listed in the dictionary include: bloodsucker, extortioner, sponger, usurer.

The dictionary also describes the leech as "any blood-sucking or carnivorus anquatic or terrestrial worm of the class Hirundinea, certain freshwater species of which were formerly much used in medicine for bloodletting."

Bloodletting . . . now the joke of medicine, where physicians would attach leeches to sick people in an attempt to draw out the poisons in the human system. Often, the leeches contributed more to the ill-health or death of the patient. Leeches may have been the death of George Washington.

Yet, this disgusting little critter is becoming much desired, especially in Minnesota. A reported 50 tons of them are purchased yearly in Minnesota.

Why? Because the leech has one asset . . . it catches fish. It really catches fish. And that is enough to redeem this lowly creature in the eyes of Minnesotans . . . most of which are fishermen.

The leech is the hot bait of the day.

What's more it is fast becoming known as the bait to use when catching the walleye. And the walleye is the king fish in this neck of the woods.

To be fair, let's note here that the poor leech just doesn't live up to his (or is it her-each leech, like the earthworm, has both sex organs) bad reputation anyway.

In truth, all leeches are clumped together by the uninformed. Some leeches are unjustly tagged due to the reputation of a relative.

Take the bloodsucking reputation. Not all leeches suck blood. And the fisherman (and fisherwoman) will be pleased to know that the leech used to catch fish is not the leech which will suck blood from man.

There are, in fact, 30 different species of leeches recorded in the state. Some are big, some small. Some swim, some crawl. Some suck blood, some are scavengers.

And only one, possibly two, is super fishing bait. And that leech is nephelopsis abscura, the ribbon leech.

That's the leech that's found hanging on 99.9 per cent of the hooks.

Demand for this leech is high . . . so high, in fact, that there are fears that the ribbon leech supply will be depleted.

That wasn't always the case.

Twenty years ago, few fishermen know about the leech.

The craze did seem to start in this neck of the woods though, according to one local "leech expert," sometime in the early 60s. In about 1965 or so, some bait stations were starting to stock the leech. In the 70s, the leech's reputation as a bait "took off"

The leech expert, Dirk Peterson aquatic biologist for the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, says he's heard stories of how the leech became popular.

Seems there was a Michigan man who came to the area to trap leeches for sale to a biological supply house back East. He started to get local anglers to try them out . . . and the word spread.

But it's only a story, cautions Peterson; it could be true, there could be a grain of truth to it, or it could be false.

Peterson's job, headquartered at the DNR fish hatchery just west of Detroit Lakes, is to find the "truth" about the leech . . . not the "where" it came from, but the "whys," "hows," and "whats" of the little known creature.

After all, when fisherman in one state buy an average of 100,000 pounds each year for the past three years, it is time to take a closer look at the animal. And when these same fisherman spend $1½ million at retail value for these 50 tons of leeches, it is time to take a very close look at the animal.

"It's enough impetus to investigate this animal," says Peterson. "Very little is known about the animal, even how long it lives. And first, you have to know that in order to manipulate it to your advantage."

In the third year of a three-year DNR and University of Minnesota study on the leech, Peterson and associates are starting to separate fact from reputation.

Thanks to the study, for example, there is now evidence that leeches live for two years. The leech seems to spawn in July, then die soon after. There are still many unknowns. How the leech survives the winter, for example. "But all that matters is that they do survive," Peterson notes.

Benefits from knowing more about the leech are many. The fisherman, of course, will be benefitted. The bait dealer, too, would be benefitted. And the state's economy in general would improve.

The leech, it seems, already popular in-state, is destined to become on of the state's export items as the "good" side of the creature becomes known across the boarders.

Peterson sees the leech going the way of the sucker minnow . . . the state's first attempt to help bait dealers fill a demand with a supply.

In the late '30', there was a shortage of good pike-sized minnows of 4 to 6 inches in length. In the '40s, the DNR experimented with sucker minnows, eventually coming up with a method of using small rearing ponds which suffer winter kills yearly.

Today, says Peterson, 95 per cent of sucker minnows for sale come from private rearing ponds, many of them in the Detroit Lakes area.

It was the state's first attempt at bait culture and it was a success. Today, there are always 4 to 6 inch bait fish available.

The leech and the leech industry seems to be heading in a similar course . . . with the present study paving the way.

"I'm into production," says Peterson.

One of the key answers being sought is to find why there are periodic shortages of leeches. It is thought by many, fearfull, that leeches are being overharvested.

That may not be the case, says Peterson. While overharvesting may be possible in individual ponds, the problem seems to be in the leech's own life cycle rather than in harvesting by man.

Luckily, the leech's life cycle seems to peak (when they are most abundant and largest) right about the time the season opens for walleye in the spring. What a tremendous coincidence for the fisherman at a time when fishing pressure is greatest . . . nature's law working with man's law, Peterson comments.

Unfortunately, those in the second year of their life cycle deposit egg cocoons in midsummer . . . and then die. What this leaves, then, is not a lack of leeches, but a lack of large leeches in early fall. One goal is to find a way to manipulate the life cycle so that leeches are more available year-round. "That's still to be worked on," says Peterson.

Of key interest to dealers is the potential market outside the state. Leeches just don't grow everywhere. They grow in the northern tier of states and in Canada. Minnesota is the southern-most state to have a good population of leeches. Add to that thousands of ponds which are ideal living quarters for the leech . . . the small, pea-green mucky ponds scattered throughout the area and the types of ponds in the Vergas area which Peterson is using in his experiments. Minnesota, especially northwest Minnesota, is prime leech habitat.

New Minnesota law passed in 1978 added bait leeches to the list of export baits, previously including only the sucker and flathead minnow.

Suddenly, we are looking at a renewable resource which could bring money into the state. "It'd be a plus for the economy of Minnesota," underlines Peterson. "The

Athletic Teams At Lincoln Remain Idle During Strike

Continuation of the Thief River Falls teacher's strike will mean additional forfeits for the Lincoln high school athletic teams in the days ahead.

This week's sports schedule would have featured volleyball, cross country, girls swimming and football.

The Lincoln volleyball team was to have hosted Moorhead Tuesday and played at Fisher Thursday; the swimmers were to entertain Grand Forks Central Tuesday and compete at the Brainerd invitational Saturday; cross country runners planned to challenge for championship honors in the Northwest Athletic Conference meet at Bemidji Tuesday and were figured to be a strong entry in the Region 8AA meet in Alexandria Saturday; while the football team was slated to play at East Grand Forks Friday.

Meanwhile, Northland community college athletic teams will be idle until this weekend. The Northland volleyball team, 9-8 overall and 3-0 in Northwest Division-counting play, will play at Brainerd Friday at 6:30 p.m. and will return home to host Rainy River Saturday in an 11:30 a.m. match in the Northland gym.

Northland football, 2-4 in the MJCAA Northern Division, will close out its 1981 home season Saturday when the Northmen host Itasca in a 1:30 p.m. game on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

Detroit Lakes, Alexandria To Play For Title

Detroit Lakes and Alexandria were scheduled to meet today (Monday) at 4 p.m. at St. Cloud in the Region 8AA girls tennis tournament championship match.

The Lakers won the North Half Region 8AA tournament with a 5-0 victory over Bemidji in Tuesday's finals, with the Cardinals beating Little Falls 3-2 in the South Half Region 8AA title match.

Individual portion of the Region 8AA tennis tournament will be played Tuesday at St. Cloud's Augusta Tennis Club.

Detroit Lakes' Bonnie Berenz won the North Half Region 8AA singles title Wednesday, with Bemidji's Wendi Enright and Jill Dunphy emerging as the surprise winners in doubles.

Matches in both the North and South Region 8AA tennis tournaments were altered because of teacher strikes at Thief River Falls, Crookston, St. Cloud Apollo and St. Cloud Tech.

BSU Scientist Is Attraction For Peat Symposium

Scientists in Finland, Scotland, Canada, China, Russia and Germany are paying close attention to the work of Dr. Charles Fuchsman of Bemidji state university (BSU). They consider him a United States expert on non-fuel peat science.

This attention has led to the first scientific gathering in the United States devoted mainly to non-fuel uses of peat. Scientists from six countries are joining Fuchsman in Bemidji October 21-23 for an international peat symposium where papers will be presented on the most recent peat research.

Widely used throughout the world as fuel and a gardening aid, peat has been eyed recently as a possible source for natural gas. Applications of this resource, however, may cover a wide spectrum including sewage treatment, food production, medicine and preparation of industrial chemicals.

Fuchsman has been conducting his research for nine years as director of BSU's center for environmental studies. He is the author of 21 United States patents, numerous journal publication and, more recently, a book.

The book has received an international reputation. A researcher from the Chinses Academy of Sciences, who picked up a copy in Finland, indicated that the publication will probably be widely distributed in China. There have been inquiries about sending Chinese graduate students to Bemidji to study with Fuchsman.

The book represents the first attempt at summarizing, for the American reader, a century of European experiences in the production of chemicals from peat. "When I put it all together, it became quite popular even among the Europeans who furnished much of the information I used," says Fuchsman.

Fuchsman, 64, has been an industrial research scientist most of his working life. He was born in New York and has lived in Nevada, New Mexico, Texas, New York and Ohio.

He reads and translates Russian, German, French and Spanish, has an understanding of several other languages, and has studied Chinese. He reads voraciously on many subjects and speaks an awesomely articulate brand of English.

How does this BSU scientist feel about suddenly becoming an international authority on peat chemistry? "There is an element of truth in stories about my being regarded as a peat expert," he says thoughtfully. "I have become an expert by concentrating on certain areas of peat science not studied in detail by many others. In those areas I am perhaps regarded by a number of people as being a little more knowledgeable."

Fuchsman became involved in peat research after the 1973 oil crisis. The Minnesota department of natural resources asked him to serve on a peat advisory board. As the only member to have read anything about European peat chemical technology, Fuchsman was asked to carry out a survey of the industrial chemical potential of peat.

His study eventually focused on chemicals that can be obtained from peat to replace petroleum-related compounds used as ingredients in plastics and adhesives, as specialty waxes, or as base for the production of high protein livestock fodder.

Fuchsman finds his work, "intellectually satisfying." As a professor in the environmental studies program which he instituted at BSU, he places great emphasis on research as an element of a university education. "All teachers of science," he explains, "should be doing useful research as part of their obligation to the university community. Unless the teacher is stimulated by a challenging, intellectual problem, instruction tends to become stale, jaded."

Fuchsman derives his intellectual satisfaction from the knowledge that his work is potentially beneficial for mankind and the natural world.

"Helping people was very high on the calendar of values in our home," he says of his immigrant parents who stressed the need for education to solve mankind's problems. "I find that there is a transmission of values from one generation to the next."

Of his three children, a son is a professor of chemistry, a daughter is a research geneticist at Harvard and another daughter is a physician.

Conversations with him reveal that he is always thinking ahead, anticipating more travel, new investigations, perhaps other lines of research.

"Think of today's first quarter student of calculus," Fuchsman challenges. "He has a deeper understanding of calculus than Newton, who was an incredibly profound human being. We are building on Newton. The history of science is one of cumulative knowledge. We can keep building and aspiring to things that people in the past couldn't dream of. I find that an attractive perspective of modern life."

Fuchsman has a hushed, library kind of voice. He appears thoughtful, quiet and gentle to most people, possessed of an old-world courtliness. His students enjoy what they call his, "odd sense of humor".

He is respected on the university campus not only because of his character and accomplishments, but also because he is a scientist with a social conscience.

"He cares about the consequences of his discoveries," commented a fellow faculty member. "He is continually asking: if we can produce wax from peat, what will it do for the country, to the ecology? How much damage might result from mining peat?"

"Fuchsman is an extraordinary asset to this university. I'm glad he is gaining such international renown."

Information of the International Peat Symposium can be obtained by contacting the Center of Environmental Studies, Bemidji State University, Bemidji, Mn. 56601, (218-755-2910).

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q — My father was a veteran whose grave marker has been damaged by the weather over the years. Is it possible to have it replaced?

A — Yes. Replacements for damaged markers may be requested by writing: Veterans Administration, Monument Service, Department of Memorial Affairs (42), 810 Vermont Avenue N.W., Washington, D.C. 20420. The cost of the replacement will be paid by the government if weather-worn to the extent it is no longer legible.

Q — I am entitled to hospital treatment at Veterans Administration medical centers because I am 100 per cent disabled from service-connected causes. Is there any similar medical care available for my family?

A — Your family may be entitled to the VA's Civilian Health and Medical Program (CHAMPVA). This is a medical benefits plan through wich the VA helps to pay for medical care obtaind from civilian sources by certain dependents of veterans with permanent and total service-connected disabilities. The surviving spouse and children of veterans who died as a result of a service-connected disability, or of veterans permanently and totally disabled from service-connected disabilities at the time of death are also eligible.

CONSTANT MOWING this summer was required to keep the approximately three acres of farmstead on the Harlow Johnson farm in trim. The Johnsons have been selected as recipients of the farm beautification contest conducted by the Pennington soil and water conservation district. Buildings are kept painted and in good repair and tree plantings have helped improve the area. Buildings are edged with chemical for a few inches to prohibit vegetative growth, making it easier to trim around them. Moisture this summer made the grass grow quickly and resulted in the constant attention to mowing.

farm. A new house was built in the fall of 1969 and occupied in the spring of 1970. A hip roof barn was located on the farm and is still maintained. Other buildings added include a pole building constructed in 1967 and enclosed in 1970 for machine storage; a 40x72 steel building used for machinery and shop; a 50x100 steel building built in 1978 for grain and machinery; and grain bins built in 1965, 1971, 1973 and 1977, having total storage capacity of 22,700 bushels.

A farmstead windbreak was planted in 1968, utilizing spruce, dropmore elm, boleana poplar and honeysuckle. Field drainage has been an important part of farm development, along with soil testing and crop rotation with wheat, sunflowers and barley. Nitrate fertilizer is used extensively and last year a specialized service was employed to make recommendations on fertilizer and chemical application for weeds and insect pests.

Caring for the lawn is made easier with the use of three mowers — a tractor mounted mower which takes a five-foot cut and is used in the more open areas, a riding mower which takes a 39-inch cut and a small rotary mower for close trim work. Harlow does most of the hedge and tree trimming and Gloria cares for flowers in flower beds, along with the house and in planters.

One practice which helps keep the yard neat is the application of a herbicide for a few inches along buildings which kills all vegetation and reduces the amount of hand mowing or trimming.

Helping with the work are the Johnson children: Lynn, 15; Karla, 14; Colleen, 12; Jane, 9; and Peter, 3. Lynn now spends much of his time helping his dad with field work but still puts in some time on the yard.

In addition to his farming, Harlow is president of the Production Credit association of Thief River Falls which just held the grand opening of its new building last week. He started with PCA in 1961, left the cooperative to serve as Pennington county register of deeds in 1967 and 1968, then returned to PCA and became manager in January of 1969.

Gloria is co-chairman elect of the women's organization at Calvary Lutheran church in St. Hilaire, is a past officer of the Rocksbury homemakers club, a Sunday school teacher and a member of the area food cooperative. She enjoys caligraphy, reading and raising house plants.

Harlow has held most of the offices in the Calvary congregation, hunts deer nearly every season and the entire family enjoys traveling and camping. They have visited the Canadian Rockies, the Duluth and North Shore area and Montana, among other places. In 1979 they hosted a Norwegian exchange student and last year Lynn was an exchange visitor to Norway. The four older children are members of the Happy Acres 4-H club.

Members of the Pennington soil and water conservation district since 1964, the Johnsons will receive a plaque signifying their selection at the annual meeting of the district early next spring.

Says Parental Disruption Is On Decline

Mary Jo Bane, Wellesley college professor, views statistics on rising divorce rates, single-parent families and mothers in the work force from a historical perspective in her book, "Here To Stay: American Families In The 20th Century".

In case you've missed the statistics, in 1979 the number of new divorces was more than half the number of new marriages. More than 15 million children live in single-parent homes, and the largest increase in labor force participation is among women with young children.

Bane contends that divorce today is disrupting families in the same way that death did in earlier times, but there's an important difference. The proportion of children affected by "parental disruption" actually has declined over the last century, she says.

More children today live with at least one parent than in the past when they were more likely to be sent off to grandparents or orphanages. Most orphanages have been replaced by individual welfare assistance that have had the effect of keeping the family together.

Family commitments, Bane says in her book, "are not archaic remnants of a disappearing traditionalism, but instead are persisting manifestations of human needs for stability, continuity and non-conditional affection." She says marriage is "still a pervasive and enduring institution".

Nevertheless, the will of families to persist suffers pressure both from within and without. Family members try to balance individual interests with responsibilities to home, family and community. Particularly critical are burdens on single parents, and low-income households with young children where both parents must work away from home.

Employers can address such problems by considering work schedules that coincide with school hours or are otherwise more flexible, more part-time jobs, time off for family matters, earned sabbaticals, extended leaves of absence, and other experiments to give workers greater control over their lives. According to the Minnesota Women's Education Council, employers who have tried such programs report financial benefits in terms of lower employee turnover rates, fewer lost days of work, greater worker satisfaction and other positive results.

Enrollment At BSU Is Better Than Projected

Due primarily to a significant increase in the number of freshman enrollees, Bemidji State University enrollment has risen slightly for the second consecutive year.

Figures recently released by the university reveal that the largest class of incoming first-year students in three years, 980, helped lift the fall quarter headcount to 4,411, more than last fall.

The 980 count is 109, or 12.5 per cent, higher than the class of 1980 and the largest since 1,028 attended in the fall of 1978 when the headcount was listed at 4,250.

Also contributing to the gain were undergraduate students who chose to continue studies at the University. Last fall 2,793 undergraduates were on hand for the tenth day of classes while the number rose to 2,875 in 1981.

Offsetting the increases were declines in graduate (1980-226, 1981-153), transfer (355-297) and unclassified (129-106) students.

While the headcount (those students actually taking classes) has grown by 37, the total full-time equivalency (FTE) figure is up 14 over last fall, from 4,193 to 4,207. FTE is determined by dividing credit hours generated campus-wide by an average student load of 15 credits.

All of the enrollment figures are unofficial as far as state university system budget considerations are concerned.

Totals are important, however, when viewed in another perspective. Projections for Bemidji State University had indicated that the school would experience an enrollment reduction this fall to a headcount of 4,270. Fall 1981 figure is 141 greater than anticipated.

"We are elated with the enrollment picture for the coming year, especially when it is compared with the projections," BSU President Dr. Rebecca Stafford commented. "The increase shows that students have confidence in the quality education we provide. Our faculty and staff can be proud of the work being performed at Bemidji State University.

"At the same time, we cannot afford to settle with our current registration. We must continue our efforts to show prospective students the benefits of becoming involved with the programs and people at our university."

BSU fall term enrollments have fluctuated since hitting a high of 4,865 in 1971. The lowest figure of the past decade, 4,127, was experienced in 1974, with the headcount rising nearly seven per cent in eight years.

In 1962, the first machinery created to promote unionization and collective bargaining in the federal government was established by Executive Order 10988 issued by President John Kennedy, according to "Labor Firsts in America," published by the U.S. Department of Labor.

OPEC Expert Predicts Stable Oil Prices

Price of OPEC oil should stabilize near the current average price and remain there for several years — if there are no major disruptions in the oil-producing countries.

That is the studied prediction of Sharif Ghalib, vice president of the Chase Manhattan bank in New York and an expert on the economics of OPEC. Ghalib spoke recently in Duluth and St. Paul as part of a panel of Middle East experts for a University of Minnesota program.

OPEC countries have been bickering for more than a year over a standard price. Average price per barrel is $34. Saudi Arabia, the largest petroleum producer, sells at $32 per barrel, while some other OPEC members sell for as much as $40 a barrel. This disagreement over price has led some oil experts to predict the collapse of OPEC.

"The cartel is not about to disintegrate," Ghalib said. "The salvation for OPEC lies in the Saudis having the ability to fulfill current revenue needs while cutting back production."

Since the beginning of 1981, there's been a glut of oil on the market, Ghalib said. "Consumption of oil by industrial countries dropped 7 per cent last year, and will probably fall another four per cent this year," he said. "Larger-than-normal stockpiles of oil caused by overreaction to the Iranian revolution and the Iran-Iraq war are now being tapped because they are too expensive to hold."

Final reason for the glut of oil is that the Saudis have kept their production high, Ghalib said.

So why are the Saudis helping to decrease oil prices? "It's not altruism, but enlightened self-interest," Ghalib said. "The Saudis have proven oil reserves that will last for many years. They're concerned that too rapid an increase in prices will force industrial countries to convert to other energy sources and endanger the long-term oil market."

Saudi Arabia is concerned that inflation driven by high increases in oil prices will erode foreign investments and make imports more expensive. They're also aware that sensitivity to the economic well-being of other countries can reap political dividends, Ghalib said.

But these arguments do not particularly impress countries like Nigeria, Venezuela and Algeria, which have small reserves of oil and an immediate need for cash, he said.

Saudi Arabia has offered to cut back its oil production in return for a uniform OPEC oil price of around $34 a barrel, Ghalib said. Although no agreement has been reached at the last three OPEC meetings, "opposition to the Saudi plan is not overwhelming," he said, giving the next OPEC meeting in December a 50-50 change of establishing a standard price.

"Saudi Arabia is wealthy enough to reduce its oil production by 40 per cent," Ghalib said. "By cutting production, Saudi Arabia could allow Algeria, Nigeria and Venezuela to fulfill their revenue requirements by pushing their production to the maximum, while charging a lower price."

Even if the price of crude oil stabilizes at a lower figure, it's difficult to predict how that would affect gasoline and fuel oil prices in the United States, Ghalib said. Factors like domestic production costs could make U.S. fuel prices rise even while OPEC prices are falling, he said.

Ghalib spoke at two conferences in a series of six that bring experts on the Middle East to Minnesota communities. Later this fall there will be conferences in Moorhead, Rochester and Morris.

The program series is funded by grants from the international communication agency, the Minnesota humanities commission and the league of Arab states. Grants were awarded to the University of Minnesota department of conferences and the department of near and Middle Eastern studies.

Bicycles Share Road And Rules With Motorists

Bicyclists share the same road with motorists — and the same driving rules.

Many consider bicycles to be a fun and easy way to take short trips, and may not always pay attention to bicycling rules. Staying alert and obeying traffic signs and signals is crucial to keeping traffic flowing smoothly and safely. Acting unpredictably on a bicycle can be fatal.

Even if you've been riding a bike for years, a periodic review of biking rules could prevent an accident. Before children begin riding alone to school or a nearby park, be sure they are aware of the importance of rules of the road.

For safe pedaling, Minnesota AAA offers the following tips:

—Obey all traffic signs and signals. Stop signs mean stop; not roll through.

—Drive on the right of the roadway in the same direction as traffic. If a car comes onto the shoulder and runs into you when you are riding with traffic, you will probably be thrown away from your bike and the car. If the same situation occurs when you are riding against traffic, you will probably be thrown into the windshield of the car, and badly injured or killed.

—Know bicyclist's hand signals and use them. Minnesot law now allows you to point in the direction you intend to turn.

—Give cars and pedestrians the right of way. In an argument between a motorist and a bicyclist, the motorist rarely loses.

—Stop, look and listen when approaching intersections. Walk your bike across busy intersections and streets.

—Make sure motorists see you. Wear brightly colored clothing and use proper reflectors on your bike.

—Use bike paths and lightly traveled streets when possible.

—Pass carefully. Watch for opening car doors.

Watch what is going on all around you as well as directly ahead. On a bicycle, you cannot be seen by motorists as easily as a large vehicle.

general orthopedics); and handicapped children in schools (cerebral palsied children, children with muscular dystrophy, Werdnig-Hoffman disease — infantile spinal-muscular atrophy, Guillian-Barre' disease and sensory-motor coordination problems). Children currently aided by therapists through Northwestern hospital range in ages from three to 10 and are visited at the schools twice a week.

For long-term patients, therapists evaluate the functional ability of the patients and design individual therapy programs for them, just as exercise programs are developed for each particular acute care patient. Therapists also train the CNC nursing staff to follow-up with rehabilitation for their patients. Periodic follow-up is done by physical therapists to assure that the rehabilitation program is carried out properly.

The second day Candi arrived at Northwestern hospital, she began to respond to those around here, according to Steve Young, chief physical therapist at the hospital, who is working with Candi on walking activities as well as mat activities (kneeling, and balancing and strengthening weak muscles), while occupational therapists are working with her to dress herself and redevelop fine motor skills.

Therapists began working with her an hour per day, and now work with her approximately two hours per day, according to Young.

Candi describes her stay at the rehabilitation center in Grand Forks as a 'dream' which she is thankful is over. "I wanted to be in Thief River all the time I was there (Grand Forks)," she smiled. In the Grand Forks rehabilitation center, Candi kept her eyes closed because she thought she was sleeping, she said. When people came to visit, she didn't look at them or speak to them — to Candi they were people who were in her dream. "You don't talk in dreams," she explained.

"The first time I talked here (Northwestern hospital), my voice sounded so soft," she said. "I couldn't believe it." Her first words, "Good morning," were uttered to a nurse in her hospital room.

When Candi arrived in Thief River Falls, she believes she "ran out" of her dream, she said. It was time to wake up. Although she believed only three minutes of her life had passed when she awoke, in reality a period of three months had elapsed.

"I remember it was Monday and it was my niece's birthday. I was so glad I woke up for that," she smiled. "I wouldn't have wanted to miss it."

When Candi first arrived in Thief River Falls she said it seemed as if each day lasted forever. But now the days have begun to go faster.

"I wasn't as happy before as I am now," Candi smiled, as she rested in the therapy room in her wheelchair, her cane beside her. "I wasn't satisfied with my life before. I didn't know what I wanted to do. Now I'm excited all the time."

Candi admits to being depressed — sometimes — as she sits waiting patiently for the day when she will walk out of the hospital.

"But I don't get depressed often," she added. The many friends she has come to realize she has and her daily treatments given by hospital therapists help occupy her time.

"I think I could have just as well died," she said, tearfully. "But God didn't let me."

"I get excited when I think of walking out of there," she said. "But not too excited. I'm not planning on what day it will be but I'll walk out of here — alone. No one can tell me different." Candi doesn't remember having one dream since she's been at the hospital. "I don't care if I ever have one again," she said.

Candi is now eating any foods she wants, and finds it thrilling to again be able to taste what she is eating. She talks freely, walks as much as she can (with assistance) and carries with her determination.

STEVE CONELY, 8, who was involved in an automobile accident this summer, suffers from muscle weakness in his thighs and loss of motion in his left knee due to bilateral femur fractures, and a fracture of his left knee. Progressive resistive exercises using weights will help strengthen both legs as well as increase the motion in his left knee. Steve, who was in a body cast in Grand Forks for three and one-half weeks, and who relearned to walk at the medical center rehabilitation hospital in Grand Forks, uses crutches to make walking easier. Steve is treated by Steve Young, chief physical therapist at Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls. Importance of physical therapy and rehabilitation will be stressed this week at hospitals throughout the state in observance of physical therapy week, noted October 18-24.

HYDROTHERAPY treatments are given to Millie Ness by Charlie Bigelow, registered physical therapist at Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls, to ease the pain Mrs. Ness experiences in her hand due to a fracture. Whirlpools are used for pain relief and to assist in programs involving stretching and strengthening exercises. Physical therapy week is being noted this week at the hospital to stress the importance of physical therapy in the process of rehabilitation.

"She has made a remarkable recovery," according to Young.

Information supplied on physical therapy indicates that determination and motivation are key factors in the rehabilitation of most physically impaired patients, as well as physiologic potential.

Various types of therapy used by therapists at the hospital to treat patients include gait training (walking) different types of exercises, heat and cold treatments, traction, ultraviolet therapy and hydrotherapy. Therapists also evaluate and fit patients for proper use of assistive appliances and equipment.

Steve Conely, 8, son of Linda Conely, Thief River Falls, is presently undergoing a series of progressive resistive exercises (using weights) to strengthen his leg muscles.

A head-on collision between two pickup trucks last June resulted in the death of Steve's father, Donald, along with injuries to Steve, his younger brother, Michael, and the boys' mother.

Steve suffered bilateral femur fractures (upper leg), a fracture of his left knee, and a fractured left wrist. He was in traction for five weeks at United hospital in Grand Forks before being transferred to the medical center rehabilitation hospital in Grand Forks for two and one-half weeks where he relearned to walk.

He came to Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls in September to begin receiving therapy treatments.

As a result of the accident, Steve suffers muscle weakness in his thighs, and loss of motion in his left knee, Young said.

Objective of the hospital therapy department, according to Young, focuses on increasing motion in the patient's left knee and strengthening muscles in both legs.

Physical therapy week will be observed nationwide October 18-24, with several activities planned at Northwestern hospital to stress the importance of physical therapy and the process of rehabilitation.

Milan Knapp, M.D., the first physiatrist (physical medicine and rehabilitation specialist) in the state of Minnesota, will be at the hospital October 22 to talk with legislators about the role of physical therapy in rehabilitation. Meeting will include a noon luncheon and discussion with a tour of the physical therapy department. Knapp has been consulting with Northwestern hospital for 22 years.

Physical therapy department at Northwestern hospital will be conducting two inservice sessions, directed by Steve Young, October 19 and 21.

October 19 session, geared toward the nursing staff, will focus on gait (walking) patterns used in physical therapy, while the October 21 session will deal with the use of physical therapy in pain management.

Fire Safety Drill Can Save Family Lives

"Operation E.D.I.T.H. (Exit Drills In The Home) is an important plan that can save your life and the lives of everyone in your family. By gathering your family together and developing a home fire escape plan you are preparing your family to react correctly in case of fire," according to Allen Petry, executive director of the Fire Safety foundation in Fargo, ND.

"The first step in protecting your family is the installation of a smoke detector on each level of your home. It can provide the early warning to allow your family to escape before the fire becomes too large. Be sure to test your detector each month," he said.

"The next step is planning your escape routes. Remember that your smoke detector can only warn you of danger; it is up to you to act correctly. Find two ways out of each room, the usual way and one to use in case of fire or smoke has blocked the normal exit.

"By sleeping with your bedroom door closed you can keep smoke out. If you hear the smoke detector, be sure you feel the door before opening it. If it is hot, smoke and fire could be right outside. Use the emergency exit. If it is cool, brace your shoulder against it and open it slowly; be ready to slam it shut if smoke comes in. If you have to pass through smoke, crawl; the best air is near the floor," he reminded.

"Your family should have a meeting place outside your home. Never delay your escape by gathering personal belongings and don't re-enter the building once you have left. Leave rescues for the fire department.

Be certain that each member of your family knows where the nearest phone is. Never call from the building which is on fire. After you have developed a plan, practice it regularly. The Fire Safety foundation wants to remind you that fires start by accident, but that fire safety is no accident. Make every week of the year fire prevention week," Petry added.

Tampering With Farm Exports Is Criticized

U.S. secretary of state Alexander Haig isn't "winning any points" with America's farmers, according to Merlyn Lokensgard, president of the Minnesota Farm Bureau federation.

In a strongly worded statement, Lokensgard said Haig's "ill-advised and unwarranted tampering" with exports of agricultural commodities "presumably to protect vital U.S. interests" is taken by the farming community as "the wrong signal."

Lokensgard criticized Haig and the state department for recent restrictions on export sale of farm products. "We simply cannot have our agricultural exports held hostage in the name of political expediency or foreign policy," he said. He referred to Haig's reported intervention in a possible purchase by the Soviet Union of 220 million pounds of surplus butter.

"The world market has impediments enough," said Lokensgard, "without the state department's top official alienating both farmers and foreign customers. With bumper grain crops in prospect, farmers have little need to be penalized by market disruptions brought on by federal intervention and government manipulation.

"We need to be assured that there will be a free and unfettered access to markets both at home and broad," Lokensgard added. "Holding farm commodities off selected world markets in an attempt to discourage the nation's enemies is a weak and ineffective political approach."

Over $4 Million In SBA Loans Approved

Paul W. Jansen, district director of the Minnesota district office of the small business administration, announced this week that $4,382,000 in SBA guaranteed loans had been approved for 39 Minnesota companies in September. Projected additional employment created as a result of these loans in 751 jobs.

Direct management assistance was provided to 548 Minnesota firms through the small business administration's in-house counselors or through support groups like the service corps of retired executives and the 12 colleges participating in the small business institute program.

Consider All Costs When Collecting

Cost of collectibles is not as high as non-collectors may assume. Large auction houses sell the majority of their consignments for under $1,000 with many items going for under $400. But before buying, says the Minnesota Society of Certified Public Accountants (CPAs), investigate hidden costs of collecting, such as insurance, appraisals, storage and maintenance, and finally, the cost of resale.

CPAs suggest to first compare prices of different collectibles. Philatelists (stamp collectors) can expect to spend about $25 to $200 per stamp while a rare book collector could spend up to $3,000 a year. If collecting coins, spread yearly expense out to $50 or $100 per month. Remember that on any item bought at auction, a commission, usually 10 per cent, applies. Once the first collectible is bought, the collector may want to insure it. Most homeowner's or apartment dweller's policies cover personal items of value up to certain limits and for certain risks. Homeowners insurance offers coverage on a rate per $1,000 and probably costs more for any sizeable collection. Less expensive and more comprehensive insurance may be bought with a personal articles floater (PAF). While it might cost $250 to insure a $50,000 collection at the rate of $5 per $1,000 a PAF based on actuarial tables might cost only $50.

In order to insure a collection, more money may have to be spent. For example, if a collector has a large collection of diamonds in his house, the insurance company can require that be install a wall safe or a central burglar alarm system before the insurance is valid.

To properly insure collectibles, have them appraised every few years. According to CPAs, appraisals for insurance and tax purposes must be written. Appraisers and auction house experts usually charge a flat rate if the collection is small and a percentage of the value for larger collections. The Philatelic foundation offers certificates of authenticity which cost anywhere from $15 for a value less than $50 to a maximum fee of $750. Larger acution galleries may charge $100 or 3 per cent of the value.

Once a collection is acquired, it must be decided where to keep it. If a collector has a small collection purely for investment, a safe deposit box may be the answer. Depending on the size of the box and the bank, count on a minimum of $10 to $20 a year. If, however, a collector wants to display his collection, he has many options and price ranges. Stamp albums start at $1.50 and can run up to as much as $50 or $60. Art and decorative objects fit easily on a shelf or table.

CPAs advise that the value of some collectibles may be affected by the way they are displayed or stored. If, for example, old photographs are collected, ideal display conditions would include an air conditioned room and costly acid-free framing materials. Photographs would also require special plastic sleeves for proper storage. Cost of storage, display and maintenance can make a significant difference in collectible fields.

Best collector, CPAs note, is the informed collector. Cataloques, guides, newsletters, auction brochures, club dues and books can total $200 to $300 a year for many collectors. And unless a collection is enjoyed, CPAs say, the inestimable time and energy a collector expends might be the biggest expense.

Before selling a collection, it must be appraised. Most auction houses perform this service free if items are brought to them or if pictures and a description are supplied. A written estimate will cost more and if experts are asked to visit a home, the price could be, according to Christies, an international auction house, as high as $1,500 a day plus expenses. Fortunately, Christies and other galleries may refund their fee if a collector consigns his collection to them for sale within the year.

Finally, when the sale is complete, a seller's commission is paid. A 15 per cent commission applies to lower priced items; 10 per cent to higher priced consignments. If the auctioneer withdraws an item because of its reserve price, the commission is 5 per cent of the reserve. (The reserve price is the price below which a collector will not sell his collectible.) If the reserve is set with the house expert, however, no fee may be charged.

Check to see where to get the best price for collectibles, CPAs say. A private dealer charges higher commissions of up to 40 per cent, but might also draw a higher price for the collector.

Gas Supplies Off U.S. Coast Show Promise

Large deposits of natural gas still awaiting discovery and production on the Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) off the U.S. coastline could provide important new energy supplies for America.

Gas industry experts estimate possible OCS gas resources between 36 trillion cubic feet (Tcf) and 138 Tcf. When considered with onshore and supplemental sources of gas, these supplies could assure the U.S. of an adequate supply far into the next century.

Desire to develop more domestic energy sources has caused the federal government to make the OCS area more open to energy exploration and development efforts. U.S. Department of Interior is continuing the process of opening new OCS tracts for energy exploration, and by 1985 approximately 26 million acres of potential drilling sites in the Gulf Coast, Pacific Ocean and OCS area off Alaska could be avalable for leasing.

Drilling efforts in the Atlantic also continue. Texaco, representing a consortium of five major oil companies, announced a significant discovery of gas within months of beginning drilling in March, 1978, in the Baltimore Canyon area. Since that time, other gas finds have been reported and companies are continuing to pursue leases in the Atlantic.

The U.S. geological survey estimates total resources in the Atlantic offshore between 9.2 and 42.8 Tfc of gas and 1.1 to 12.9 billion barrels of oil.

Offshore drilling activity has recently commenced in the Georges Bank area by Exxon Corporation after a delay caused by environmental roadblocks.

Even after an OCS lease is obtained, there remains much potential for delays before exploration. The OCS Lands Act amendments of 1978 encourage state participation in the permit process and stress weighing of environmental guidelines against ultimate benefits of oofshore production.

The Interior Department, in implementing the act, however, made some efforts to remove environmental obstacles by allowing some early planning steps to be taken prior to issuance of a final environmental impact statement.

Several Congressional studies have determined that the greatest ovean pollution comes from tankers and urban waste rather than OCS drilling and production activities.

In the future, the U.S. could make use of domestic oil and gas supplies discovered on the outer continental shelf in order to reduce dependence on OPEC oil.

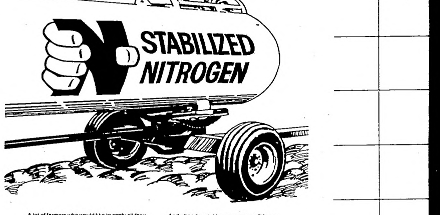
The fall-applied nitrogen that won't leave the soil when things are hot.



A lot of farmers who would like to apply all their nitrogen in the fall don't. And for one good reason: Nitrogen losses.

Which can run up to 50% in a warm, wet season when conditions are optimal for the bacteria that convert regular nitrogen into the forms easily lost.

But stabilized nitrogen resists those bacteria. Resists them so well, you can apply all your nitrogen in the fall and be sure it'll still be around to nourish your crop next spring.

And when harvest time arrives, you'll have another nice bonus.

Because farmers using stabilized nitrogen average bigger yields.

You see, stabilized nitrogen stays in the soil longer so crops get more nourishment. Therefore you get more crops.

Come in and see us. We'll show you how stabilized nitrogen lets you apply all your nitrogen in the fall.

Card of Thanks

I wish to express my gratitude to the following who made my 7-day stay at Northwestern hospital of Thief River Falls so pleasant:

First, of course, is Dr. William Ramsay for his successful surgery on my eye; then the kind and efficient nurses and aides who were always doing something for me; to the cooks for their delicious food — I could hardly wait for mealtime to come around. Then, I would like to express gratitude for my very congenial and friendly roommate, Mrs. Sterling Thom of Thief River Falls.

To the Hoffard family (also of TRF), Lowell, Janet, Timothy, Tony, Daniel, Jason and Melissa, a sincere thank you for making my week long stay in their home so much fun.

My sincere gratitude to Pastor and Mrs. Galen Ose for their very welcome visit and prayerful concern. Also, to chaplain Paul for his visit.

To others for cards, gifts, flowers, visits, but especially for prayers.

Last, but not least, gratitude to God for his healing and manifold blessings.

Help Your Heart

American Heart Association

Chemistry of a Heartbeat

The human heart beats 60-80 times a minute — about 100,000 times a day. In seeking to understand how this energetic organ is fueled, several American Heart Association-supported scientists have turned to a unique research tool. It's called nuclear magnetic resonance (NMR). It detects the flow of biochemical energy in living, working animal hearts. The experiments hold exciting hope for human patients because they promise a time when scientists will be able to detail the biochemistry of a heartbeat. This research may help your heart.

The three-dimensional imaging technique could revolutionize diagnostic medicine in the future. Since it's non-radioactive, non-invasive, and apparently harmless, it might be able to help diagnose disease and evaluate treatments in a patient's heart and other organs without risk. NMR could surpass the capabilities of CT (computed tomographic) scanners, which are highly sophisticated x-ray machines that have excited the medical world with detailed pictures of the body's internal structure. NMR imaging should go further. It is expected to provide high-resolution pictures of both structure and biochemistry.

Instead of x-rays, NMR uses magnets and radio waves to detect certain chemicals that occur naturally in the heart. One such chemical is phosphorus. The contraction of muscle, including heart muscle, is fueled by high-energy, phosphorus-containing compounds.

How does nuclear magnetic resonance work? A nucleus is the positively charged central core of an atom. Some nuclei spin like tops. Nuclear magnetic resonance involves using a magnetic field to orient the spinning nuclei. That orientation is then temporarily disturbed by a burst of energy from a radio-frequency transmitter. By measuring the amount of energy released as the spinning tops reorient themselves, the scientists can determine the number and chemical form of phosphorus nuclei in the sample. They also can produce a three-dimensional picture that represents the distribution of chemicals. Because it depicts energy metabolism, NMR provides a highly sensitive indicator of the heart's state, scientists say.

NMR's most important advantage is that it permits scientists to take rapid measurements of a sample of living tissue without damaging it or disturbing its normal metabolism. Other methods involve freezing the tissue or grinding it up and analyzing the extract. But with NMR, the measurements can be made in an intact, beating heart.

HOW'S YOUR HEALTH

Your physician's prescription for a medication for you may well be the most individualized thing you posess, says the Minnesota Medical Association (MMA). It was written especially for you. It was based on your age, your weight, and your physical condition. Your prescription was written following your physician's determination of what medication is best for you as well as how often and how long you should take it.

Your prescription is yours, and only yours. It should not be shared with a friend or relative who has similar symptoms. By sharing medications there is always a danger of taking the wrong medicine regardless of how similar the symptoms may appear. There is the additional hazard that any remaining portions of old prescriptions may have lost some of their potency with age. Sometimes the opposite is true, and the medicine becomes stronger with age.

Take your medication as directed on the container. Don't despair if the medicine does not make you feel better immediately. Give it time to take effect. Don't stop taking your medication if you begin to feel better after one or two days. Stopping a medication sooner than your physician intended may result in a relapse or a flare-up of the problem that the medicine was prescribed for. Do not hesitate to ask your physician if you have any questions about when the medication should be taken. If you notice a reaction to the medication, consult your physician immediately.

Maintain on up-to-date record of all medicines you are currently taking. Make this list available to any physician who intends to prescribe additional medicines. And if a medicine you are taking makes you slightly drowsy, be particularly careful when driving a car or operating any dangerous machinery.

Alcoholic beverages and medicine often do not mix well. Avoid the combination if there is any doubt. Pay attention to special directions about taking the medicine, such as "take before meals", "take after meals", or "take with milk", and "take for five days".

If you skipped a dose, don't try to catch up by taking a double dose without first consulting your physician. Normally, there should not be any medicine left over when it is taken as directed. However, in the event that there is any unused medicine left, you should let your physician know that. Don't store it on the shelf of the medicine cabinet. Old medicine should not be used even by the same person it was prescribed for, and for the same symptoms at a later date. Your physician should be contacted because a new prescription may be needed.

Are your sneezes more frequent? Are you experiencing a dripping, stuffy nose? Is post-nasal drip causing a scratchy throat and increased coughing? Do your eyes itch? Are they swollen and watery? Chances are that you are experiencing some of the classic symptoms of what is popularly referred to as hay fever.

Minnesota Medical association (MMA) notes that physicians prefer to call this common form of discomfort by its medical term, allergic rhinitis. The term "hay fever" may be misleading because hay is not responsible for this malady and there is no fever involved. Pollen is the culprit, more specifically the male cell of certain plants. When blown by the wind, some pollen can cause allergic reactions in some people.

In spring, pollens from certain trees may be responsible for hay fever starting in June and continuing well into the summer. Grass pollens are involved in allergic problems. In Minnesota, ragweed is the prime example of weed which becomes airborne and starts pollinating late in July and continues until a killing frost. Exposure to a cat or a dog or other household pet can also produce the symptoms of allergic rhinitis. Mold spores which start as soon as the snow leaves in spring and continue until the snow falls again are responsible for allergic symptoms in some people. Sometimes house dust can cause perennial allergic reactions which resemble hay fever. These symptoms may worsen during the heating season.

People often complain of repeated summer colds. For other persons, the classic stuffy, drippy nose, swollen and watery eyes, coughing and sneezing, is almost a year-round experience.

Treatment for allergic rhinitis may be symptomatic or the use of medications by mouth. These may include a wide range of antihistamines and decongestants, designed to produce the relief that the patient is looking for. However, the effectiveness may vary from patient to patient.

The second approach to the treatment of a allergic rhinitis is to identify the allergen through a series of tests and remove the offending substance from the environment of the patient. If, for example, animal dander is responsible, the patient will be told to improve dust control at home. If there is a pollen or mold sensitivity over which there is little control the patient may be counseled to go on to immunity therapy, usually referred to as hay fever shots. This type of treatment seeks to stimulate the body's own immunity system to build up sufficient tolerance or resistance to the offending allergen.

The first federal arbitration law was passed in 1888, according to a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor. The law applied only to railroad workers and provided for voluntary arbitration by a presidentially appointed three-man board to arbitrate labor disputes. The Commissioner of Labor served as the ex-officio chairman.

Leech Prime Walleye Bait

leech market is going to expand, in-state and in the export side."

The leech industry has become vital to sport fishing in-state, Peterson notes. "We've always had an increased of sport fishermen each year. The fourth largest industry in-state is tourism."

One of the leech's characteristics, its elasticity, is creating one of the greatest problems. A key to keeping the supply renewable is to leave the year-old leeches in the pond to create future supplies.

"Mid-June through mid-August is a time when you see two different sizes in the traps . . . that's the one-year olds and the two-year olds," explains Peterson. But there is no easy way to separate the two.

A mechanical method used to grade minnows, that of seining the small minnows through a mesh and leaving only the larger ones, will not work. Leeches have no set size. Peterson is working on a method using a fine mesh which seems to be doing the job, but the method is not commercially acceptable yet.

"Leeches are tricky," says Peterson. "They're so elastic. It's tough to get clear-cut definitions."

Presently, dealers visually sort leechs to grade size, with no standards state-wide.

And, as for the questions all fishermen ask, why do leeches catch fish, what kinds of fish are most attractive to leeches, and how does the leech compare to other baits?

No question about it, fish like leeches, and the ribbon leech's squirming while on the hook seems to be an added attraction.

In addition, all fish seem to like leeches. Peterson prefers going for bluegills with the leech and adds, "I can't see any reason why any sport fish wouldn't bite at leech, anywhere."

As for comparing the power of the leech to the power of other bait, Peterson carefully sidesteps the question. "But I will say this, you can't use a minnow again and again. And you're drowning a night-crawler."

Leeches, looking alike to the novice, are not.

As an example, a common method of separating the desirable ribbon leech from the similar looking but undesirable horse leech is to place all in a pail of water. The horse leech, using suction, can climb out. Ribbon leeches can't.

Different in another way are the ribbon and horse leeches' reactions on the hook. The ribbon leech struggles; the horse leech becomes limp . . . possibly the reason one is good bait; the other not.

There are about 30 different species of leeches in Minnesota waters.

Leeches come in all sizes. Stretched out, the giant horse leech can reach a foot in length. Then, there are the tiny, parasitic leeches . . . ones which can attach themselves on fish or on turtles.

Some leeches swim well. Others crawl, inch-worm style.

Some are parasitic, having the ability to create a wound to suck blood. Others are scavengers, eating larvae and worms.

Still, there are basic kinds of leeches.

There's the fish parasites, the very small ones. There's the turtle and snail leeches, the flat, leaf-shaped parasites with inability to swim.

There's the horse leeches, the giants, the soft, limp, mushy, docile leeches. Being scavengers, seldom, if ever, would they attach themselves to humans. Often, they are misidentified as the ribbon leech, but its jelly-like character gives it away. Color varies, but usually is drab green, brown, blotched or black.

There's the medicine leech, the only swimmer which is also a bloodsucker, the kind once used in medicine. It is easily identified by a row of bright red spots down its back.

Then, there is the popular ribbon leech. That's the leech so-named because its sharp margins along the edge of its body give it a ribbon appearance when swimming. Along with the ribbon leech is the tiger leech, smaller but so-named because of barely noticable stripes along its back. They probably are good bait, too, but are seldom used because they are small. Fishermen might do well to use this leech when going for crappies and bluegills.

The ribbon leech has a sandy to black color, and can appear spotted, while the belly is lighter and unspoted.

There are three good ways to tell a ribbon leech from the others, besides using color. First, it becomes active when held in the hand. Second, it is firm to the touch, not soft or jelly-like. Third, in a half-filled bucket, it remains in the water.

Usually, one of three kinds of leeches find their way into a bait container . . . the ribbon leech, horse leech and medicine leech.

Trapping leeches isn't difficult. Persons should select small, shallow lakes without a large fish population. A trap is nothing but a one gallon plastic or metal container, baited with bloody meat. Meat can be fish heads or whatever else is available. Set it in shallow water, leave it overnight and pull it up, as early as possible. If you find no leeches, keep moving, to another spot or pond, until you do.

It is legal in Minnesota to trap up to 24 dozen leeches without a commercial license.

One final tip . . . hook a leech on the small end. Novices often mistake the fatter end of the leech as the head. It isn't The sucker end is the tail.

Hook it about a quarter of an inch—from the end, a spot which one could call the neck and which is also one of the toughest spots on the leech. The hook should be inserted into the underside and pushed completely through. This method allows you to present the bait naturally when casting or trolling.

Spartans Beat Northmen 16-0

punt return by David Daniels of Cincinnati, Ohio was wiped out by a penalty, but the winners never had another serious scoring threat.

Northland had its chances on offense, but couldn't produce. A great run on a quarterback draw by Thief River Falls freshman Scott Wiebolt gave Northland a first down at the Fergus Falls 13 with 1:16 left in the first half as he picked his hole, broke tackles and kept his balance on a 13-yard, fourth-and-three effort. But three plays later Wiebolt was intercepted at the seven to end the threat.

Two excellent scoring opportunities were wasted in the third quarter. A 15-yard Fergus Falls punt into the wind gave Northland the ball at the Fergus Falls 21 with 8:19 left in the quarter, but four plays later a 39-yard Don Hudec field goal attempt came up short. Then with 1:17 remaining in the period, linebacker Steve Jorstad, a Thief River Falls freshman, recovered a Fergus Falls fumble at the Spartans' 34. But Westberg ended up punting four plays later from the 40.

AVTI Students Informed About Strike Actions

Students at the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute were informed by the administration prior to the strike by teachers regarding a number of matters that would affect them during the duration of the strike.

Dr. Orley Gunderson, director of the AVTI, said all students should have removed all personal property from the school prior to the strike. If there are unusual circumstances and a student must claim personal items during the walk-out, the student must report to the AVTI administrative offices and show proof of ownership of the item or items to be claimed.

AVTI offices will be open from 6:45 a.m. to 5 p.m. during the strike but all shops, laboratories, classrooms and instructional areas not in use will be locked.

Gunderson emphasized that students will have the opportunity to graduate from the program in which they were enrolled, but the date of graduation will depend on length of a strike and the procedures that are used to make up lost days — such as the Christmas and Easter breaks. He invited students with concerns to bring them to the attention of his office.

No checks are being disbursed to students from basic educational opportunity grants, supplemental educational opportunity grants, Minnesota grants-in-aid or guaranteed student loans. Work-study positions terminated in all areas where training programs are not in sessions.

Students were advised to contact other agencies from which they receive funds to learn of the affects on their individual situations. Veterans administration has extended benefits for 30 days, Gunderson said, and VA assistant recipients should be alert for VA correspondence during the next 30 days. CETA recipients will receive funds for two weeks. Status of WIN recipients was unresolved. No checks are being disbursed by the Minnesota division of vocational rehabilitation.

State law provides that if a strike occurs within the first 15 days of the tuition quarter, or within the first 15 days of the student's starting date, and the students wish to withdraw, they may request in writing and receive a refund for the full tuition quarter. If students wish to withdraw from school after the 15th day of the tuition quarter or the 15th day of their initial enrollment even though a strike occurs, no refund of tuition will be made. Tuition is $150 per quarter.

If students have paid tuition and classes are not in session due to a strike, tuition for those days will be credited to students when classes resume.

"Be assured that the administration and the board of education will do everything possible to insure you that you will be able to graduate from the program that you elected to enroll in at the AVTI," Gunderson said in a letter to students. "We will do our absolute best to keep you informed."

CQE projects may be funded for up to three years. Grants average $20,000. Most CQE projects are continued by the local district once state funding is done because they have been proven to be cost-effective. Property Tax Refund Checks Mailed In Mn.

Over $27.8 million in property tax refund checks, funded through the Minnesota circuit breaker program, have been mailed to about 175,000 Minnesota homeowners, according to Gov. Al Quie.

The payments to homeowners, when added to the refunds already mailed to renters, senior citizens and disabled homeowners, will result in over $168 million paid to 728,000 Minnesotans this year.

The average size of the 1981 homeowners' refunds is $159. Average refunds for all 1981 filers is $231.

Commissioner of Revenue Clyde Allen said the checks, mailed Tuesday, are timed to provide tax relief to Minnesota homeowners before the October 31 deadline for the second half of a homeowner's property tax payment.

The deadline for the homeowner refund application was Aug. 31, but people who have yet to file for the refund still have time to do so. However, Commissioner Allen says, a late filer's refund will be reduced by late filing penalties of 5 per cent per month, up to a maximum of 25 per cent.

Board And Teachers To Negotiate Again Thurs.

Responding to a request that a negotiating session be held prior to mediation scheduled for next Monday, the Thief River Falls board of education agreed Monday evening to negotiate with the striking Thief River Falls Education association (TRFEA) Thursday evening. It will be the first meeting of the two bodies since the strike began October 13.

Mike Lehrer, president of the TRFEA, made the request of the school board at its general meeting held at 8 p.m. in the school district service center board room. The Thursday session at 7 p.m. will be held in the Pennington county law enforcement center rather than on school district property.

Supt. Robert Block said the scheduling of negotiating session on Thursday and a mediation session on Monday may appear as though there is little hope for settlement at the negotiating meeting. However, the mediation session was scheduled nearly two weeks ago following another mediation meeting and will remain on the schedule unless agreement is reached. Any agreement will have to be ratified by a vote of the TRFEA membership.

All activities in School District 564 facilities have been curtailed unless individually approved by action of the board or superintendent. The board Monday approved use of the high school auditorium Saturday night ~~for the first~~ program in the Thief River Falls concert association season. Also given approval was the film series scheduled Sunday evening at the Lincoln auditorium.

Due to closing of the schools as a result of the teacher strike, lay-off notices have been given to 60 non-certified personnel including 21 cooks and helpers, 30 aides, eight swimming pool personnel and the crossing guard who works between classes on Main avenue between Lincoln high school and the Northwest vocational center.

Direction was given by the board of education for the administration to operate any complete program that it deems can be run with the return of striking staff members or the hiring of substitute staff. The action is applicable to all areas of the school system but aimed principally at the post high school AVTI. In the AVTI there are several programs in which students are within a week or two of completing their course requirements and have deadlines soon for employment of state certification testing.

In other action Monday evening the board accepted the resignation of David Lysaker as AVTI sales and marketing instructor and tabled all requests for leave until after the teacher contract has been settled. For positions in the process of being filled, the superintendent will post, advertise and interview but not hire until after the strike ends.

Because the salvage value of two 1973 International school buses is greater than their resale value, the board voted to salvage and scrap the two units. Two research proposals were approved for submitting — one on reviewing commercial agriculture computerized programs in the AVTI and the other on secondary agriculture education coordination. Approval of a grant application for education of refugee children was also approved.

Despite Area Concerns . . .

No Funds Available For Hwy. 59 Improvement

After listening to testimony of area citizens claiming a need to recondition highway 59 between Thief River Falls and Erskine from a seven-ton to a 10-ton route, highway commissioner Richard Braun responded Monday that, unfortunately, he didn't have any good news. "The sky isn't going to open" he said, referring to unavailability of funds for new construction or upgrading.

Noting that the only funds the state had available were for patch and repair work, he commented, "Our number-one priority is to maintain our existing investment." District engineer Bob Wolfe of the Minnesota department of transportation was commended for his work in redesigning and downgrading the original project, (which was cancelled in 1979) cutting the estimated cost from $4.5 million to $2.3 million; but he stated that no work could be done until the condition of the road had deteriorated to a certain level set by regulations.

Wolfe noted that the highway has been rated at 10 tons since August, a much higher level than it was originally designed for. He said that the heavier axle weights would cause more damage from fatigue and would effectively shorten the life of the road. He said his department was evaluating the road "almost every day", but indicated that nothing could be done until the evaluations showed it reached the required level of disrepair (determined by counting cracks, etc.). he noted that the department had to operate by "very clear rules."

Those speaking in favor of the rebuilding emphasized the economic importance of the route to the area. Chris Twomey, chairman of the chamber of commerce committee arranging the meeting, diagrammed area highways, and pointed out that with 10-ton routes on either end of the seven-ton section it created a "bottleneck" for commercial traffic. Many of the comments made were repeated and elaborated on by other speakers.

Terry Gere of Jobs Inc. noted that difficulties in shipping caused by the weight limits made it hard for local businesses to compete. He cited Hydra-Mac and Arctic as examples, and noted that the limits would certainly be a factor looked at by new businesses considering locating here. "We need those jobs" was one comment made.

Clyde Christensen, who farms east of Thief River Falls and owns shares in two elevators, noted that 60 per cent of their products were shipped by truck. He also commented that seasonal road restrictions weren't necessarily compatible with the logistics of moving seed and feed. "We can't walk, let alone drive in our fields now" he said, and asked that the state "reconsider its priorities."

Merle Hedland of Minnesota Wheat Growers brought up the possibility of railroad abandonment, noting that would inevitably lead to increased rates for farmers. He commented that spending money here rather than near the cities "might not be politically sound because there's not many votes up here" but added that the tax base lay with agriculture, holding 70 per cent of the wealth.

Terry Courneya, county extension director, commented on the large number of

'The Mikado' To Open Concert Series Saturday

First presentation of the Thief River Falls concert series will be "The Mikado" this Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium in Thief River Falls.

Author and composer of the operetta are Gilbert and Sullivan, the 19th century British team who collaborated on 11 comic opera hits.

Gilbert and Sullivan were at a loss to write something for the 1885 season when a Samurai sword hanging on the study wall accidentally clattered to the floor and suggested a fresh new locale for a musical comedy, and the keen edge of black humor for hari-kari jokes, Japan. Television series, "Shogun," presented the grimness of the team's situations; in "The Mikado," Gilbert played with them for fun.

Through the wirting of Gilbert and musical score of Sullivan, "The Mikado" has a direct plot that is easy to "get a handle on."

It centers on the troubles of Ko-Ko, the Mikado's Lord high executioner, who was reproached for not being sufficiently active in his profession. Ko-Ko draws up a list of people who "will none of 'em be missed," a list Gilbert planned to be kept current with the times.

Nanki-Poo, son of the Mikado, has disguised himself as a wandering minstrel to avoid marriage with the gross Katisha. While disguised, Nanki-Poo falls in love with the yummy Yum-Yum (who is betrothed to Ko-Ko). Ko-Ko agrees to give up Yum-Yum only if Nanki-Poo will volunteer to be executed and thus restore Ko-Ko's professional standing.

A happy ending is brought about when Ko-Ko is obliged to marry the comic character Katisha and Nanki-Poo can then reveal his true identity, the son of the Emperor of Japan.

Admission to the presentation is by season membership only. Further information may be obtained by calling the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce office.

NCC Notes Record High Enrollment

Record high enrollment figures for the seventh consecutive year highlight the Northland community college enrollment report which has been released by NCC registrar, Dennis Bendickson.

Last year's previous high full-time equivalent enrollment (FTE) of 418 students has been surpassed by 552 students who have created a full-time equivalent enrollment of 434 for the current fall quarter. The on-campus FTE figure of 408 and the presence of 361 full-time students are also fall quarter records for the college.

Women students outnumber men by 280 to 272, and the 361 full-time students are complemented by 191 part-timers. Students enrolled at the Grand Forks Air Force Base number 70 (26 fte), while 482 are attending classes on campus in Thief River Falls.

TRFEA Explains Views On Salary Differences

As the Thief River Falls Education association (TRFEA) and board of School District 564 in Thief River Falls prepare to resume negotiations Thursday evening toward settlement of the week-old teachers' strike, president Mike Lehrer of the TRFEA has released to the media his organization's interpretation of its position in the dispute.

Lehrer said the statement was prepared following release of the school board's position last week. He noted that the teacher association and the board sometimes present seemingly conflicting pictures of situations, and frequently this is because of the method used in determining those positions.

In explaining the computation of salary settlements, Lehrer showed how the same figures could be used with different results.

If 10 school districts with 10 teachers each settled for $1,000 average increases and one district with 100 teachers settled for a $2,000 increase, the average per teacher would be $1,500, he said. This is the method the teachers have used in making their comparison.

The state school boards association treats each school separately, Lehrer said. In the example above, the MSBA would show 11 settlements — 10 at $1,000 and one at $2,000 — and an average increase per district of $1,100.

"This is what we mean when we say the same figures can and often are interpreted differently," Lehrer noted.

The association has questioned the board's estimated fund balance, he said, because the school district's record in the past four years indicates that the balance has been higher than predicted. "This excess has averaged $237,086.25 each year for the past four years," he said. "It seems the board's gloomy predictions are aimed more at negotiations than accuracy."

At the end of the past fiscal year, for instance, Lehrer said the projected fund balance was $902,085 while the actual was $945,543 for a difference of $43,458. In fiscal 1980 the estimate was $734,914 and the actual on June 30 was $1,068,085 or a difference of $333,171. The previous year the projected balance was $357,607 and the actual was $863,919 for a difference of $506,312. In fiscal 1978 a balance of $489,725 was projected and the actual on June 30 was $555,129 for a difference of $65,404.

The school board had indicated last week that the fund balance as of July 1 this year was $833,000, and projected that granting a $4,500 average pay raise over two years would result in a deficit of approximately $300,000 by the end of next year.

Lehrer also took issue with use of the first 80 schools settling contracts as the board's basis for figuring difference in salary schedules. The figures in themselves may be accurate, he said, but they are arrived at on a district basis rather than a per teacher basis. Sixty-nine of the 80 schools used in the comparison are smaller than Thief River Falls, he said.

"Only about 11 schools are our size," Lehrer said of the comparison. "It is with these larger schools that our concern lies, for we still maintain that we should be compared with the 15 schools our size in our region. These are the schools with which we are expected to compete; therefore, we feel we must be at least competitive with them on salaries.

"We can no longer tolerate being 15th our of 15," the TRFEA chairman said. "We have compared a Thief River Falls teacher's earning power with the other 14 schools in our region (Region 8AA). A teacher was placed at the fifth year on the BA lane and followed through each school's schedule over a period of 20 years. Thief River Falls is in last place."

The TRFEA listing showed the order of schools to be St. Cloud, Little Falls, Moorhead, Bemidji, Brainerd, Crookston, Saetre-Josephson Vows Said at LaCrosse, Wis.

Miss Anne Marit Saetre and Steven Douglas Josephson exchanged marriage vows recently at the Newman Center chapel at LaCrosse, Wis.

The bride is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Warren Saetre of this city. Parents of the groom are Rev. and Mrs. Rodney Josephson of Del Rey Beach, Fla.

The bride's brother, Rev. David Saetre officiated at the double ring ceremony witnessed by approximately 150 relatives and friends. During the ceremony, her other brother, William Saetre sang Vaughn Williams' "For All the Saints," and Edvard Grieg's "I Love Thee." Mary Rommerein Simpson sang "Doug Rommercim's "Love Will Abide."

As the bride was escorted to the altar by her parents, the assembled guests joined in singing, "Joyful, Joyful." They also sang "Love Divine," following the reading of Psalm 108:1-8 and Ephesians 3:14-21.

Red carnations and white chrysanthemums graced the altar and surrounded the base of the Unity candle.

For her wedding, the bride selected a floor-length gown of white gauze with ribbon and lace trim. The gown was designed with a fitted bodice with lace inset, and long, full sleeves gathered into lace cuffs which were trimmed with ribbon, matching the ribbon and lace stand-up collar. Encircling the waistline was a wide sash, tied in back. In her hair, interwoven into French braids, were babies' breath and red carnations. She carried a bouquet of red carnations, white mums, daisies and babies' breath.

Nancy Saetre Thorsgard, Minneapolis, attended her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Linda Saetre, another sister of the bride, and Linda Josephson, a sister of the groom. They wore white street-length sundresses, featuring a red cherry print, tied at the waistline by a red sash. They carried red carnations, white mums and babies' breath. In their hair was a single red carnation.

Attending the groom as best man was his brother, Keith Josephson, Minneapolis. Groomsmen were Steven Saetre, brother of the bride, and Joseph White, a friend of the groom. Serving as ushers were Knute Thorsgard, brother-in-law of the bride, and Su Kladstrup, a friend of the bride. The men of the wedding party wore tan suits with red carnations pinned on their lapel.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Saetre wore a dusty rose dress with a gardenia corsage. A similar corsage complemented the pink chiffon print dress worn by the groom's mother.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents hosted a barbecue dinner at the Goose Island park for 150 guests. Host and hostesses were Dave Hagman, Sally Hagman and Lori Lindstadt. The Kransekake, the traditional Scandinavian wedding cake made by Ina Thorsgard of this city, was served by Barbara Linnehan, the bride's personal attendant. Eileen Kiernan served the champagne and Sandy Peterson and Sarah Palmeyer registered the guests.

Following a wedding trip to Winnipeg and the Lake of the Woods in Canada, the couple is now at home at 201 North Elm at LaCrescent. The bride received her Bachelor of Science degree at St. Olaf college and her Master of Science at the University of Wisconsin at LaCrosse. She is currently teaching in the LaCrosse school. The groom is a graduate of Capital university, Columbus, Ohio and is employed by the Freight House restaurant at LaCrosse.

E. Kompeliens Observe Their 25th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Kompelien were honored on their 25th wedding anniversary at an open house held recently at the Evangelical Free church in this city.

The event was hosted by the couple's children: Mr. and Mrs. Kevin Kompelien, Mr. and Mrs. Kent (Konnie) Christensen and Ken Kompelien, all of Thief River Falls. In addition to their three children, the Kompeliens also had a grandson.

The anniversary observance was reminiscent of the wedding which took place Aug. 25, 1956 in Thief River Falls. Present as special guests were the attendants: Mary Anne Norum, Ivadell Reierson, Karen Dalager, Louene Roos, Silas Kompelien, Charlie Anderson and Arlon Eriksson. Also present and participating in the program by giving a reading and prayer, was Rev. Arthur Ramsland of Maple Plain, who officiated at the wedding. To follow the looking-back theme, the couple's sons and daughter sang "To My Bride," and Karen Dalager sang "O Perfect Love." Both selections had been sung at the wedding.

Serving as master of ceremonies at the program was Kevin Kompelien. Ken Kompelien was in charge of a slide presentation, Rev. Curtis Anderson gave a short devotional meditation, and Randy Moe was accompanist. Kevin Kompelien also sang "Of Love I Sing."

For the reception that followed, the lavender and green color theme used at the wedding was carried out in flowers and decorations.

The four-tiered anniversary cake baked and decorated by Alice Hanson of this city was cut and served by Pearl Ramsland of Maple Plain and Orlanda Eriksson. Mary Anne Norum of Bemidji and Ivadell Reierson poured coffee and Kent and Konnie Christensen were at the punch bowl.

The guests were registered by Mrs. Kevin Kompelien, as the couple's niece and nephew, Bethany and Nathan Dulager served as gift bearers.

The Kompeliens have lived in Thief River Falls since their marriage. They are owners of the Klothes Kloset; and for the past 25 years Kompelien has been employed by Hartz Wholesale.

The Opal and the Tourmaline
GENUINE BIRTHSTONE FOR OCTOBER
Opals are only found where once there had been an inland sea. It is as though the dying sea had left this vivid gem in memory of rainbows that arched above it. Some feared the power of the Opal, which was reputed to make its owner invisible so that he could escape the roving eye of misfortune. Like its companion birthstone, the Opal signifies hope.
The Tourmaline also belongs to October. It is another attractive birthstone for jewelry.

Hiebert And Thompson Vows Said At Sisseton

Marriage vows were exchanged recently at St. Peter's Catholic church at Sisseton, S.D., by Candace Kay Hiebert, daughter of Mrs. Vivian Hiebert of this city, and Calvin James Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Thompson of Sisseton.

Rev. Eugene Glaub officiated at the 7:30 p.m., ceremony. Forming the altar setting were arrangements of yellow, blue and white mums, accented with daisies.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her mother and brother, Keith Hiebert of White Bear Lake, was attired in a sleeveless gown of dacron polyester organza. Crystal pleating outlined the yoke and formed the wide flounce that edged her shirt and chapel-length train. Venice lace appliques enhanced the yoke, traced the high neckline, and were scattered across the skirt. Matching lace complimented her headpiece and trimmed her veil. She carried an arm bouquet of long-stemmed yellow roses, babies' breath, and greenery, accented with yellow and blue ribbon streamers.

Personal attendant was Carolyn Dimmel, Sisseton, a friend of the bride.

Matron of honor was Marie Roadfeldt, Paynesville, a friend of the bride. Bridesmaids were Marlys Swendra, Red Lake Falls, a friend of the bride, and Joan Thompson, Sisseton, a sister of the groom. Their gowns of powder blue polyester organza with a soft floral print were styled with scooped neckline, short sleeves and empire waistlines. They carried a solitary long-stemmed yellow rose with greenery, babies' breath and ribbon streamers, in blue and yellow.

Attending the groom as best man was Keith Eichler, Columbia, S.D., a friend. Groomsmen were David and Rodney Thompson of Sisseton, brothers of the groom. The ushers were Jeff Kapperman, Montrose, S.D., Randy Grimsrud, Sisseton, friends of the groom; John Jacobson, Park Rapids, and Arlin Thompson, Sisseton, cousins of the groom.

Honor guests were Anna Rolstad and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thompson, Sr., grandparents of the groom.

A reception in the church hall followed with Mr. and Mrs. Tom Prendergast, friends of the couple, as host and hostess.

The bride's sisters: Janet Johnston and Larae Kaushagen, cut and served the wedding cake. Pouring coffee were Iris Rydell, sister of the groom, and Betty Peterson, an aunt of the groom.

The groom's cousin, Sharyl Sykora presided at the guest book as Beth Dirksen and Rose Van Dyke, friends of the bride, ladled the punch. Gene Thompson, brother of the groom, and Lonn Kaushagen, niece of the bride, served as gift bearers. Waitresses were Cathy Hiebert, niece of the bride, and Tamara Peterson, a cousin of the groom. Deb Lien, a friend of the bride, was flower attendant.

The couple is now at home at 616 West Fourth avenue in Sisseton, S.D., where the bride is teaching in the elementary grades. She is a graduate of Lincoln high school and Northland Community college, Thief River Falls, and St. Cloud State University. Holen Joins MN. Wheat Council Staff

James Holen, director of the Red Lake county agricultural stabilization and conservation service (ASCS), will be joining the staff of the Minnesota wheat research and promotion council November 1 as a field representative. Holen will be retiring from the ASCS October 30 after over 30 years of government service.

According to Merle Hedland, executive director of the wheat council, Holen's responsibilities will include contacting producers, grain buyers and other agriculture related groups and individuals in the state to discuss and answer questions on the wheat council's programs and operations. He will also assist in coordinating the council's activities with other agricultural organizations in the state.

"The wheat council has directed both its financial and staff resources primarily toward the wheat research and market development programs for which it was created," Hedland stated. "Very little time or money has been spent to communicate with the farmers and the grain buyers who support us."

Hedland reports, however, that better informing producers and others on the wheat council's programs and activities is important. He said that only through knowledge of council administration and programs can farmers properly evaluate how their check-off monies are being spent.

According to Hedland, the council has been strengthening its producer information program and Holen was selected as the field representative in order to provide a greater degree of personal contact.

Holen has worked for the ASCS since 1948 when he started as a field reporter and grain bin inspector in west Polk county. He was appointed bin site supervisor in 1954 and was named chief program assistant. He was appointed executive director of the Red Lake county ASCS in 1972.

Holen will continue to reside in Crookston. He and his wife Ardith have three sons, Rodney in Moorhead, Dan in Baudette and Kevin who is a junior in high school.

No Funds Are Available For Hwy. 59 Work

acres of "prime cropland" in the Thief River Falls area, noting that with the port authority in Duluth closed in the winter when the road is designated as a 10-ton route, "we've got a 10-ton road and nowhere to take our products".

Don Grabanski, chairman of the Pennington county board of commissioners, called attention to recent obligation of county funds for upgrading connecting roads between highways 59 and 32, and also city projects to improve traffic flow, citing them as evidence of the commitment which the area has to completion of the project. He, as well as others, noted that highway 59 was a "principal arterial route".

Braun complimented the group on having done its homework but reiterated his first obligation was to preserving existing roads. Calling funding a "statewide problem", he said he would reevaluate the situation but would make no promises.

Mayor Bob Carlson, promising to "proceed with clout" available from local congressional representatives and by pulling together, asked Braun what was the best way to get new priorites established. Braun replied that they had already taken the first step in generating public awareness of the dilemma, and noted that the legislature can determine priorities.

Alexandria, Sauk Rapids, Melrose, East Grand Forks, Fergus Falls, Cold Spring, Park Rapids, Detroit Lakes and Thief River Falls.

Five of the six school districts in that group which have settled are in ninth through 14th place on the ranking. Their average increase per teacher in the two-year settlement is $4,994 — ranging from a high of $5,217 at Park Rapids to $4,697 at East Grand Forks.

"Since we are ranked 15th," Lehrer said, "we will need at least an additional $500 to $600 per teacher to catch up to the regional average. That is why we are asking for $5,600."

He said that Thief River Falls teachers lose money because it takes 21 steps to reach the top of the salary schedule, while Minnesota school boards association charts show the majority of schools in Minnesota have 14 steps or less. "The extra years needed to reach the top of the schedule result in a considerable loss of earnings over a Thief River Falls teacher's career," he added.

Energy Report To Confront Issues Of '80s

"Minnesota Energy Policy Directions" outlines the course recommended by the newly merged department of energy, planning, and development (DEPD) to confront energy issues of the 1980s. Released by commissioner Kent Eklund October 1, the draft report identifies environmental issues, evaluative criteria, and the structure of energy functions within the state.

Legislation creating DEPD calls for commissioner Eklund to submit a report to several legislative committees no later than November 15, 1981. This draft (portions 3, 4, and 5) includes a review of the power plant siting program, certificate of need, environmental impact review, rate setting, and the jurisdiction of the Environmental Quality board.

Part 2 of the report will trace the legislative history of energy issues and the development of authority currently held by a variety of state agencies. Part 1, the executive summary and overview, will not be prepared until the final report has been completed.

Purpose of the draft report is to solicit opinions from individuals and organizations with energy-related concerns. All comments to the commissioner will be carefully considered and pertinent recommendations will be incorporated into the final report to the legislature. Comments must be received no later than October 30 and may be sent to the following address: Commissioner Kent Eklund, Department of energy, planning and development, 101 Capitol Square Building, St. Paul, MN 55101.

Copies of the report are being sent to persons who provided comments to the commissioner prior to the preparation of this draft. Reports will also be available for review at the following area location: Polk county-Crookston library.

Soo Net Income First 9 Months Up 6 Per Cent

Soo Line Railroad company net income for the first nine months of 1981 increased 6 per cent above net income for the first nine months of 1980, however, third quarter net income was down 11 per cent from a year earlier, president Thomas M. Beckley announced.

Net income for the first nine months was $25.4 million or $3.35 per share compared to $24.0 million or $3.16 per share a year ago. Revenues for the period rose 6 per cent to $244.6 million.

For the third quarter, net income was $7.9 million or $1.05 per share, compared to net income of $8.9 million or $1.17 per share for the third quarter of 1980. Revenues for the quarter were up 8 per cent to $85.2 million.

"The decrease in net income for the third quarter was attributable to lower traffic volume and an expanded track maintenance program," Beckley said. During the third quarter Soo laid 65 miles of track with new or relaid rail compared to 27 miles in 1980. Expenses for maintenance of track and structures during the quarter were $7 million higher than last year, an increase of 39 per cent, due mainly to the expanded track improvement program. Most of the 1981 track improvement program has now been completed.

Revenue ton miles declined 7 per cent from the first nine months of 1980 and 8 per cent from the third quarter. There were increases in the movements of sulphur and primary metals. Grain traffic remained below last year although Soo achieved record loadings from country elevators in August. Lumber traffic was significantly below last year due to the continuing low demand for residential construction and a strike in the lumber mills in Western Canada which lasted throughout much of the third quarter.

In spite of lower traffic volumes, the Soo was able to improve the efficiency of its operations. The ratio of transportation expense to revenue decreased from 38.2 per cent for the first nine months of 1980 to 36.3 per cent for 1981 and from 35.4 per cent for the third quarter of 1980 to 34.2 per cent for the third quarter of 1981.

Income taxes were higher in 1981 for both the quarter and the year to date because of a higher effective tax rate and a higher pre-tax income for the nine months.

Net income for the third quarter included increased interest income due to higher interest rates and larger cash balances, and a gain from reacquiring all of the outstanding First Mortgage Bonds due in 1995 of the Duluth, South Shore, Atlantic Railroad company, one of the companies which merged to form the Soo in 1961.

Title Shuffle Results From DEPD Creation

New Department of Energy, Planning, and Development (DEPD) began operation October 1. After legislative action merged the state planning agency (SPA) crime control board, (CCB) Department of Economic Development (DED) and Minnesota Energy Agency (MEA).

Merger resulted from efforts to trim state budget dramatically in closing days of the legislative session. Following passage of the bill, Governor Quie appointed Kent Eklund, commissioner of DED, to head the new department and direct the merger. As commissioner, Eklund announced the following staff appointments: Joseph Sizer, deputy commissioner; Robert Benner, assistant commissioner, planning division; Wes Cochrane, assistant commissioner, business and community development division; and Hank Todd, assistant commissioner, tourism division.

According to provisions of legislation, MEA will not formally join the new department until March 1982 when an assistant commissioner for energy will also be appointed.

Commissioner Eklund comes to the new department with both theoretical and practical knowledge of political affairs, having been chairman of the political science department at St. Olaf College, a member of Rice County's planning commission and mayor of Northfield. He has written numerous publications on growth and planning.

Deputy Commissioner, Joseph Sizer was previously deputy director of SPA. He joined the agency in 1966 as director of technical services and subsequently became director of natural resource planning and director of environmental planning, developing much of Minnesota's current environmental legislation. He began his career as an industrial economist and research analyst with the state departments of economic development and agriculture.

Robert Benner, who has been executive director of the Minnesota Environmental Quality Board since 1979, will be assistant commissioner for DEPD's planning division. He was appointed to Minnesota's career executive service program in 1980 as a result of work on two major state projects, the solid and hazardous waste study and the copper-nickel study. Benner's previous experience includes directing Minnesota's region 5 development commission and regional development work for the commonwealth of Kentucky.

Wes Cochrane, who has been acting commissioner of DED since July, will become assistant commissioner, business and community development division. Before joining DED in 1978, Cochrane directed a Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) program for the State of Minnesota. Prior to that position, he worked in India in family planning and agricultural development programs.

Hank Todd, previously director of DED's bureau of tourism, will become assistant commissioner, tourism division of DEPD. He joined DED in 1973 as a tourism and travel representative and served as acting commissioner in 1979 during the transition period between Governors Perpich and Quie.

MN Highway Traffic Death Toll Down

Minnesota's highway traffic death toll through September 30, was 537, 51 less than on the same day in 1980.

According to public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic, the 1981 count for the first nine months includes 71 pedestrian deaths, 85 motorcycle related fatalities and five bike deaths. Pedestrian total was four above the 1980 total and the motorcycle figures was 23 fewer. There were 15 bike fatalities on the same day in 1980.

Minnesota's lowest traffic death total in recent years was the 777 recorded in 1975. That included 114 pedestrians, 72 motorcycle fatalities and 23 bicycle deaths.

If the present pace continues, the 1981 traffic death toll in the state could drop below the 1975 figure, making it a new low point in recent years.

State fatality totals for the past 10 years are: 1980-863; 1979-881; 1978-980; 1977-856; 1976-809; 1975-777; 1974-852; 1973;1,024; 1972-1,031; 1971-1,024. (In March, 1974 the speed limit was lowered to 55 mph. 1975 was the first year of the 55 speed limit.)

Committee Seeks Ways To Save Farmland

"Being the fourth largest state in total acres of prime farmland, and a leader in agricultural production, Minnesota has a serious problem with conversion of agricultural land to non-farm uses," Robert Gray, director of the national agricultural lands study, told Minnesota house agriculture committee members recently.

United States is losing three million acres of farmland each year, or 12 square miles per day, Gray said. "Over one million of that is lost to erosion, the rest goes to urbanization, highways, water resource projects, and mining.

"States have a key role in saving agricultural lands. They can stimulate local governments to adopt preservation programs and encourage private owners to keep land in farm production," said Gray.

National study summarizes agricultural land preservation programs and how they work. Gray said tax relief programs are not effective in slowing agricultural land conversion, but tax relief along with tax credits, agricultural districting, and-or agricultural zoning works in some states.

Rep. Paul Ogren, DFL-Aitkin, said that unless farmers can earn a decent income from farming, conversion of farmland will continue. He urged the state and federal government to look into programs which would help farmers.

Rep. Merlyn Valan, IR-Moorhead, expressed concern over estate laws. "If a farmer wills his land to his children, and one wants to sell, they have to sell the land. The other children don't have the resources to compete with developers to buy the land."

Committee will continue its study of agricultural land preservation and farmland conservation measures.

Hunters Should Think 'Safety' On Highways

Minnesota hunters should think "safety" long before they reach their hunting site, according to public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

"It's just as important for hunters to follow common sense rules of highway safety while driving as it is to follow safety precautions while hunting," Sopsic said.

In too many cases hunting parties leave after work and try to reach hunting sites in a non-stop, marathon drive. Driver fatigue often results, so frequent stops are a good idea. Also a change of driver is recommended. Stops for alcoholic drinks or "pick-me-ups" is always a bad idea.

Drinking in a van, motorhome or in any motor vehicle is illegal. Open bottles may not be carried inside an automobile but must be placed in trunks. Open bottles may be carried in vans, motorhomes or stationwagons but must be in areas inaccessible to the driver.

Traffic may be heavy on the way to and from weekend hunting expeditions. Extra care is called for when passing, especially on two-lane roads. The pass that might save a minute could cost a life.

Unpredictable weather conditions of late fall can also require extra driving care. Frost, rain or early snow can cause slippery road conditions and also affect windshield visibility. Decreasing speed to match weather and road condition is a must.

Cities Left To Deal With Cut In Gov't. Funds

Cities won't be getting as much state and federal money in the next three years as they've come to expect, Lee Munich told the Minnesota House local and uurban affairs committee Oct. 13.

That could have a major impact on the ability of cities to provide police and fire, sanitation, and other services.

State and federal funds together paid about 39 per cent of city expenses in 1979, compared with 26 per cent in 1970. Property taxes share of city funding dropped from 37 to 23 per cent from 1970 to 1979. Service charges, assessments and other charges provide the rest of the funds.

Munich prepared a report for the Midwest Research Institute, predicting that property taxes would go up 68 per cent over the next three years, if cities tried to make up for the loss of federal funds solely through the propoerty tax. Munich said that figure assumes a 30 per cent drop in federal funding, a 4 per cent increase in state funds to cities, and a 7 per cent inflation rate. Even if those figures are not exact, said Munich, they show that cities face a monumental planning and budgeting task.

Other ways to make up the funding drops would be a 12 per cent personnel reduction, a three-year wage and salary freeze, or 14 per cent productivity increases from each city worker.

Local and Urban Affairs Committee chairman Gordon Voss (DFL-Blaine) said subcommittees will study the effect on city finances of state-imposed levy limits and state mandates.

Colorless Or Blue Reflectors Improve Safety

For added safety, use only white (colorless) or blue colored reflectors on each side to mark driveway entrances, said Kermit McRae, state traffic engineer, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

Red, amber or yellow colored reflectors are not permitted because such colors resemble motor vehicle tail lights and could be confusing to an approaching motorist, he explained. Reflectors should not be used on roadside mailboxes or posts.

McRae recommends using double-faced white or blue reflectors that are clearly visible from both directions on the highway. Installation should be no closer than 10 feet from the edge of the road shoulder. Square or circular reflectors about three inches in width can be used and are easily visible when placed at a height of four or five feet above the road surface.

SS Benefits To Students Curtailed

Social security benefits to students 18-22 attending colleges and other post-secondary schools will be sharply curtailed under recent changes in the law, according to William Phalen, Grand Forks district manager.

Students who first become entitled to benefits for September of 1981 or later can receive payments only through July of 1982. Students getting social security checks who are still in high school can continue to get student benefits until graduation or age 19, whichever comes first.

Benefits will continue to persons entitled to a check for August of 1981 who are full-time students 18-22 at a college or other approved post-secondary school before May of 1982. Benefits can be paid to these students until they either finish school, reach age 22, or marry, whichever comes first. These students are in a phase-out process.

Beginning with September of 1982, benefits to students will be reduced by 25 per cent each year until they are completely eliminated in April of 1985. Also, starting in 1982 no benefits will be paid for May, June, July or August to students in the phase-out process.

Because of the complexity of the law and the rules governing the payment of student benefits, Phalen said that people should contact the social security office for more detailed information about their own situations.

Northern Lights Evident In October Sky

High above the tree tops in the dark of an October night, brilliant flashes of changing color fill the northern sky above Minnesota.

Indian legends called the luminous phenomenon "lost lightning" and "flaming white whirlpools." We know it better as the aurora borealis — the northern lights.

Northern lights splash across the Minnesota sky about 30 nights a year. Fall is a good time to watch them color the sky. To look for them, get as far as possible from city lights and look near the northern horizon around midnight.

The lights form luminous arches across the sky, flash and then fall like curtains in changing shades of white, pale green, blue-green and red across the sky.

Ancient Indians gave us the romantic lore of the lights, but modern astronomers have given us a scientific explanation.

Aurora flashes with about 9,000 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity a year — that's more than is used on Earth in the same period.

Huge amounts of electricity have their beginnings on the sun. Sunspot storms, solar flares and holes in the sun's corona send charged particles streaming into the Earth's atmosphere, according to Kevin Edgar of the University of Minnesota astronomy department.

Charged particles are trapped by the Earth's magnetic field and combine with particles of oxygen and nitrogen from the atmosphere. As the two types of particles interact, the atmospheric particles are ionized (stripped of an electron). The resulting electrical charges turn the atmosphere into a giant electrical conductor.

Northern lights are most vivid in the spring and fall when the Earth is tilted at the best angle to catch the solar wind of charged particles. Frequency and intensity of the aurora are also greater when sunspot storms increase.

Northern lights aren't the only attraction in the late October sky. Venus will be a bright "evening star" which will be low in the southwest sky around sunset. Mars will appear in the low eastern sky late at night and rise until it is nearly overhead at dawn. It will appear near the bright star Regulus.

Saturn, Jupiter and Mercury are the planets to watch for in the early mornings of late October. After October 20, look for Saturn very low in the sky, a bit south of due east just before sunrise. By October 26, Jupiter should appear in the morning sky very low in the east. At the end of the month, Mercury also may be visible near dawn. Look for it just above the southwestern horizon, very close to the sun.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

I was disappointed in the recent action of our teachers to resort to forceful means to gain their desires. I was also disgusted at the reason given for asking for the substantial increase — mainly that other teachers in specific other areas are being paid more.

Undoubtedly, this type of rationale provides a perpetual argument for higher wages, not only for teachers, but for almost any one else in our area.

We live in this community and are subject to the economic conditions of this area. It happens to be an economically depressed area at the present and many in our area are experiencing reduced income. It appears that teachers feel they are a privileged group that is to be insulated from the economic conditions of our area. If more wages are of such importance and other areas have them, perhaps they should consider moving there. Besides, using only wages for comparison is unfair. These other areas may also have some disadvantages.

The teachers say their main concern is for the student and a quality education; this may be true, but I hope the students don't follow their example. I'm referring to force to gain a selfish objective; and lack of objective reasoning in presenting this issue. The leaflet mailed out by them was full of bias and misleading information, and smacks of political rhetoric. It was a poor advertisement for those who should encourage open-minded objective thinking in our students.

It has never been proven that higher wages brings better teaching. The opposite appears to be true. In spite of better wage schedules in latter years, we have lower quality and less acquired basic knowledge. Paying an extra million dollars for wages can only mean reduced educational and other related school programs, resulting in lesser quality of education and more taxes.

Since the raise is definitely inflationary, it will help reduce the purchasing power of lower income people and the elderly, both of whom are already hard pressed for essential living income. Why do unions continually pursue short range gain and reap long range penalties. (Loss of purchasing power for most people) The real culprit is inflation; so let's make efforts to stop it, not promote it!

One very misleading statement of the T.R.F.E.A. leaflet is the beginner teacher's take home monthly pay of $632.48. They don't say it is one-twelfth of yearly take home pay; they don't say there are additional deductions taken from it (more than income tax and social security); they don't tell you it doesn't show teacher's benefits and that those benefits are not subject to taxes as they would be if they were paid out of wages. They do not say whether or not this represents the pay of a single teacher as it probably is. The tax payer is entitled to an open-minded honest breakdown of a teacher's wage, showing gross and each deduction and value of each and all benefits.

If distortions like this prevail, it is not difficult to see why there is difficulty in an agreement.

Teachers also have some definite advantages they enjoy that few other occupations have. They get time off at the best time of year; their children are out of school at the same time they are, enabling them to have more family time and vacations together. (In the private sector it often is very difficult or impossible to coincide vacations with non-school time).

Since schools are mostly in residential areas; there are fewer transportation and parking problems, fewer parking fees; less traffic congestion, shorter commuting distances and less communting time.

There is no obligation to work weekends or holidays; no requirement to work swing or graveyard shifts; no rotating shifts to contend with or requirement to work away from home. No need to arrange for child care on holidays or weekends because of work. Few occupations, if any, have comparable job security or protection. Few are able to earn your amount of wages in nine months.

The teaching occupation is not generally hazardous, or requires one to get dirty or work in polluted air, or work in wet or severe weather or generally uncomfortable areas. Would it be necessary for you to lose these advantages before you place a value on them? None of these are reflected in your wages, however, the lack of some of these advantages would result in additional living expense.

A concerned taxpayer of the district.

(Editor's Note: The writer of the above letter is a parent of young children in the district's schools, and the name is being withheld at the writer's request.)

To The Editor:

Ronald Reagan has gone after the federal budget with a straight razor, gashing social service and other programs which provide an infusion of life blood into America. The blood is on his hands, and on the hands of the lower level government bureaucrats who in turn must slash their budgets with paring knives.

There are no quick solutions, nor easy answers. The bottom line is — what priorities do you have? How strongly do you feel about them and how strongly will you fight for them? There is nothing new about Reaganomics (supply side economics) — it's the same old Pyramid Theory of the Republican party (keep the 20 per cent at the top, rich and happy — then distribution of wealth will trickle down to the base of the pyramid to keep the mass of Americans alive, but unhappy. This was the policy of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover — most of you remember what happened in 1929.

Reagan's tax incentives enrich the rich, but they rob the poor — the fringe benefits (which are negotiable) are gone. Your priorities are gone with the Hollywood twister — only devastation remains in his wake. The president has finally admitted that the country is in a recession after reviewing the September production statistics, but he says it will bring lower interest rates — maybe! Tell that to our downtown businessmen — they are having more sales than there are customers.

James Tobin, recent Nobel prize winner in economics, in an interview last week, commented that Reagan's program will not work — the heavy military expenditures will not produce a viable, balanced budget. He further stated, "The administration's economic programs will cause the poor considerable economic pain and damage." The damage will multiply into a projected budget deficit by 1982-1983 of over 80 billion dollars.

The last days of Reaganomics are very unhappy. I quote, Ralph Waldo Emerson, "Every hero becomes at last a bore."

O. H. Halland
A Grassroots Democrat

To The Editor:

Doesn't anyone remember the basis for our economy? Supply and demand. The supply of qualified teachers exceeds the demand. It's as simple as that. There's no need for any fancy rhetoric . . . just . . . Supply and Demand.

VIP Saves MN. Taxpayers $6.2 Million

Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) value improvement program (VIP) saved Minnesota taxpayers $6.2 million during the fiscal year ending June 30, said commissioner Richard P. Braun.

Value improvement savings are also up 30 per cent from the previous year.

Program provides cost reduction, product or process improvement, and alternative methods or materials for highway construction and maintenance. For instance, the recycling of bituminous pavement for highway bituminous resurfacing projects resulted in savings of about $300,000, he said.

"These savings, however," Braun said, "must be put into perspective with the effects of inflation. For example, Mn-DOT met its goal of reducing fuel consumption by 15 per cent, but wound up paying more for less fuel because the price rose by 22 per cent. If we had not cut fuel use, fuel costs would have risen by another $750,000."

VIP, now in its ninth year, Braun noted, has saved taxpayers $38 million since its November 1972 implementation. Mn-DOT uses the funds saved to increase the number of road and bridge improvement projects that can be completed yearly.

Annual board retreat and goal setting session of the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce will be held Saturday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Northland community college, according to Bill Hogan, president.

Milt Fletcher, director of local chamber activities with the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, will be guest speaker. Fletcher is a specialist in organization management and structure and has conducted similar leadership conferences in 49 of the 50 states.

Attending the sessions will be the current board of directors, nominees for directorship on the 1982 board, chairmen of committees, Mayor Bob Carlson, past chamber of commerce presidents and special guests.

Fletcher works with the local and state chamber of commerce department in the national organization. A career organization executive, he has been active in voluntary organization management since 1947.

From a background in business and public relations, he began his chamber career in Georgia, serving as a chief executive officer in three communities before joining the national staff in 1961. He serves as an instructor in chamber of commerce management at the six institutes for organization management conducted by the national chamber and six universities annually. In 1981 he participated in his 142nd institute.

A member of the American chamber of commerce executives group, he was one of the first 100 individuals named a certified chamber executive by that group.

Testimony In Wilmarth Line Case Is Filed

Staff of the Minnesota energy agency filed testimony this week in the Wilmarth power line case. Testimony states that future electrical demand on the Cooperative Power association (CPA) United Power association (UPA) system will be significantly lower than what CPA/UPA has predicted.

Staff forecast implies that CPA/UPA would not need the Wilmarth line to avoid an electric deficit before 1992. CPA/UPA has forecast that a deficit would occur in their system in 1984 without the Wilmarth line.

CPA/UPA have requested permission to build a 345-kilovolt AC line from an electrical substation near Delano to a sub-station near Mankato. State law requires that no large energy facility be constructed in Minnesota without the issuance of a certificate of need by the director of the energy agency. In certificate of need matters, the staff of the energy agency is distinct from the director.

Wilmarth line is part of the controversial CPA/UPA power line project, which was certified in April of 1976. This particular line has been the subject of litigation before the Minnesota Supreme Court, which remanded the case to the energy agency for rehearing.

Hearings, which will begin October 26, will run for several weeks.

Other portions of the project have already been built and are not an issue in these hearings. Completed facilities include a power plant in North Dakota, a plus-minus 400-kilovolt DC line from the power plant to Delano, and a 345-kilovolt line from Delano to Coon Rapids.

Entire system was designed to carry 1,000 megawatts of power from the North Dakota power plant to the CPA/UPA system. A major point of contention among the parties in the case is the date when the 1,000 megawatts will be needed in the CPA/UPA system. Parties in the case are the Minnesota energy agency staff, CPA/UPA and the Southern landowners alliance of Minnesota. Hearings will be conducted before a state hearing examiner, who will make a recommendation to the director of the energy agency based on the evidence. Director will make his decision based on this recommendation and the evidence.

These hearings will be conducted according to guidelines issued by the Minnesota Supreme Court. First a hearing will be conducted on whether the 1,000 megawatts are needed in the CPA/UPA system. If the director rules that the 1,000 megawatts will be needed within a reasonable time, the Wilmarth line will be constructed, barring possible challenges and appeals. This part of the rehearing will address the accuracy of the CPA/UPA current forecasts of need for energy in their systems, their ability to meet the forecast demand, and the effectiveness of conservation and load management programs which might affect the need for 1,000 megawatts.

If the director decides, as a result of this rehearing, that less than 1,000 megawatts is needed in the CPA/UPA system, the hearing will be reconvened to determine whether there are other factors which necessitate the Wilmarth line. These factors, such as the economic effects of building or not building the line, would be introduced as testimony in this part of the hearing.

First hearing session will be October 26 at the American Legion Club in LeCenter, MN. October 27-29 sessions will be conducted at the 4H family center in LeCenter.

Additional sessions will be conducted November 2-6 at the State bank of Cologne in Cologne, MN and November 9-13 at the Watertown Mayer high school in Watertown, MN. All hearing sessions will begin at 10 a.m., and there will be evening sessions beginning at 7 p.m. every night except Fridays, at which time the public will have first priority to testify. More sessions will be scheduled as necessary.

For more information, or a copy of the Order for Hearing and Notice, which contains additional details on the hearing process, contact Arthur L. Adiarte at the Energy Agency, 296-8279 (within the metro area), or toll-free 1-800-652-9747 (outside the metro area).

Veterans Day 1981 will be observed on Wednesday, November 11, and the Veterans Administration is urging all Americans to commemorate the day by participating in their local community observance.

Bills To Help Keep Minn. Lakes Sky Blue

"Minnesota's most famous natural resources are in trouble. Within the next two decades many of the state's 10,000 lakes could be made unusable by pollution carried through the air, much of it coming from other states," says Sen. Dave Durenberger.

Sen. Durenberger is co-sponsoring two bills that would help keep Minnesota the land of 10,000 sky-blue lakes. Bills would cut down on polluting industrial emissions and give Minnesotans the tools necessary to protect their lakes and land.

According to the Minnesota pollution control agency, up to 3,700 state lakes are sensitive to polluted rain. This so-called acid rain already has affected several lakes in northeastern Minnesota. If the trend continues, the lakes may be unable to support fish or other life in 10 to 15 years. Environmental protection agency estimates that more than half of the pollutants — principally sulfur dioxide and nitrate oxide — comes from industrial plants in other states.

One of Durenberger's co-sponsored bills would freeze emissions at their current levels then gradually reduce them over the next decade in a 31-state region. Region includes all eastern states and those states, including Minnesota, bordering the Mississippi river.

Durenberger's second bill would allow a state like Minnesota to force another state to clean up its polluting industrial emissions.

"These bills put the responsibility for stopping polluting emissions on the shoulders of the states," Durenberger said. "They don't require more federal bureaucracy or red tape and they don't force expensive new technology on industries.

"The bills send the message that pollution isn't just the problem of one industry or one state. It's a regional problem. This legislation encourages states to work together to solve the problem and they put the solutions in the hands of state and local agencies that are most capable of dealing with the situation," Durenberger said.

Answers from the Bible by Pastor Don Peres

Q. Pastor Don, would you please explain where dinosaurs and other extinct animals came from and why they're not mentioned in the Bible?

A. One of the things that I have discovered in my studies is that very few of the many species of animals are mentioned in the Bible at all. Genesis records only that God created all living creatures of the sea, of the earth and of the sky, and labels them in the most general terms: cattle and creeping things and beasts of the earth and winged creatures. Genesis 2:19-20.

Only those animals that are significant to human history are mentioned in the Bible specifically, such as cattle, oxen, goats, sheep (important to the economy), plus the specific list of clean and unclean animals in the Levitical law, etc. Many animals are not specifically named in the Bible, dinosaurs among them.

Lack of mention means little, other than they did not come into the history of man in a way significant or necessary to record. The fact that dinosaurs existed is apparent from the fossil records of the great dinosaur beds, presumably preserved by a catastrophe, such as the flood of Noah.

Additional evidence for their existence, and at the same time as man, is the pictographs left in Africa and North America, and from fossil evidence of human and dinosaur footprints in the same formation.

As to why and how they became extinct, we can only conjecture. When the fall of man and sin entered the world, death and destruction entered the universe.

Eventually, corruptioin was so widespread that God destroyed all but Noah's family and two of every kind of living creature, which he caused to come to Noah for safekeeping on the ark. Genesis 7:21-23

We can assume that either dinosaurs didn't make it into the ark because: God intended them to become extinct at that time; or that because of climatic conditions after the flood they failed to reproduce in sufficient numbers and died out. We simply don't have enough data to go beyond assumption at this point.

If you have any questions that you would like to have answered from the Bible, please write Pastor Don Peres, Box 129, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Disagreement Voiced At TH 59 Frontage Hearing

Public hearing to gather opinions on a preliminary plan for improvements to trunk Highway 59 from First Street to County Road 62, drew questions and protests from property owners along the route Tuesday evening at City Auditorium.

Conducted by Minnesota Department of Transportation (Mn-DOT), the hearing was described as a "last opportunity" for the public to submit suggestions regarding the actual design of the project, although written responses will still be accepted for 10 days, and will be treated the same as statements made at the hearing. Input received will be used in designing the final plan to be completed in April, 1982. This will be presented to the City Council for their approval before final construction is begun.

The proposed solution consists of frontage roads and channelization, and was decided upon after studying four different alternatives and evaluating their benefits and shortcomings. It contains components of three of the alternatives selected on the basis of safety, effectiveness, practicality and cost.

This desing concept involves rebuilding T.H. 59 in stages, adding a center lane with medians turns, closing most accesses to the highway, with access given by frontage roads which would have access to the highway at major streets. Estimated cost was $950,000 plus right of way costs of $566,000 of which the city would be responsible for 70 per cent or $425,000. The city would also be responsible for paying between 7 and 10 thousand dollars for installing $70,000 worth of signal lights at First Street.

Pre-design engineers Steve Baker and Clem Kachelmyer explained the plan and reasoning behind some of its features. Kachelmyer noted that it was always more difficult to work with an existing facility than to design a new one. The fact that the business development was not present when the highway was built, and that most intersections were "skewed" at 45 degree angles rather than at right angles complicated the design.

Ron Studer, right-of-way engineer, explained procedures for acquisition of land, noting that direct purchase was the preferred method, but that the state did have powers of eminent domain to gain right-of-way. He said that initial contacts with property owners would not be made until early 1982, and that offers would not be made until 1983. In all cases, appraisals would be made, and relocation assistance would be given.

Mayor Carlson stated that City Council would have to make a decision on how to fund its share of the project. He noted that State Aid Fund reserves could be used to avoid floating a bond issue, but left the decision for a future date. The remainder of the costs would be born by MnDOT.

Ev Ault, Northland Foods questioned the number of approaches cut out in the area of his parking lot and expressed concern over the inconvenience it might cause his customers. Baker noted that an alternative access was provided off First Street behind the Holiday station. He said that one of the big concerns of the job was the multiple accesses, commenting that there had been 70 accidents in four years along the route.

Eldor Ornquist, owner of Speed's Service, expressed concern over drainage and elevation problems and what the changes in exits and entrances would do to his business. He was informed that drainage would be dealt with more thoroughly in the more advanced design. Ornquist suggested that making an entrance at Nelson Drive rather than Sherwood would be better for his business, commenting that with 7,000 cars per day average going by and an expected increase of two per cent per year, the gas station was needed. He also noted that the use of Nelson Drive would provide a preferred right angle approach. Baker allowed that he had a good point.

David Jansen, owner of T-59 Motel noted that the median would keep northbound traffic from entering his business. His wife Mavis asked how they were going to get business into their motel, noting that drivers weren't likely to turn around and come back looking for an entrance. Studer suggested that it might be done with signing directing traffic to turn left on First and come in through the back. Jansen noted that still didn't solve problems involved in getting trucks in and out.

A comment by Jansen that there were a lot of people against the project caused Mayor Carlson to note only five forms indicated people wanting to speak. "If you have some strong objections to this project, now is the time to come forward and let us know about it!"

Jerry Jensen, Holiday Station Stores, expressed hope that a way could be found to maintain full access to their business rather than the limited access shown in the plan. He also commented that it was "kind of ironic" that a project that would cost 1.2 million was unfundable, but that a project that would cost $1.5 million as estimated in the report was fundable.

The 1.2 million project referred to was an alternative considered involving constructing a four lane section with curb and gutter. It was explained that the alternative would remove the project from the safety category, forcing it to compete for funds with other projects across the state. It also would require the city to pay a majority of storm sewer costs of approximately $500,000. The ability to fund the chosen project out of the safety program in stages was named as the primary reason for choosing the one they did.

Paul Halverson who owns land across from where the frontage road would enter First Street expressed concern that lights from the road would shine into his neighbors' windows. He suggested that having it enter across from Oak Avenue would be a better alternative. He also requested that the access road be required to yield right of way to First Street at the intersection. His points were taken under advisement.

A question regarding property owned by Alderman Don Goodrich was answered by Baker who said it was no different than any other property on the project and would be treated the same.

Lowell Johnson, representing Johnson Car Wash, questioned snow removal procedures and was informed that the city would be responsible for maintaining the frontage roads. He noted that location of the frontage roads would force his business to be torn down.

On a request for further comments or questions, Mavis Jansen stated, "I think the only thing that Highway 59 needs is stoplights on First Street and 59, and to take the speed limit down to 30 mph."

Baker stated that what would happen now, would be that transcripts of the hearing would be prepared and studied by Mn-DOT. He said the comments would not be ignored. "We're going to take a look at them," he added, "We're going to do the best job we can with the comments that you've made to come up with a solution that we feel is the best from a safety standpoint and is also the best from the standpoint of all the public concerned."

He said that a final plan would be prepared in about April and would be presented to the council. A design study will be prepared and will be available for public review. He noted that City Council was "really the only place you now have to take your disagreement to, because they'll have to put their stamp of approval on that final plan before we can proceed."

MN. League Of Disabled Voters Is Formed

Minnesota's disabled citizens now may become active in the legislative process through the new Minnesota league of disabled voters (LDV).

Gary Flackney, attorney at law, former Hennepin county attorney and former state representative, will be keynote speaker for the first LDV state convention set November 14 from 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. at Seward Square apartments, 2121 S. 9th St., Minneapolis, MN, 55404. All concerned citizens are encouraged to attend. There is no charge for this day-long conference.

Goal of this non-profit, non-partisan organization is to develop a viable and educated political force, comprised of persons representing all disability groups. This can only be accomplished by the networking of an informed citizenry; by developing collective agreement on broad principles and policies; by showing that disabled persons have a political base; by developing individual skills and involvement; and by enabling grassroots, community planning and involvement, stated a release from the Minnesota State Council for the hadicapped. Convention is designed to provide the necessary ammunition for participants to return to their communities and form local chapters.

Anyone can become a member of the Minnesota League of Disabled Voters whether they are disabled or not. Membership fees of $10 for one full year can be sent to Mary Ellefson, Sister Kenny Institute, 2727 Chicago Ave., Minneapolis, MN. 55407. Membership can also be paid at the November 14 convention, although one need not be a member to attend.

For further information, contact Mary Ellefson (days) at (612) 874-4482 or Cheri Engstrom (evenings) at (612) 789-6595.

Northmen Host Itasca Saturday

It may sound repetitious, but look for another defensive struggle Saturday when the Northland community college football team plays host to Itasca in a 1:30 p.m. Northern Division game on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

Nobody has been able to generate much offense against the highly regarded Northland defense this fall, and Itasca, in spite of a strong offensive performance in a surprisingly easy 35-14 win over Brainerd last week, can probably expect to have trouble moving the football here. The Northland defense and the lousy condition of the playing field will undoubtedly make it tough sledding for the visitors. And on the other side, the Northland offense hasn't been able to do much in rain or shine.

"Our strong suit is our defense," acknowledged Northland coach John Helley, "and that's what we'll rely on Saturday. We'll try to please the fans with out defensive play and try to come up with some offense."

Maybe it's hard to get enthused about watching a defensive gootball game. But it might well be worth your effort Saturday to take in the final Northland home game of the 1981 season. Thief River Falls football fans began to appreciate the defensive play of the Lincoln high school football team began to appreciate the defensive play of the Lincoln high school football team this fall even though the Prowlers never won a game, and Northland is in the same mold. You aren't likely to see a harder-hitting, better defensive football team in the Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA).

And the best of the bunch is sophomore tackle Mark Stock, a 5-9, 180-pounder from Mahnomen who is a shoo-in for post-season individual honors. He's quite possibly the best defensive player in the state and he deserves to be a junior college All-American.

Miscellaneous

+ University of North Dakota field hockey goalie Marchell Cuppett of Thief River Falls recorded her eleventh shut out of the 1981 season Saturday when the Sioux, after losing the first game 2-1, blanked the University of Manitoba 1-0 for a doubleheader split in Winnipeg. Cuppett carries a 0.42 goals-against average for the 17-4 Sioux, giving up nine goals in 21 games.

+ Marshall County Central high school graduate Ray Kvalvog earned all-conference honors at the 1981 Northern Intercollegiate Conference (NIC) cross country championships Saturday. The Moorhead State University freshman placed fourth in the 10,000-meter race that was won by teammate Dave Sederquist, a senior All-American from Bagley, who had a winning time of 83:14. Kvalvog was the second MSU runner across the line, helping the Dragons easily win the NIC title with 25 points, followed by Minnesota-Duluth 63, Bemidji State 82, Northern State 87, Southwest State 140, Winona State 143 and Minnesota-Morris 306. Moorhead had seven runners among the top 11 finishers.

+ Detroit Lakes and Staples, a pair of Thief River Falls football foes this fall, share first place in the tight Mid-State Conference race with Park Rapids and Wadena heading into Friday's key showdowns when the Lakers will be at Wadena and the Cardinals will host Park Rapids. All four are 2-1 in league play.

+ East Grand Forks, having been awarded a 2-0 forfeit win over Thief River Falls for this Friday's scheduled high school football game that will not be played because of the teacher's strike here, has secured a post-season playoff berth as a Class A independent. The Green Wave, after having earlier beaten Crookston 13-7, met the Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) guidelines for landing a playoff spot by beating both the Pirates and Prowlers and by finishing with a better-than-.500 record. They shut out Devils Lake last week, and with the forfeit Friday at 5-3 for the year going into the regular season finale Thursday, October 29, against Fergus Falls. The Green Wave play the Sea Range Conference champion on the road in a preliminary qualifying game that must be completed by Nov. 3 leading to the MSHSL state Class A quarterfinals Nov. 7 when the East Grand Forks-Sea Range winner will be pitted against the Mid-State vs. Heart O' Lakes preliminary round game winner.

Three Middle River ball carriers cracked the 100-yard barrier Tuesday as the unbeaten Skippers ran up a 36-12 North Tri County Conference high school football win over McIntosh-Winger.

The win clinched at least a conference title tie for the 8-0 Skippers and assured them of a spot in the Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) state nine-man playoffs. They'll try to complete an undefeated regular season Tuesday at Grygla-Gatzke before beginning post-season play.

Middle River players, coaches and fans celebrated the Skippers' first football title since 1963 following yesterday's win over the defending North Tri County Conference champions. Last time Middle River reigned as champions was in 1963 when the Skippers won what is now basically the Northern Lights Conference.

"It's a pretty big deal here," explained Middle River coach Eldon Sparby, a member of the Skippers' 1963 team — the last Middle River team to enjoy an unbeaten season.

The Skippers led from start to finish Tuesday, jumping out to a 14-0 lead on touchdowns by Mike Peterson (20 yards) and Steve Bengtson (six yards), along with a two-point conversion run by Jeff Cwikla.

Those three produced nearly all of the Skippers' offensive statistics as Cwikla carried the ball 16 times for 127 yards and two touchdowns; Bengtson went 20 times for 120 yards and one touchdown; and Peterson ran 12 times for 100 yards and two touchdowns. Middle River netted 371 yards worth of offense — all on the ground.

"We got a lot of offense on the ground," acknowledged Sparby, who gave a good part of the credit to standout lineman Ryan Johnson. "He just blew his kid away," he said.

Still, it wasn't a breeze. "They (Scots) gave us a good game," noted Sparby. "We had to play some defense. It was a good game for us."

Middle River's first-ever venture into post-season football play will begin Tuesday, November 3, when the Skippers will host an MSHSL preliminary qualifying game at 3 p.m. The opponent that afternoon will be the winner of an elimination game Friday, October 30, that will match the winners of the Northern Lights and Top of the State conferences. Argyle has a lock on the Top of the State Conference at this point and will host that playoff game at 7:30 p.m.

Winner of the Nov. 3 game at Middle River will move into the MSHSL state quarterfinals Nov. 7 vs. the winner of a game matching the Agassiz North and Agassiz South conference winners.

MIDDLE RIVER runningback Jeff Cwikla broke through the McIntosh-Winger line for a good-size gain Tuesday during the North Tri County Conference high school football game played in Middle River. Mike Peterson (17) of the Skippers looked on as Cwikla got by the Scots' Craig Carver (82) and John Tofsley (77). Middle River clinched a post-season nine-man playoff berth with a 36-12 win that hiked the Skippers' record to 8-0. (Photo by Alice Hofstad).

Fergus Falls 16, Northland 0; University of Minnesota-Crookston 13, Mesabi 6; Golden Valley Lutheran 20, Vermilion 7; Itasca 35, Brainerd 14.

Schedule

Sat., Oct. 24 — Brainerd at Mesabi; University of Minnesota-Crookston at Vermilion; Itasca at Northland; Golden Valley Lutheran at Hibbing.

Much-publicized Northland defense will be matched against a yardage-producing Itasca offense Saturday in a 1:30 p.m. community college football game on the Thief River Falls athletic field. It'll be the final home appearance of the 1981 season for the Northmen, who will close out the year Oct. 31 at Brainerd.

Northland's defense has made the Northmen competitive in the Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) Northern Division, giving up just 70 points in six games — an 11.7 points per game average. But the Northland offense hasn't held up its end of the bargin, and as a result the Northmen are 2-4 and near the bottom of the nine-team standings. The offense, in fact, has scored just one touchdown in the past four games. Even a 9-0 win over Hibbing during that stretch saw the defense score the points on a fumble recovery return and a safety.

The headline-making Northland defense centers around sophomore tackle Mark Stock, a 5-9, 180-pounder from Mahnomen who has been praised by nearly every opposing coach this fall.

Two other Mahnomen products are also in the defensive line — sophomore Mike Busse, a 5-11, 192-pound end who has also drawn a considerable amount of attention, and freshman Mike Oppegard, a 5-11, 210-pound tackle. The other starter is Steve Sletten, a 6-5, 195-pound freshman from Thief River Falls who stepped into the line-up last week in a 16-0 loss at Fergus Falls in the absence of Dave Gorski, a 6-0, 180-pound sophomore from Lancaster who was involved in an automobile accident Friday night.

Linebackers in the 4-4 defensive set include two Thief River Falls freshmen — Marty Semanko, a 5-7, 174-pounder, and Steve Jorstad, a 5-7, 165-pounder — along with 5-6, 160-pound sophomore Jeff Canivez of Baudette and 5-11, 190-pound freshman Don Hudec of Kelliher.

Sophomore Coby Burslie, a 5-9, 175-pounder from McIntosh, and freshman Dave Odegaard, a 6-1, 155-pounder from Thief River Falls, line up as defensive backs, with Thaddous Forman, a 6-1, 175-pounder from Oak Park, Mich. at safety.

That unit may set a real challege Saturday with Itasca. The Vikings beat Brainerd 35-14 last week by producing 406 yards worth of offense. Itasca's best game of the year included a 140-yard rushing performance by John Stifter and a big day for Marshall County Central high school graduate Brian Skadsem, who caught four passes, including touchdown receptions of 49 and 39 yards from quarterback Cameron Gagne.

The results left the Vikings at 3-3 for the year. They earlier beat Mesabi 20-6 and edged Vermilion 15-14 while losing to the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) 19-7, Hibbing 25-6 and Fergus Falls 49-3.

Northland's offense, meanwhile is unsettled. Two starters will definitely miss the game, with John Dillon, a sophomore fullback from Thief River Falls, sidelined by an ankle injury suffered at Fergus Falls, and Nate Kiel, a freshman tight end from Kasilof, Alaska out because of a fractured collarbone suffered in that Friday night car accident. Gorski, meanwhile, was a back-up at both positions.

"We're really hurting on offense," admitted Northland coach John Helley. "We're going to have to shore it up and keep it pretty basic. We're really going to be limited in what we can do. We'll just have to play strong defense and hope we can force a break or two."

Troy Levehagen, a 5-6, 155-pound freshman from Lancaster, will probably move into the fullback spot behind freshman quarterback Scott Wiebolt of Thief River Falls and alongside of sophomore halfback Mike Punton of Baudette. Jeff Westberg, a sophomore from Warren who was a quarterback last year but a full-time receiver this fall, may be moved to tight end, with Dave Furbish, a first-year sophomore who is listed as a quarterback, expected to take over Westberg's old spot.

Elsewhere in the Northern Division last week, UMC got by Mesabi 13-6 and Golden Valley Lutheran defeated Vermilion 20-7.

This week, Brainerd will be at Mesabi, UMC at Vermilion and Golden Valley Lutheran at Hibbing, with Fergus Falls playing the Mayville State junior varsity in a Thursday non-conference game.

NCC Volleyball Schedule Will Resume Friday

Northland community college volleyball team, having beaten each of the other three Northwest Division opponents in the first portion of the home-and-home series with Brainerd, Fergus Falls and the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC), will begin its second trip through the schedule Friday when the Northwomen play a 6:30 p.m. match at Brainerd.

Saturday the Deb Jacobson-coached Northland squad, 9-8 overall, will host Rainy River in an 11:30 a.m. match in the Northland gym.

Moose Hunting Report Given For This Area

Area game manager Jon Parker of the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources reported Tuesday that the preliminary report of the 1981 moose hunting season in northwestern Minnesota found 400 of the 480 licensed foursomes downing an animal this fall.

The 83 per cent success figure topped the 79 per cent mark recorded for the area in the latest Minnesota moose season held in 1979.

Moose hunting season ended Tuesday. Most of the moose were taken during the first weekend of the hunt, and the condition of the animals brought into DNR checking stations were reported as "very good," indicating the periodic Minnesota moose season is helping to keep the state's moose herd in good shape.

Zone 4 hunting area north of Thief River Falls reported 53 of the 60 moose hunting parties (four hunters in each party) had bagged an animal, while Zone 8 north to Viking and including part of Pennington county, had a 25-for-35 take. Zone 3, which included the Thief Lake area, had a 66-for-80 success figure.

A December hunt, which will include 25 moose permits, will be held in the Agassiz, Elm Lake, Eckvoll and Mud Lac areas.

Huskies Edge Rival Eagles

Match-up of area rivals Tuesday afternoon produced an 8-6 Goodridge win over Grygla-Gatzke in a North Tri County Conference high school football game played at Grygla.

The Huskies won it combining a strong defensive effort with just enought offense to get by, explained Goodridge coach Rich Nelson. "Our defense really played well," he said. "Offensively we came through when we had to."

Goodridge points came with about two minutes remaining in the first half when Ken Frazer reached the end zone from nine yards out. Jeff Langan then hauled in a conversion pass from Tony Wiseth for what proved to be the winning points.

Grygla-Gatzke, after having been stopped three times in first-and-goal situations inside the Goodridge 10-yard line, turned a Goodridge mistake into third quarter points when the Huskies mishandled a punt snap and turned the ball over to the Eagles at the Goodridge 9-yard line.

Three plays later Brian Olson caught a six-yard touchdown pass from Rodney Hagen to narrow the gap to 8-6 on the final play of the third quarter. But the try for the tying two-point conversion pass fell incomplete.

Nelson cited middle linebacker Darrell Wiskow, who led the strong Goodridge defensive performance, with Kurt Sigerud, John Cullen and Langan also receiving postgame praise.

The results left Goodridge with a 2-6 record, with Grygla-Gatzke slipping to 1-7. The Huskies will close out the 1981 season Tuesday at Plummer, with the Eagles hosting unbeaten Middle River that afternoon.

Cardinals Are 2-0 Winners Over Bobcats

Freshman Jodi Pahlen and senior Sheila Gustafson led Plummer to an 18-7, 18-14 two-game sweep over Oslo Tuesday in-area high school volleyball action.

Pahlen finished with 13 service points and seven kill spikes, while Gustafson came up with a near-identical 12 service points and seven kill spikes.

Plummer 9-6 for the year, will close out the 1981 regular season at home with matches Thursday, October 22, vs. Mount St. Benedict and Tuesday, October 29, vs. Erskine.

At Middle River Tuesday, Grygla-Gatzke won 18-9, 18-9 to finish its North Border Conference season 6-6. The Eagles, 9-10, overall, will play Tri-County Thursday at Karlstad.

New Director Nominated For Wildlife Post

Robert A. Jantzen, former director of the Arizona Game and Fish Department, has been nominated by President Reagan to be director of the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Jantzen has spent much of his career in wildlife management leadership positions, having been past president of the international association of fish and wildlife agencies and chairman of the national waterfowl council.

"The president has made an excellent choice in selecting Bob Jantzen," Secreatry of the Interior James Watt said. "He is considered by many of his peers as a 'wildlife manager's manager.' His executive skills and broad experience in dealing with many of the most pressing wildlife and enivronmental issues of the day come at a time when they are sorely needed."

Bob Jantzen has a keen appreciation of the need to balance legitimate uses of the nation's wildlife resources with the need to conserve this precious heritage for future generations. He is a fine biologist who has the courage of his convictions and is held in very high esteem by wildlife professionals," Watt added.

As director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Jantzen will administer the agency in the Interior Department which oversees the federal endangered species and migratory bird conservation programs, predator control, the 89-million-acre 410-unit national wildlife refuge system, the national fish hatchery system, federal fish and wildlife research and other programs aimed at minimizing environmental degradation to fish and wildlife habitat throughout the nation.

Jantzen, 53, is from Phoenix, Arizona. He has a B.S. degree in wildlife management and also completed studies at the graduate level. From 1953 to 1981, Jantzen worked for the Arizona Game and Fish Department.

Jantzen has also served as chairman of the Pacific waterfowl flyway council, Western association of fish and wildlife agencies and the Colorado river wildlife management council.

Clinics Offered For Hockey, Cage Coaches

Minnesota state high school coaches association will hold its annual basketball and hockey clinics Friday, Saturday and Sunday, November 6, 7 and 8, at the Ramada Inn in Bloomington.

Clinics will feature Sam Skarich of St. Cloud State University in basketball and Lou Vairo, a coach of national prominence, in Hockey. They will be joined by some of the top high school and small college coaches from the area in both sports.

Highlighting the weekend for all coaches will be the Minnesota high school coaches association annual awards banquet. Along with the awards to the championship coaches, and the induction of new members into the "Coaches 25 Year Club", The Minnesota high school coaches hall of fame will be adding new members. Six coaches will be inducted into the hall and will be presented with a plaque.

New inductees are Ove Berven, Austin; Lloyd Holm, St. Louis Park; Earle Teas, Pipestone; Clifford Thompson (deseased), Eveleth; George Saunders, Pine City; and Herb Wolfe, Fairmont.

Master of ceromonies for this years banquet will be Don Swanson, former football coach at Minneapolis Patrick Henry.

Minnesota state high school coaches association sponsors two clinics each year. A summer coaching clinic includes football and soccer. The Ramada Inn in Bloomington serves as headquarters for coaches association meetings and the two annual clinics.

SOUGHT BY WATERFOWL hunters from Canada to Mexico, this handsome "curly-tail" drake mallard and a pair of companions enjoyed a relaxing noontime break Saturday in Fergus Falls while being stalked by The Times cameraman, who took a few minutes prior to the kickoff of the Northland vs. Fergus Falls community college football game in Fergus Falls to watch the mallards and Canada geese — wild birds — utilize the lake and park sanctuary situated in the middle of town. Then just minutes before game time at the Fergus Falls community college field, countless geese sailed overhead as the obviously-impressed Northmen looked on.

Schedule

Wed., Oct. 21 — Marshall County Central at Argyle.
Fri., Oct. 23 — Greenbush at Hallock, Stephen at Tri-County.

Marshall County Central will be cast in the role of spoiler tonight (Wednesday) when the Nordics travel to Argyle for a Top of the State Conference high school football game against the unbeaten Eagles, who will be trying to clinch at least a pennant tie and a post-season berth in the Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) nine-man football playoffs.

Argyle, a 48-3 winner over Hallock last week when Mike Labine scored three touchdowns to hike his Top of the State Conference-leading scoring total to 98 points, would be assured of a post-season playoff berth with a win tonight. The 6-0 Eagles would meet the Northern Lights Conference winner Friday, October 30, at 7:30 p.m. at Argyle to kick-off the playoff activity, with the winner rounding out the 16-team MSHSL preliminary round playoff field, going against the North Tri County Conference champion Tuesday, November 3.

Marshall County Central, 4-3 for the year, was 2-0 when it met Argyle for the first of their two meetings this fall. The Eagles handled the Nordics 28-7 at Newfolden back on Sept. 19.

In Friday night Top of the State play this week, Greenbush will be at Hallock and Stephen plays Tri-County at Karlstad. In addition to Argyle's easy win over Hallock last week, Marshall County Central ripped Tri-County 55-0 and Stephen shut out Greenbush 8-0.

Jay Labine trails Mike Labine 98-76 in the Top of the State scoring race, with Doug Schindele of Stephen a distant third with 44 points.

While Tri-County and Greenbush were shut out last week, Hallock avoided the same plight when Larry Fertig kicked a 52-yard field goal for the Bears' only points against Argyle.

Marshall County Central, after visiting Argyle tonight, will close its 1981 season Tuesday, October 27, by hosting Hallock in Newfolden.

According to Ranger Rick's Nature magazine, a single bee hive can contain as many as 60,000 to 70,000 bees at one time, and produce in one year up to 100 pounds of honey.

Bulldogs Beat Cards 34-12

Gonvick-Trail broke open Tuesday's North Tri County Conference high school football game with visiting Plummer by scoring 20 third quarter points en route to a 34-12 victory.

"I thought we played pretty good defense in the first half," reported Plummer coach Gary Brantl, whose team trailed 14-0 at halftime. "Offensively they shut us down pretty pretty good," he admitted.

It was all Gonvick-Trail in the third quarter as Alan Wolden scored two of his three touchdowns after intermission.

Plummer scored single touchdowns in the third and fourth quarters as Steve Fossell caught a 41-yard scoring pass from Dean Sletten and Mike Konickson pulled in a 21-yard scoring toss from Tim Peters.

Sletten finished the game with 92 yards on 17 carries, with Fossell catching three passes for 77 yards.

Defensively, Brantl cited the play of Sletten at middle linebacker where he had seven solo tackles and a fumble recovery and eighth grader Gary Torkelson, a defensive tackle who had nine tackles and an interception — his third of the year.

Plummer, 2-6, will close out its 1981 season Tuesday at home against Goodridge.

Restricted Use Of Motor Boats Noted By DNR

Department of Natural Resources reminded hunters that motor boats are not allowed from Oct. 3, through Nov. 21 on certain lakes.

These waters have been designated "migratory waterfowl feeding and resting areas" and include Upper Rice Lake, Clearwater county; Bear Lake, Freeborn county; Squaw Lake, Itasca county; South Heron Lake, Jackson county; Lake Johanna, Pope county; part of Lake Christina in Grant and Douglas counties; part of Marsh Lake in Big Stone, Lac qui Parle and Swift counties; and part of Lake Lizzie, Ottertail county.

Officials said the rule is found on page 11 of the 1981 waterfowl hunting regulations available from license agents.

NATIONAL HIGH SCHOOL activities week is being observed October 19-25. It is a week in which the 512 member schools of the Minnesota State High School League (at least those not involved in strikes) are involved in a project to recognize student participation and community support of the interscholastic activity programs in school. Pictured at the signing of the proclamation ceremony recently at the state capitol were, left to right front row, Governor Al Quie and Lieutenant Governor Lou Wangberg; back row left to right, Elaine Niehoff, Melrose, treasurer, MSHSL board of directors and a state school boards association representative on the board; Gene Olive, Richfield, vice-president, MSHSL board and Region 5AA representative on the board; Dorothy Myintyre, assistant director, MSHSL executive staff; and Orv Bies, assistant director, MSHSL executive staff.

Donations To Aid New DNR Class Program

Contributions totalling $6,600 have been donated to the Department of Natural Resurces since Jan. 1 to help fund the new DNR advanced hunter education program.

Roger Grosslein, program director, said donations have been received from the Minnesota Safari club, Minnesota conservation federation, Minnesota waterfowl association, Minnesota wildlife heritage foundation and the Minnesota state archery association.

The program is voluntary and is designed for sportsmen 16 years of age and older. It's objective is to teach hunting skills, promote better relations between landowners and hunters, provide information on wildlife and habitat, improve ethics and sportsmanship and teach personal safety rules beyond those taught at the department's firearms safety training classes.

Grosslein emphasized that the advanced hunter education program should not be confused with the long established youth firearms safety program.

He said contributions to the advanced hunter education program are tax deductible. For those who wish to contribute, checks must be made out to the Minnesota State Treasurer and mailed to: Advanced Hunter Education Program, Box 46, Centennial Building, St. Paul, MN 55155-1679.

In Memoriam

In memory of Richard Eliason, sadly missed by his daughters Renee, Darlene and Charlene, and his mother, Tillie Eliason:

God has not promised skies always blue
Flower-strewn pathways all our lives through,
God has not promised sun without rain,
Joy without sorrow, peace without pain.
But God has promised strength for the day
Rest for the labor, light for the way,
Grace for the trials, help from above
Unfailing sympathy, undying love.

30-Year-Old Blood Samples May Yield Data

by Ralph Heussner
'U'M News Service

University of Minnesota medical scientists are taking a trip back in time to acquire a better understanding of streptococcal infections and rheumatic fever.

Drs. Edward L. Kaplan and Lewis Wannamaker will soon begin re-evaluating 40,000 blood samples collected during the late 1940s and early 1950s when rheumatic fever and rheumatic disease were a significant health hazard in the United States.

"This is a classical collection," Kaplan said of the data, housed in four 20-foot freezers in a medical school labaratory. "It is not very often that you have this kind of opportunity to go back and study a subject with the benefit of all of the knowledge of the next 30 years."

The blood samples — each contained in a thumb-sized vial — were collected by Dr. Charles Rammelkamp and his colleagues at Case-Western Reserve university in Cleveland, Oh., who conducted one of the most comprehensive studies ever done of streptococcal infection and rheumatic heart disease. Those studies contributed to the development of improved treatment regimens for patients with strep infections.

When he retired last year, Rammelkamp offered the data to the Minnesota scientists. Kaplan is a professor of pediatrics, and Wannamaker is a professor of pediatrics and microbiology and was an associate of Rammelkamp's during the earlier studies. Wannamaker received the 1980 Koch medal in medicine for his pioneering work in the pathogenesis of streptococcal infections.

"These were very careful epidemological studies which will never be repeated again. We can now go back and ask some important questions based on new knowledge," Kaplan said.

While rheumatic fever and rheumatic heart disease occur less frequently in the United States today, they still represent the most common cause of cardiovascular disease among children and young adults in the developing nations of the world, Kaplan said.

University of Minnesota physicians are occasionally called on to advise public health officials in other nations still facing major outbreaks of rheumatic fever. "It is a huge problem," Kaplan said.

If untreated, about three per cent of the patients who get a strep infection may develop rheumatic fever. Among those who develop the fever, about 40 per cent experience varying degrees of heart damage. But, according to Kaplan, "it is a theoretically preventable disease" if treated properly.

Among the questions which the medical school pediatricians hope to address in this renewed research effort are: What is the mechanism by which a strep infection develops into rheumatic fever? How does the body react to the presence of the streptococcus?

"Because these samples were collected during very careful and extensive studies and because the clinical observations are still available, we can now continue to enlarge our scientific and clinical knowledge about the control of the effects of streptococcal infections," Kaplan said.

A grant from the Minnesota medical foundation enabled Kaplan to visit Cleveland to determine if the blood samples were still in usable condition for research. A refrigeration truck was donated for the transfer of the cargo from Ohio to the university's Minneapolis campus. Stored at five degrees Fahrenheit, the samples arrived "in perfect condition," Kaplan said. A grant from the National Institutes of Health also supported the move.

Kaplan said it is impossible to predict how long the investigation will take. Researchers are now transcribing computer cards — one for every blood sample — onto magnetic tape for evaluation.

Meanwhile, the freezers remain locked in a laboratory, possibly holding some valuable new evidence despite 30 years of cold storage.

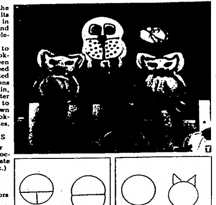
Takes No Tricks To Make These Treats



Irish settlers brought the custom of Halloween and its symbols to this country in the late 19th century, and Americans have been celebrating it ever since.

It takes no tricks to make specially-shaped cookies for your own Halloween celebrations. All you need is ready-to-slice refrigerated cookie dough and directions to cut and shape pumpkin, owl and cat figures. After baking, allow cookies to cool. Then use your own creativity to decorate cookies with frosting and candies.

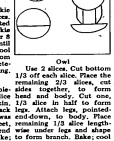
HALLOWEEN COOKIES

1 roll refrigerated sugar (17 oz.) or natural chocolate flavored chocolate chip (16 oz. or 27 oz.) ready-to-slice cookie dough
Buttercream frosting, tinted to desired colors
Pastry tubes & tips.

Slice well-chilled cookie dough into 1/4-inch slices. Shape cookies as directed below on ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 350°F. for 8 to 10 minutes or until light golden brown. Cool 2 minutes. Remove from cookie sheet. Cool completely on rack before decorating.

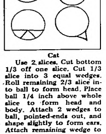
Pumpkin

Use 1 slice. Cut small pie-shaped wedge out of slice to form stem of pumpkin. Push remaining slice back together where wedge was removed. On cookie sheet, place wedge, pointed-end out, on top of slice. Bake; cool on rack.



Owl

Use 2 slices. Cut bottom 1/3 off each slice. Place the remaining 2/3 slices, cut sides together, to form head and body. Cut one, 1/3 slice in half to form legs. Attach legs, pointed-end-down, to body. Place remaining 1/3 slice lengthwise under legs and shape to form branch. Bake; cool on rack.



Cat

Use 2 slices. Cut bottom 1/3 off one slice. Cut 1/3 slice into 3 equal wedges. Roll remaining 2/3 slice into ball to form head. Place ball 1/4 inch above whole slice to form head and body. Attach 2 wedges to ball, pointed-ends out, and shape slightly to form ears. Attach remaining wedge to body, pointed-end out, to form tail. Bake; cool on rack.

Don't Spend Rent Money Withheld

Have you had trouble getting your landlord to make repairs in your apartment? Minnesota residents have the right to withhold rent when their landlord fails to make repairs that violate the housing code or affect basic health and safety. If you have repeatedly notified your landlord of such a problem, you may withhold rent.

However, remember that you should bring the rent money with you to court, ask the judge to reduce your rent because needed repairs were not made, and be prepared to have the judge ask you for the rent.

If you decide to withhold rent, suggests central Minnesota legal services, do so: (1) First, write your landlord a letter outlining the conditions which need to be repaired, keeping a copy of your letter. (2) If the landlord has not made the repairs after a reasonable period of time, get evidence of the need for repairs: if your area has a housing inspections department, call and ask for an inspection (a city housing department can order your landlord to make repairs usually within 30 days); if there is no inspections department, get a witness who will testify in court for you; and if possible, photograph the conditions needing repairs.

(3) If your landlord still refuses to make the repairs, write him or her a letter stating you are going to withhold all part of your rent. (4) Be sure you keep a copy of all letters regarding the repair problem. (5) If you withhold rent, keep it! Do not spend it! If your landlord tries to evict you for not paying rent, you will be asked to bring that money to court for safekeeping. (When you appear in court, bring it with you; if you don't the judge may not listen to your side of the story.)

(6) In court, also bring your witnesses and evidence, be prepared to tell the judge about your repair problems, and ask that the rent be reduced. The judge will then decide how much, if any, your rent should be reduce in light of the landlord's failure to make repairs. Be prepared also, for the possibility that you may be asked to pay the back rent at that time.

"Not more surely is the place prepared for us in the heavenly mansions than is the special place designated on earth where we are to work for God . . . have you found yours?"

Visit The Seventh Day Adventist Church

Servant to the World . . .

Does the name make a difference?

St. John wasn't his last name — that was French and usually mispronounced. But around Cape Cod, he was known simply as St. John, after his home town in Canada.

His appearance seemed far from saintly. Yet it never seemed awkward calling him that. He loved people. He loved the sea. He loved hard work. Most importantly, he loved his church and God. And his enthusiasm was contagious — somehow you felt better after you'd been with St. John.

It's refreshing and exciting to run into someone who tries hard to put his religion into living and working.

Remember that every day. Then folks might feel that same excitement when they run into you and me. That's something to strive for.

Technology In Our Lives

This new computer terminal is considered a major improvement over the oldfashioned cut-and-paste method of making slides.

New computer technology is saving American business time and money on the production of color slides for use in office presentations.

The terminal has a computer terminal with CRT screen and keyboard. The keyboard puts an art studio at the fingertips of the programmer. He or she can choose from a pushbutton palette of 64 colors. For text, the classic Helvetica typeface can be used in three different weights and eight different sizes. The text can be centered, flush left or right, or staggered. A few keyboard commands enable the programmer to see the same information on either a vertical bar chart, a horizontal format, or on a line graph.

As each design element of a slide is displayed on the CRT screen, the corresponding data is electronically recorded on an eight inch floppy disk by this new Xerox 350 CSS. Once you've completed a set of slides, you can review them in sequence for final approval, and then transmit the data over regular telephone lines to a Xerox Reproduction Center. There, the central processing computer and a computer-controlled camera transfer the slide data onto 35mm film. Your finished slides are shipped within 36 hours or sooner, depending on your company's needs.

This new technology is a major improvement over the old-fashioned cut-and-paste method of making slides, eliminating many tedious and costly steps; typesetting, photography, the use of color gels and dyes, overlays, opaquing, stripping-in, working with film negatives, and so on. And just about anyone in the office can be easily trained to use the terminal.

For free leaflets on this new development in computer graphics you can write Xerox Reproduction Centers, Xerox Square 862, Rochester, New York 14644.

Women Farmers

An interesting viewpoint on the world food problem is presented by M.P. Crackness in "World Agriculture" and reprinted in "Farmland News" as follows:

Just who is it that makes the largest contribution to feeding the poor in most Third World countries? The Minister of Agriculture, the World Food Program, the World Bank, or the farmers? Evidently, it is the farmers, but not those who immediately spring to mind!

The answer is: the women farmers.

Speaking of the mass of the rural poor, living on the margin of subsistence, those who together constitute the heart of the world food problem, there is little doubt that they owe their daily meals to the female members of their households. It is likely, moreover, that the burden borne by women in the area of food is growing as men migrate or join the wage economy.

And yet, that role, and its importance, continue to be ignored by policy-makers and economists alike.

In a recent study, two American researchers, Alsa M. Chaney and Martha W. Lewis, have looked at the possible consequences of this neglect, linked with the general economic circumstances in many developing countries.

There is a general division of agricultural labor in developing countries the world over between intensive (plow) agriculture which is the men's domain, the extensive (hoe) agriculture, reserved for women; by extension, commercial or cash crop farming is for men while subsistence or food crop farming is for women.

As economies develop the cash and consumer sector becomes more attractive, greater attention is devoted to cash crops for sale, the cash is used to purchase more "modern" foods as well as consumer items (clothing, kitchen utensils) which used to be made in the home, and despite a higher cash flow, the family often ends up with a lower nutritional standard.

The authors argue strongly for the preservation of the women's smallholding, producing the basic foodstuffs for the family. They recognize that achieving this will be an uphill battle.

The fact is that the "blind spot" which makes women's contribution to agriculture in general, and food production in particular, invisible is deeply ingrained in the prejudices developed since the beginning of civilization.

The tendency to exclude women from extension services and access to agricultural credit and inputs is fairly well documented. Expensive errors can, however, be made as a result. For example, in a resettlement scheme in the Volta Basin, no land was provided for the women for their kitchen gardens, nor access to well, grain mills or market places. Unable to fulfill their most basic function of feeding the family, the women simply left.

Despite the meager means placed at their disposal, women nonetheless manage to equal men in productivity. Cameroonian women are seen as having achieved a "near miracle" in modern times by keeping pace with food requirements of the growing population in both rural and urban areas, in spite of the lack of improvement in their techniques and the difficulties of working the soil with simple implements.

In research (which has largely ignored the food products produced on smallholdings) and in training (where male extension workers train male farmers for tasks they do not typically perform), the effort to solve the world food problem often misses the mark. It is not so much farmers who pass on knowledge to their sons, but rather mothers to daughters, as far as food supplies are concerned.

Progress might come if economists and statisticians made an effort to evaluate the contribution women make to the farm and family economy. But how to place a cash value on food produced and consumed by the family, on wild food gathered when the crops are ripening, on activities to preserve foods, on sorting and storing seeds, on preparing and providing lunches for seasonal laborers (an important part of their wages), on the time spent going to fetch water, to buy a new hoe or stand in line to pay a tax? The answer is that it is difficult and even arbitrary and therefore tends not to be done: only cash income is considered and therefore the value of farm women's contributions is assessed as nil.

Yet, as the cost of energy rises, as food prices on the world market and the domestic market increase through pressures of demand and inflation, as men migrate to wage-earning jobs, the value of the food produced for their families by farm women is increasing to the point where ignoring it is simply a nonsense.

If only they are given the means, the poor rural women in the Third World can do more to relieve the problem of world hunger than 1,000 Ministerial meetings or indeed even the farmers in the plains of North America the pampas of Argentina, or the Beauce region of France.

Growing Gasoline?

Following was written by Kenneth Scheibel of "Washington Farm Beat":

Down on the farm they may be "growing" gasoline one of these days.

That hint comes from the Agency for International Development.

"Energy is closely tied to economic progress," says the agency. Every farmer can vouch for that.

At a time when farming in America is a $136 billion a year industry and U.S. exports of farm products are a record $40 billion a year, it is vital that fuel be assured for the future to maintain economic vitality. Everyone knows — or ought to know — that agriculture is the biggest industry in the United States. But according to the World Bank it uses only three per cent of all energy supplies. Residences use 19 per cent; transportation, 26 per cent; industry 40 per cent; and commercial, 15 per cent; which includes agriculture.

"Grow" gasoline?

Why not?

The Agency for International Development makes an interesting point.

Plant biomass is the conversion of vegetable matter into liquid, solid and gas fuels. It is considered as a promising energy source. "Some fast-growing trees, within a few short years from their start as seedlings, can be harvested for conversion," says AID. One variety of pine grows 100 feet in 12 years and yields 120 tons an acre.

There is a gopher plant which is common in the southwestern United States. It yields a crude oil which can be refined to produce from six to 10 barrels of oil an acre. It also yields sugar — which can be distilled into alcohol.

Brazil reports it has a tree which needs no conversion. The tree can be tapped to produce oil — for transfer directly into the fuel tank of a diesel engine. One tree can yield 21 to 32 gallons of fuel every six months.

In ages past, the world was witnessed miracles in abundance. Mircales exist today as well. From the evidence at hand, we'll see in the future even more miraculous events — like "growing" gasoline down on the farm.

Checking On Cars

About this time each year, automobile manufacturers gear up to introduce their latest models. If you're thinking about buying a new car, you might consider buying a leftover 1981 model instead.

To make room for the new cars, dealers usually offer end-of-the-year specials on their leftover models and you can get a never-been-used car at a good price.

Before shopping, though, you might want to do a little homework. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration of the U.S. Department of Transpprtation offers a free 68-page booklet called "The Car Book," with information about domestic and imported automobiles. To get a free copy, write to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 628J, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Borrowed Nonsense:

A foreign visitor to the U.S. wrote this description of the first baseball game he had evern seen: "You have two sides, one out in the field and one in. Each man that's on the side that's in goes out and when he's out he comes in and the next man goes in until he's out. When three men are out the side that's out comes in and the side that's been in goes out and tries to get those coming in out. Sometimes you get men still in and not out. When both sides have been in and out nine times including the not outs, that's the end of the game."

A policeman at the state fair found a small boy who was lost and crying. "Who were you with?" the policeman asked. "My daddy," the child sniffed. "And what's your father like?" the patrolman pressed. "Booze and women," the youngster sobbed.

The elderly gent decided he couldn't afford a hearing aid, so he bent a piece of ordinary wire and fastened it around his ear. It didn't help his hearing, he said, but it made everybody talk louder.

Nature's Wonders

by Miller

Hutchinson Island, Florida has long been considered by biologists as one of the best nesting beaches in the world for rare green and loggerhead sea turtles. No one knows why these giant sea creatures flock to the island to lay their eggs in the gleaming sand.

LOGGERHEAD TURTLES

Conservationists think it has to do with the warming Gulf Stream just off shore. Others believe it's because man has left the turtles few other choices.

Over-development has destroyed many shorelines where turtles can safely nest. As these beaches disappear into concrete playgrounds, numbers of turtles have declined dramatically. Hutchinson Island, however, is an exception.

Development there has been modest and blends with nature instead of replacing it. The only resort - Indian River Plantation - is more a product of the environment than man's imprint.

This commitment to nature means that sea turtles and visitors alike will always find the same unspoiled beaches of centuries past.

There's much else to see and do on this sun-swept barrier island. Nearby is one of America's largest pelican rookeries and sailfish abound in the crystal-clear waters.

For a free brochure on giant sea turtles, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to: Indian River Plantation, 385 N.E. Plantation Road, Stuart, Florida, 33494.

In my final column summarizing legislation passed in the 1981 session, I would like to talk about transportation. Considering the budget problems facing the Legislature, I feel it is fair to say transportation issues were dealt with in a fair and realistic manner.

The transportation package for the 1982-83 biennium includes $157.37 million in appropriations, and $98 million in bonding authority. The main emphasis will be on maintenance of roads and bridges to ensure that farm to market hauling and other vital transportation needs are met.

In order to provide the funding it was necessary to increase the gas tax by two-cents per gallon and to raise an additional $71 million from vehicle license fees.

The bill contained a novel scheme for funding road maintenance and public transit by shifting proceeds from the excise tax (which currently go into the general fund) to the transportation dedicated fund. Beginning in 1983, revenue collections from a four per cent vehicle excise tax will be progressively shifted, with the dedicated fund receiving 25 per cent of the tax revenues in 1983, 50 per cent in 1985, 75 per cent in 1987, and 100 per cent in 1989.

A great deal of study and debate went into the highway issue during the '81 session. The final transportation bill came about because of the efforts of several task forces in addition to the House and Senate committees. A lot of recommendations were considered before the final package was assembled.

An interim study commission was established to focus on ways to decrease highway maintenance costs and to increase revenue. The commission will study the possibility of contracting with counties for the upkeep of trunk highways, and ways to collect highway user taxes from out-of-state vehicles such as long-haul semi-trucks traveling through the state. Hopefully, the results of this study will prove helpful in the future.

Other legislation related to transportation may also be of interest to you. Included are the following measures:

—Railroads and the Department of Transportation will be required to reimburse cities within 60 days for expenses incurred in fighting a fire in a railroad or highway right-of-way.

—Vehicles weighing 80,000 pounds will now be allowed to operate on all Minnesota roads providing they have six axles.

—Another new law requires that owners of privately-owned billboards and signs along the highway be compensated if they are forced by ordinance or law to remove them.

—Motels may now have informational signs made by the Department of Transportation put up along state highways. The motels will pay for the signs.

If you would like additional information on transportation issues, or if there is other assistance I can provide, please let me know by writing: State Representative LeRoy Stumpf, Route 1, Box 47, Plummer 56748, or phone 465-4274.

The social security system is one of the most important parts of the Federal government. There are few tasks more important for Congress than to see to it that the retirement funds of nearly every American are protected.

In both the short and long runs, social security is in grave trouble.

The immediate problem is caused by the fact that the retirement trust fund is running out of money. In the past, the social security system tried to keep a year's worth of payments in reserve. But as unemployment increased, fewer workers were paying into the trust fund. And inflation kept increasing the benefits that were drained from the trust fund. If these trends continue, and Congress takes no action, the retirement trust fund could go broke next year.

The long-term problems facing the system are more complicated. The social security system has been steadily burdened by programs that have nothing to do with retirement. People are living longer. When the "baby boom" generation retires in the year 2020, there will only be two workers for every retiree. Continued high inflation could cripple the trust funds with false increases. Not even higher payroll taxes would preserve social security under those conditions, unless we act today to make reasonable and effective changes.

Last summer, some politicians, both democratic and republican, turned the debate on social security into a partisan political shouting match. There was a need for a "cooling off" period.

As Congress completes work on the 1982 budget, the time is right to begin the search for a non-partisan and lasting solution to the immediate and long-range crises facing Social Security. President Reagan's televised speech two weeks ago was an important first step in that process.

First, he announced that he would allow the Old Age-Survivors' Insurance (OASI) trust fund to borrow from the disability and hospitalization trust funds for a brief period. This will meet the short-term needs of social security because the last two trust funds are in good shape, for the time being.

But I will oppose any move to make this a permanent policy. If Congress gets used to this "quick-fix" false security, it will dawdle along until all three trust funds are in the verge of bankruptcy before taking long-range action.

Second, he announced that he would not request the elimination of the $122-per-month minimum benefit paid to three million retirees who had not paid payroll taxes long enough to qualify for full retirement benefits.

When the President proposed the elimination of that minimum benefit last summer, I voted twice to restore that benefit for current recipients. It just isn't fair to change the rules on basic retirement benefits for those who already depend on social security.

When we are considering a long-range proposal for social security, I will support measures to tighten requirements for future recipients of the minimum benefit. But I will not support any move to cut earned benefits paid to current retirees.

Third, President Reagan said that he wouldn't ask for a three-month delay of next year's cost of-living adjustment (COLA) for all social security benefits. I believe that this delay would have been unfair.

It would have cost the average recipient about $84 and would not have strengthened the social security system significantly.

Finally, the President asked leaders of both parties to join him in naming a 15-member committee to investigate possible solutions to the long-term crisis facing social security.

We have to find a reasonable, effective and non-partisan plan for protecting Social Security. Too much is at stake for the 36 million recipients and the scores of millions who are currently paying into the system for us to treat this issue as a political football. Hopefully, this committee will de-politicize efforts to shore up social security.

I think that the President's four proposals are sound and well-reasoned. The short-term challenges are solved by inter-fund borrowing. Current minimum benefits are maintained and the three-month COLA delay is cancelled. And a solid proposal for investigating long-term solutions has been put forward.

The speech represented an act of courage by President Reagan. Other Presidents have dug in their heels when they were opposed by Congress and the people. But Ronald Reagan has proved that he is willing to listen.

I hope that the blue-ribbon panel will work in a cooperative, non-partisan spirit. I will support its proposal if basic retirement benefits are maintained, if the long-term solvency of social security is maintained, and if crippling payroll taxes are not imposed on employers and workers. This last point is crucial because retirees on fixed incomes are among the hardest hit by inflation and other economic disruptions.

Because the stakes are so high, we have to act cautiously. But we are beginning to do the necessary work to protect the benefits of current and future social security recipients.

The earliest authenticated strike of workers in the United States in a single trade occurred when Philadelphia printers gained a minimum wage of $6 a week in 1786, according to "Important Events in American Labor History, 1778-1978," a U.S. Department of Labor publication.

Gov. Quie's Column

Concern over the disposal of radioactive waste has risen in recent years. Here in Minnesota I have taken steps to deal specifically with the issue of low-level radioactive waste disposal to allay some of these concerns.

To fully understand this issue it is important to know the difference between high-level radioactive waste and low-level radioactive waste.

High-level radioactive waste includes spent nuclear reactor fuel and wastes from reprocessed reactor fuel and uranium mine and mill tailings. This type of waste contains very high concentrations of radioactive elements and requires shielding and cooling due to the intense levels of radioactivity.

By contrast, low-level radioactive waste has a much lower concentration of radioactive elements and requires less shielding and no cooling. In Minnesota, low-level radioactive waste comes from electrical generating plants, medical facilities, industrial and government resource laboratories, industrial manufacturing facilities and from other miscellaneous applications of radioactive materials. Low-level waste is clearly not as dangerous as high-level radioactive waste.

The federal government has assumed responsibility for the disposal of high level radioactive waste. Responsibility for the disposal of low-level waste has been given to each state. States may either build their own site or enter into a compact with other states to transport wastes to one site for each region of the country.

I do not want a high-level or a low-level radioactive waste site in Minnesota. However, Minnesota produces both high-level and low-level wastes and so far we have depended upon other states to dispose of it. I believe we should joint together with other states to determine the best means for disposal.

On September 11, I designated Commissioner of Health George Pettersen as the lead official for the executive branch for the development and implementation of plans for low-level radioactive waste management. The commissioner is responsible for negotiating the establishment an interstate compact.

In addition, I appointed a task force of 15 members to advise the commissioner of health, the Legislature and myself on all policy issues related to the management of low-level radioactive waste. This task force which met for the first time last week, includes environmentalists, generators of low-level radioactive waste, legislators, representatives of local government, health experts and farmers. This is an important group of people upon whom the state will be relying for recommendations on how to dispose of our low-level radioactive waste.

It is important that Minnesota address this issue in the near future. Only three sites now exist: Barnwell, South Carolina; Beatty, Nevada; and Richland, Wash. After Jan. 1, 1986, states that have entered into compacts using these or other sites may restrict the use of the disposal facilities. We are working to ensure that Minnesota's waste will be properly disposed of now and in the future.

The Versatile Turkey Roast

by Martha Logan

There are as many ways to cook a turkey roast as there are ways to serve it. Two pound Swift's Premium Turkey Roasts with Gravy in the Pan are available as all white meat roasts, all dark meat roasts and with the natural combination of white and dark meat.

Each roast yields 24 slices 1/4-inch thick or 3-1/2 cups cubed turkey for use in recipes.

Conventional and microwave oven roasting directions are printed on the package. But the versatile turkey roast can also be roasted in the convection oven or on the covered grill.

Convection Oven

Loosen foil rim around cardboard cover. Leaving cover in place, turn back two corners along dotted lines. Place covered frozen roast in convection oven set at 350°F. Do not preheat convection oven. Roast for 1 hour 35 minutes. Make gravy following package directions.

Covered Grill

Prepare grill for indirect cooking. Remove cover from turkey roast. Center frozen roast with gravy in the pan over the drip pan. Cover grill keeping all vents open and cook 1-1/4 to 1-1/2 hours. Gravy may be served as is or for larger quantity, prepare following package directions.

VIP Treatment for Carters in Japan

Rosalynn Carter prepares to take a test ride with her son, Chip, and daughter Amy, in a car just coming off the assembly line at a Mitsubishi Motors Corp's plant in Nagoya, Japan.

Some American tourists got the red carpet treatment during a recent visit to an automobile factory in Japan.

Not surprising when you consider that the tourists were none other than Jimmy Carter, his wife, Rosalynn and their son and daughter, Chip and Amy.

The Carters visited the Okazaki assembly plant of the Mitsubishi Motors Corporation (MMC) near Nagoya, Japan. MMC produces Chrysler models including the Dodge Colt Hatchback and Challenger, the Plymouth Champ and Sapporo and the Arrow pick-up and Ram 50.

The Carters viewed with particular interest MMC's approach to some of the problems being tackled by U.S. automakers—exhaust emission controls, improvements in fuel efficiency, and the reduction in labor requirements through use of robots—more than 100 of these "mechanical men" handle intricate manufacturing assignments at this plant.

The Carters, greeted by scores of MMC employees waving Japanese and U.S. flags, followed the car building process from start to finish.

Following the tour, Mr. Carter expressed admiration for MMC's technology and degree of automation. The chairman of MMC, Dr. Tomio Kubo, briefed him on current developments in the company's talks with Chrysler aimed at allowing Mitsubishi to establish distribution of its vehicles in the U.S. market.

Dr. Kubo reported that Mr. Carter was somewhat critical of the restraints imposed upon Japanese automobile producers on selling their product in the U.S. market. He quoted Mr. Carter as saying that such restraints worked against the consumers' interests.

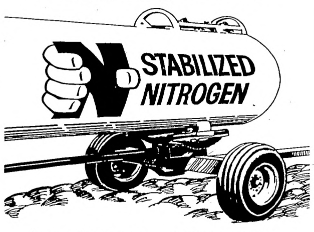
The fall-applied nitrogen that won't leave the soil when things are hot.



A lot of farmers who would like to apply all their nitrogen in the fall don't. And for one good reason. Nitrogen losses.
Which can run up to 50% in a warm, wet season when conditions are optimal for the bacteria that convert regular nitrogen into the forms easily lost.
But stabilized nitrogen resists those bacteria. Resists them so well you can apply all your nitrogen in the fall and be sure it'll still be around to nourish your crop next spring.
And when harvest time arrives you'll have another nice bonus.
Because farmers using stabilized nitrogen average bigger yields.
You see, stabilized nitrogen stays in the soil longer so crops get more nourishment. Therefore you get more crops.
Come in and see us. We'll show you how stabilized nitrogen lets you apply all your nitrogen in the fall.

Hints For Homeowners

Tips On Choosing A Fireplace

An increasing number of homeowners are warming to the idea of installing pre-engineered fireplaces as efficient and attractive supplemental heating sources.

Before buying a fireplace, though, the homeowner should consider four important points—efficiency, safety, beauty and the added value to the home that the product can contribute.

One recently developed product that scores high marks in all four areas is the Warm Majic heat circulating fireplace from Majestic Company, the leader in the factory-built fireplace industry.

The Warm Majic has been rated 41-43 percent efficient by the Wood Heating Alliance. In fact, recent tests at Majestic's headquarters in Huntington, Ind., show that the fireplace, with fan option, has about the same heating capacity as the typical gas furnace from a 1,500 sq. ft. home.

And the Warm Majic is designed so the handy homeowner can install it in an existing home in a single weekend. Detailed installation manuals accompany each unit and ordinary tools are sufficient. Of course, you can also have a professional install the unit if you prefer. Efficiency ratings and easy, inexpensive installation alone are attractive reasons for buying any factory-built fireplace when compared to the conventional masonry fireplaces.

This fireplace, which comes with a 25-year limited warranty, is safety tested and listed by Underwriters Laboratories. Today, there are more than 1 million Majestic fireplaces in use.

There are many ways to decorate around a fireplace, from elaborate to simplistic. A few examples of rooms with the fireplace used as the focal point may range from formal and contemporary family rooms to a rustic bedroom.

Another important feature for homeowners to consider when choosing a supplemental heat source such as fireplaces is the added value the product may contribute to the home. McGraw-Hill's Housing Magazine conducted a survey recently that showed consumers would be willing to pay up to $2,000 for a fireplace in the home.

BACK TO SCHOOL WITH OATMEAL ENGLISH MUFFIN BREAD

Here's a novel idea for delicious lunchbox sandwiches and after school snacks—English Muffins in a loaf, with the fresh wheaty aroma of oatmeal. Kids love the taste of oatmeal and you'll love the ease and convenience in preparing this loaf. This bread tastes like real English Muffins and it even has nooks and crannies. It is a batter bread which requires no kneading and only one rising. It can be baked via microwave or the conventional oven in a snap! Try it with any type of sandwich or by itself with butter and jam!

OATMEAL ENGLISH MUFFIN BREAD

Makes 2 loaves

- 4 1/4 cups unsifted flour
- 1 cup old fashioned oats, uncooked
- 2 packages Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast
- 1 tablespoon dark brown sugar
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 2 cups milk
- 1/2 cup water
- Cornmeal

In a large bowl combine 2-1/4 cups flour, oats, undissolved yeast, brown sugar, salt and baking soda. Combine milk and water in a saucepan. Heat over low heat until liquids are very warm (120°F. to 130°F.). Gradually add to dry ingredients and beat well. Stir in remaining flour to make a stiff batter. Spoon into two 8-1/2 x 4-1/2 x 2-1/2 or 9 x 5 x 3-inch loaf dishes which have been greased and coated with cornmeal. Sprinkle tops of loaves with additional cornmeal. Cover; let rise in a warm place, free from draft, for 45 minutes.

Microwave each loaf on high power for 6 minutes, 30 seconds. Surface of loaf will be flat and pale in color. Allow to rest 5 minutes before removing from dishes. To serve, slice and toast.

TO BAKE IN CONVENTIONAL OVEN

Stir 1 cup additional unsifted white flour into batter to make a very soft dough. Spoon into two 8-1/2 x 4-1/2 x 2-1/2-inch loaf pans that have been greased and sprinkled with cornmeal. Sprinkle tops with cornmeal. Allow dough to rise as directed. Bake at 400°F. for 25 minutes. Remove from pans immediately and cool.

Time-Tested Collectibles Reduce Risks

Although no collectible is certain to appreciate in value, or provide quick profits, some collectibles are less risky than others. To minimize the risk of losing money, says the Minnesota Society of certified public accountants (CPAs), search for quality collectibles in well established fields. And be prepared to hold acquisition for five to 10 years.

According to dealers, stamps, coins and diamonds currently rank highest in investment popularity behind gold, oil and silver. Their popularity stems, in part, from having established standards for evaluation of their worth. These standards mean a collectible is less likely to lose value because of popular trends. Even if a profit can't be made from a collection, a collector should be able to sell for the price he paid originally. Trading in these areas, CPAs say, may be slow but prices rarely fall.

Liquidity figures importantly in the popularity of collectibles. To judge the size of a market, simply count the number of dealers listed in the yellow pages. Because an influx of investors raises prices, trendy fields show spurts of growth followed by sudden decline. But the market for fine and decorative art and collectibles is stable because it depends on collectors who enjoy their hobby with or without a profit.

Nostalgia items, on the other hand, often exhibit the inconsistency of fads. Occasionally headlines of a record breaking sale of baseball cards, comic books or autographs, may be read, but memorabilia will probably be more difficult to sell. Actions occur infrequently and dealers profit by buying low and selling high. If an investment is made in these riskier, less rare collectibles, CPAs advise, keep in mind how strongly their prices react to changes in taste.

Historically, numismatics (coins) is one of the highest yeild, lowest risk investments. Over the past five years 20 rare U.S. coins appreciated more than 20 per cent. Experts say that three billion to four billion coins are traded annually. This large, well established market, CPAs say, makes numismatics one of the most liquid collectibles.

Monetary value of coins offers you small safeguard against market collapses; but the big advantage in numismatics is the small amount of management required. Coins can be stored in a safe deposit box for a small fee. If a collector wishes to sell his portfolio, it can be easily divided — without worrying about the durability of the collection.

Since 1973, 129 rare U.S. stamps have appreciated 408 per cent. According to CPAs, risk can be further decreased in this field by buying a share of a stamp syndicate. An organizer, often a stamp collector, combines a person's money with that of the other share holders to buy available, rare stamps. The portfolio is later sold at a profit and the initial share and a percentage of the profit is returned.

Philately (stamp collecting) displays some of the same low cost management qualities as numismatics. Inexpensive and easlily accessible albums can be bought to store and display collections. Yearly stamp catalogues and quarterly updates allow a collector to check the value of his stamps. If inflated prices are paid, CPAs say, it will merely take longer to recoup output.

Diamonds also offer low risk as collectibles because the market is growing while the supply remains relatively stabel. However, a collector can lose money in diamonds by buying retail and selling wholesale. Only 2 per cent of the diamonds mined are fit for investment and, without further discoveries, a collector might see the exhaustion of the current supply within 40 years. Seek out only established dealers when buying diamonds because frauds inject risk into the market, say the CPAs.

One can never eliminate risk completely, say CPAs, who remind collectors that even within the same field, the possibility for appreciation differs from item to tiem. But the high quality, time-tested collectibles, collector is more likely to avoid losses.

ID Required When Receiving Food Stamps

U.S. department of agriculture has issued new rules requiring food stamp recipients in large metropolitan areas to show photographic identification when receiving their food stamps.

Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block said the new photo ID system "will play an important role in joint efforts by the U.S. departments of agriculture and justice to crack down on abuse of the food stamp program."

Under the new rules, USDA will no longer replace food stamps reported lost or stolen. Block said these and other major anti-fraud measures are part of the Reagan administration's overall effort to eliminate fraud and abuse in the federal food stamp program.

State welfare agencies will be required to institute photo ID systems within a year in food stamp project areas with 100,000 or more recipients, unless they get an exemption from USDA's food and nutrition service. Smaller food stamp project areas may also be required to install photo ID systems if the FNS and USDA inspector general's office finds it useful to protect program integrity.

In New York and other areas where the photo ID card is mandated, all food stamp households will be required to have a member or an authorized representative of the household get and use the ID card as a condition of eligibility. Exceptions can be made for such cases as an elderly or disabled person who is unable to come to the food stamp application office.

Other new rules will tighten procedures for replacing food stamp coupons and authorization cards which recipients report lost, stolen or destroyed.

"Through these new guidelines we aim to protect food stamp recipients against legitimate verifiable losses while limiting the government's liability and the cost to the taxpayer," Block said.

Under the new rules, coupons reported lost by or stole from recipients will no longer be replaced by the federal government. However, in certain disaster situations such as floods or fires, destroyed coupons may be replaced once in a six-month period. In the past, any food stamp recipient could receive a replacement for their food stamps if they were reported lost or stolen. Such a policy has led to widespread abuse in some areas.

Limits will be placed on the frequency and condition under which local welfare agencies can replace authorization cards lost in the mails or destroyed in a fire or similar disaester.

Block said these new rules represent only the start of a number of new procedures the food and nutrition service will be issuing in the food stamp program designed to reduce fraud, improve program management and assure that benefits go to those actually in need.

New rules are published in the October 9 Federal Register.

110 Mn/DOT Employees To Be Laid Off

Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) announced that it has notified 110 employees they will be laid off effective November 3.

Commissioner Richard P. Braun said the statewide layoffs are in response to Legislative appropriations of May 1981 which mandated the department reduce its total workforce of 4,787 by 322 positions.

Braun stressed the department has made every effort to cut its workforce "at every level of employment classification in proportion to the number of employees at those levels." For example, 10 per cent of the employees are at the administrative level, which is being reduced by 10 per cent, he said.

This formula, he said, was applied statewide at the nine district transportation offices with varying numbers of employees. Each district was reduced proportionately to meet its future workload, he added.

Seventy-three per cent of the department's workforce is located in the districts, but they were assigned only 66 per cent of the reduction. This was to assure continuance of high level of service to the public, he said.

Department's continuing commitment to maintaining state roads at a level best serving the public is also considered. Although 52 per cent of Mn-DOT's personnel are employed in maintenance activities, only a net reduction of 3 per cent in the number of employees occurred there. In contrast, non-maintenance positions comprise 48 per cent of the department's workforce but will have a net effect of an 11 per cent reduction.

Department began a self-analysis activity project in March 1980 to draw up plans that would reduce less essential activities and maintain the department's capabilities to serve the public.

Working under a self-imposed hiring freeze since April 1980, Braun said the department has been able to eliminate 212 positions by not filling vacancies as they occurred and by internal transfers of employees into critical vacancies.

Although the department has until December 31 to achieve the 6.7 per cent workforce reduction, Mn-DOT moved up the timetable for announcing layoffs so affected employees would have sufficient time to exercise their seniority bumping rights which are provided for in most union contracts he explained.

Photography Fellowships Announced

Film in the Cities (FITC) announces its first Photography Fellowships which will provide $40,000 annually to Minnesota photographers through a grant from the McKnight foundation. Fellowships, to be awarded once a year through 1987, are designed to assist from four to eight Minnesota artists who have chosen photography as their primary medium and whose work demonstrates excellence.

Application deadline for 1982 fellowships is January 8, 1982. Fellowship recipients will be announced in February. A panel of three photographers from outside Minnesota will review the applications and samples of work. Panel will be familiar with the broad spectrum of contemporary photography and will be receptive to a wide range of creative sensibilities. Quality of previous work will be the primary criteria for selecting recipients. Application requirements include: a completed application form, evidence of work (slides or portfolio) and a resume. Full-time students are ineligible.

For FITC photography, fellowship guidelines and application forms, contact Film in the Cities at 612-646-6104.

Film in the Cities is an arts center whose purpose is to foster the creation and appreciation of film, photography, video and sound as art forms for people of all income levels.

Teacher Strike Continues . . .

Nine-Hour Negotiation Reaches No Settlement

Nine hours of a negotiations session which began at 7 p.m. Thursday and ended at 4 a.m. Friday failed to result in significant progress in resolving the Thief River Falls teachers' strike. A second session with a representative from the state bureau of mediation services is scheduled for 1 p.m. today as the next effort toward settlement.

At Thursday's session the Thief River Falls Education association (TRFEA) made its counter offer to the board, reducing its request from an average increase in salary of $5,600 per teacher over a two-year contract to $5,494.57 — a reduction in request of $105.43. The board of education, which had last offered $4,500 average increase, held at that figure and did not make a counter offer on salaries.

What little progress was made involved agreement reached on salaries for summer school teachers, assistant to the principal, directors of Title I and Title IV programs and summer school principal. The board agreed to take the questions of class size and preparation time to a mutual "meet and confer" session at some future date. No agreement was reached on staff reduction or salary schedule placement.

Other proposals discussed but not settled were part-time teachers, long-term substitutes, a transfer policy and extra-duty pay.

Today's 1 p.m. mediation session is scheduled for the Pennington county courthouse. The negotiating session Thursday evening and Friday morning was conducted in the Pennington county law enforcement center to avoid the use of school district facilities.

Mike Lehrer, president of the TRFEA and its spokesman during the strike which began October 13, said his feelings following the nine-hour meeting with the board were those of disappointment and frustration, but added that he believes the spirits of teachers on strike may be higher than ever. He visited picketing teachers on Friday, as is his daily custom, and said they appeared to be in good spirits.

Lehrer said he is "not terribly optimistic" as a result of the board's refusal to move from its last offer. "We made the reduction of something over $100 for an opener," he said. "The board asked us if we had a second request but indicated no movement on their part. I had approached Thursday's meeting with guarded optimism but now we'll have to wait and see what Monday's mediation session brings."

The TRFEA chairman said that the entire local membership is scheduled for picket line duty with the exception of himself, the negotiators, task force and crisis headquarters staff, and teachers who may have physical impairments. Some of the teachers not scheduled do assist in picket line duty, he said, and those who are unable to serve on the picket line due to physical impairment come into the crisis headquarters and provide assistance there.

Conducted coincidentally with the negotiating session — but not intentionally so — was a regional rally at the Thief River Falls city auditorium which involved teachers from other school districts in the Kramer-Brown Uniserve unit of the Minnesota

PSAT/NMSQT Tests Offered At Lincoln HS

Whitey Olson, counselor at Lincoln high school, has announced that new services introduced last year as part of the preliminary Scholastic Aptitude tests-Nation Merit scholarship qualifying test (PSAT-NMSQT) will again be provided to students taking the test on October 31.

Students interested in taking this exam are asked to sign up in the Lincoln guidance office and the $5 fee is to be paid when the students sign up. Deadline is Wednesday, October 28.

Since most entrances to Lincoln are closed during the teacher strike, students are asked to use the entrance on the south side of the Lincoln building near the cafeteria.

Before the test, students will receive the PSAT-NMSQT "Student Bulletin" which contains a complete sample test with an answer key and scoring instructions. In December, students will receive a "Report of Student Answers" which displays the correct answers and the students' responses as well as scores. Schools will return test booklets at the same time so that students can review the original questions. Students will also receive "About Your PSAT-NMSQT Scores", a booklet containing information on interpreting PSAT-NMSQT results and on general college planning.

The PSAT-NMSQT is cosponsored by the college board and National Merit Scholarship corporation. It is administered annually to more than one million students and measures verbal and mathematical abilities that are important in college work.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Jill Schoonhoven and Peter Beithon Wed Here

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Beithon are at home in Grand Forks, N.D., following an exchange of vows at the Evangelical Covenant church in this city, and a wedding trip to the north shore of Lake Superior and to Madden's resort at Brainerd.

The bride, the former Jill Elaine Schoonhoven, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Schoonhoven of Thief River Falls. Parents of the groom are Dr. and Mrs. Paul Beithon of Wahpeton, N.D.

Officiating at the double ring ceremony were Rev. Donald Peres and Rev. George Schulenberg. Helen Dahlstrom and Polly Reed combined organ and piano for the processional, and "Wedding March" from "A Midsummer Nights' Dream," for the recessional. As the bridal party entered the sanctuary, Kathy Dahlstrom sang "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desire." Later she was joined by her husband Tim Dahlstrom in singing, "Spirit Song." Following the congregational responsive reading of Psalm 100, led by Rev. Schulenberg, Sue and Mary Beithon, accompanied by guitarist Carrie Beithon, sang "The Sabbath Prayer." Sue Beithon, the groom's mother, also sang, "The Lord's Prayer," after the exchanging of the vows and rings. Serving as candlelighters were the groom's sisters: Mary and Carrie Beithon.

Enhancing the chancel setting were candelabra with greenery and white mums. Babies' breath were tucked in the greenery lining the altar railing. Hung from the pews were white satin ribbon and lavender orchids.

The bride was attired in a white qiana gown featuring a Queen Anne neckline with Venice lace overlay, etched with seed pearls and mother of pearl sequins. Venice lace edged the capped sleeves and pleated skirt that flowed into a cathedral train. Coordinating lace trimmed her fingertip veil of bridal illusion. She carried a bouquet of white azaleas and wine colored roses with the stems laced in gold cording. Her amber brooch belonged to the groom's paternal grandmother.

Cindy Koubsky, Patuxent River, Md., served her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Janeen Kalsness, Thief River Falls, and Wendy Ulrich, Anaheim, Calif. Their identical wraparound gowns of lavender and pink floral chiffon featured deep neckline ruffles and split sleeves. They carried sprays of wine and lavender gladioli, daisies and babies' breath with stems laced with white satin ribbon.

The bride's personal attendants were Marlys Paradise and Doreen Diehl.

Brock Fisher, Columbus, Ohio, attended the groom as best man. Groomsmen were the groom's brothers: Dr. John Beithon, Minneapolis, and Mark Beithon, Wahpeton, N.D. The ushers included James Auran, New York; Richard Beithon, Bozeman, Mont., a cousin of the groom, and Tim and Dan Schoonhoven, brothers of the bride. All wore silver gray tuxedos.

The mother of the bride wore a pink floor-length gown with a pleated skirt and a white orchid corsage. A similar corsage was worn by the groom's mother, who was attired in a rose colored gown with a pleated skirt and Venice lace trim.

Special guests of honor were Mrs. E. J. Beithon and Mrs. E. G. Leininger, grandmothers of the groom; and Benjamin Robert Koubsky, one-month-old nephew of the bride.

A reception in the Thief River Falls Country club followed the ceremony. Centering the serving table was a three-tiered all-white wedding cake with each tier separated by Grecian pillars decorated with white roses, bells and filigreed lace. A gold Christogram topped the cake. It was cut and served by Kay Lynn Swenson and Cheri Zatorski Schmitz.

Pouring coffee from silver services belonging to the groom's grandmothers were Mrs. Ruby Beithon, grandmother of the groom, and Mrs. Mary Iverson.

At the guest book table, featuring childhood pictures of the bride and groom, were Regis and Bobbie Amiot. Scott and Pam Neil served the punch and Chuck and Karen Littlefield and Guy and Silvia Martin were hosts and hostesses. The wedding program were distributed to the guests by Holly Littlefield. Lynn and Lori Gunderson and John Paradise assisted with the gifts. Waitresses were Kim and Susan Waale and Barb and Sue Pfeiffer. Mrs. Hal Waale and Mrs. Verne Pfeiffer assisted in serving. Wedding coordinator was Ann Beithon Smith.

Following the wedding rehearsal the previous evening, the groom's parents hosted a dinner at Lon's for the bridal party, those assisting with the wedding, and out-of-town relatives and guests. During the dinner, the groom's brother, Dr. John Beithon played the guitar and sang.

The bride is a graduate of St. Luke's school of X-ray technology, Duluth, and the Health Science Institute, Winnipeg, Man., Canada. To the Editor:

I'd like to take the opportunity to thank The Times for their excellent coverage of Northwestern Hospital's observance of physical therapy week. Bonnie Wentzel in particular deserves credit for a feature story that was both accurately written, and sensitive in articulating the rehabilitative process of several patients who are currently receiving treatment in our department.

I would also like to recognize Judy Janneck, hospital director of community services and patient education, for her assistance in the planning and coordination of the department's Physical Therapy week activities.

The observance recognized the role of physical therapists in the treatment of disabled persons, and marked the 60th anniversary of the American Physical Therapy association.

Ergonomist Says Half Of Each Work Day Wasted

by Jeanne Hanson
'U'M News Service

At least half of every day in both white-collar offices and blue-collar factories is wasted, according to an ergonomist at the University of Minnesota.

"Probably 25 per cent of all work tasks performed are completely unnecessary and could be eliminated," said Tarald Kvalseth, ergonomist and professor of mechanical engineering at Minnesota. Kvalseth cites examples ranging from copying and filing too many memos to lifting crates manually from one assembly line to the next as wasteful.

Another 25 per cent of each work day is wasted through poor scheduling by supervisors and employees, unclear work instructions, and an inability to adjust the size of the work force to the work required, he said. Workers who must crisscross their offices to mail letters or who see useful items thrown away could make the company's management aware of such waste of effort and materials, he said.

Ergonomics is the study of designing work to suit people instead of asking people to adapt to ill-designed jobs. Its goals are greater productivity and well-being for people on the job. To achieve both, we need to look at jobs anew, said Kvalseth, who is on the faculty of the institute of technology.

Kvalseth's conclusions are drawn from research and consulting work. Most of his ergonomic consulting work is in the areas of productivity and well-being.

He cited several examples of problems in the work place:

Workers in many nuclear power plants must drag stools back and forth to the control panels they are supposed to monitor. And the array of dials is confusing and often unrelated to nearby displays. "Nuclear power plants include some of the worst man-machine designs in the world," Kvalseth said. The nuclear regulatory commission is now attempting to set standards for workplace design and a research group at the Minneapolis-based Honeywell Inc. is examining the issue as well, he said.

+ Several commercial pilots pilots have narrowly escaped midair collisions recently. The reason cited is that cockpit windows are too small to provide an adequate field of vision. Three military test pilots have died in crashes because of a lever with a built-in tendency to move to the wrong position.

+ Workplace chairs often require people to move their heads up and down continually by more than 30 degrees, causing chronic neck and back strain often serious enough to require time off. The human head weighs about 13 pounds and must be supported by the correct muscles to avoid strain. Both a chair's height and arm rests should be adjustable, but most office furniture is very poorly designed, he said.

RUDOLPH SWENSON, Fertile, carefully transported his selected grocery items from the shelves at Northland Foods in Thief River Falls to his shopping cart, during his three-minute shopping spree Friday morning. Swenson was one of five winners of the Harvest Bonanza grocery shopping sprees conducted at participating Rental Business Association grocery stores in Thief River Falls. His accumulation of groceries totaled $54.99.

Ergonomics is not a new science; it was probably first put to use by cave dwellers. The most efficient early workers chipped rocks and molded handles to design better tools for themselves. Ergonomics first became a field of formal study in the early part of this century when industrial engineers Frederick Taylor and Frank Gilbreth studied shovel sizes and the motions used in bricklaying. Productivity rose 200 to 400 per cent on jobs where the techniques they recommended were used.

Gilbreth, considered the father of modern ergonomics, was also the father of 12 children and is famous for using ergonomics at home. His efforts were recorded by two of his children in the 1948 book "Cheaper by the Dozen."

Because it took less time (he clocked it), Gilbreth always buttoned sweaters and vests from the bottom up. He taught his children multiplication shortcuts, touch typing and the Morse code at an early age. He even tried shaving himself with two razors at once (it didn't work). The children's bathrooms were equipped with language records and flashcards to prevent wasted time during morning ablutions.

He filmed their tonsillectomies to develop better techniques for surgeons, appointed home purchasing, work scheduling and home energy-saving committees to take care of many household details.

Field of ergonomics slipped into disfavor, mostly because early ergonomists saw humans as little more than machines, Kvalseth said. The modern ergonomist's approach is much more humane.

The biggest general workplace problems now are noise and poor lighting, followed by bad air and improper temperature, Kvalseth said. Noise levels over 85 decibels — common on factory shop floors — can cause accidents and hearing loss. Office lighting in this country is not regulated as it is in Norway, where every worker is entitled to some natural light, Kvalseth said. Temperatures higher than the mid-80s reduce productivity, he said.

Muscle and joint problems are common, especially on assembly lines, he said. Standing is particularly hard on women bacause their blood vessels expand more easily, and they are thus more often troubled by varicose veins. And men who lift, even with bent knees, can end up with back problems. "Handling materials manually, instead of by machine, causes 40 per cent of workplace accidents," he said.

White-collar jobs can easily create chronic fatigue and stress, especially when the work and the worker's capability are not well matched, or when automation takes over the most interesting part of the job, Kvalseth said.

With improvements that range from better work tools to group wage incentives to better funiture, productivity on most shop floors could go up 10 to 50 per cent, Kvalseth said. The untouched frontier is now white-collar work, where even paper-flow studies and analyses of the office design have rarely been made, he said.

"No company in the United States now has a full-scale system for improving office productivity, except in the area of maintenace work," he said. "Millions of dollars a year are being lost."

In both white and blue-collar work, even changes that cost a corporation several million dollars quickly become financially worthwhile, because of productivity gains, fewer worker compensation claims and reduced absenteeism and worker turnover, Kvalseth said.

CETA Offers Resource Guide On Financing

Financing of small businesses is the subject of a free resource guide published by the balance of state private industry council and now available from the local CETA office.

Resource guide covers such topics as how to write a business plan, how to obtain financing, how to work with the small business administration, how to qualify for employment tax credits and how to get paid for training workers on the job.

Betty Walton of Mr. Duane's in Thief River Falls, a member of the balance of state private industry council, said that the purpose of the guide is to help businesses grow and to encourage the creation of jobs.

"Financing Small Business in Rural Minnesota" is available without cost by calling Rodney L. Kragness at the Thief River Falls CETA center, P.O. Box 507, Thief River Falls, MN 56701, 681-7350.

VFW Voice Of Democracy Is Local Contest

High school students in grades 10, 11 and 12 are invited to enter the Voice of Democracy scholarship program by writing a radio script on the theme, "Building America Together" to be read aloud in three to five minutes.

"Students win more than awards and scholarships when they participate in the VFW voice of Democracy scholarship program," said Commander Earl Efteland of VFW post 2793 in Thief River Falls, in describing the broadcast scriptwriting program conducted annually by the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the ladies auxiliary.

Some of the fringe benefits, according to Efteland, are increased self-confidence and poise, experience in communicating with others and training in self expression. For state winners, there is also a five day all expense paid tour of Washington, D.C.

More than 3,000,000 high school students have participated in the program in the 19 years it has been sponsored by the VFW and ladies auxiliary.

Participants write and then record a three to five minute broadcast script expressing their views on "Building America Together." From the state winners, five national winners are chosen to receive a total of $32,500 in scholarships.

"One of the greatest benefits to young people who take part in the program," Efteland said, "is that by thinking, writing and speaking up for their country, they gain a better appreciation of their obligation to maintain our nation's freedom heritage."

Post awards include, first, $25; second, $15; third, $10; district awards — first, $125 and a medal and trophy for his-her school; second, $75 and second place medal; third, $50 and third place medal; state — first; $750; second, $450; third, $250; fourth, $75; fifth, $50; national awards — first $14,000; second, $7,000; third, $4,500; fourth, $3,500; fifth, $2,500 and sixth, $1,000.

For more information, contact Terry Soine or Michael Novak, assistant principals at Lincoln high school, commander Earl Efteland, 681-3673; Voice of Democracy chairman, Paul Halvorson, 681-4267; or chairman, Mrs. Roy Jorgenson, 796-5661.

Council Offers Halloween Safety Tips

There's really no trick to being safe on Halloween, and safety precautions result in a real treat when youngsters arrive home well and happy after an evening of fun, says the Minnesota safety council. Safety council offers the following tips for Halloween safety for ghosts and goblins:

Costumes should be short enough to prevent the person wearing them from tripping and falling. They should be loose enough to allow the child to wear a sweater or jacket underneath if the weather is cold. Costumes should be made of a fabric which is not highly flammable. Cotton costume fabrics, which burn quickly, can be made fire-retardant by dipping in a solution of two quarts of warm water, seven ounces of borax and three ounces of boric acid. This flame-proofing will last until the fabric is washed or gets wet, and is only effective for cotton.

If a costume includes props such as swords, knives or broomsticks, make them of cardboard. The safety council recommends that trick or treaters use make-up instead of masks, which obscure vision. Little folks should wear shoes that fit, not Mom's high heels, so the children won't fall on the sidewalk or in the street. If a pumpkin is carried, it should be lit with a flashlight instead of a candle.

Minnesota safety council urges parents to reflectorize their children's costumes or treat bags so that kids can be seen by passing motorists. Goblin reflectorization kits can be obtained from the safety council for $1.98. Each kit will fully reflectorize one person. Write 555 Wabasha, Suite 102, St. Paul, MN 55102, or call 612-291-9150 for kits.

Producers Aid Chinese With Baking Industry

Recent dedication ceremony of the new model bakery in the People's Republic of China, (PRC), which was officially opened by secretary of agriculture John Block is a milestone in the growing relations between the PRC and the American wheat producer. According to Einer Satter, Norcross, chairman of the Minnesota wheat research and promotion council, these relations have been building for almost 10 years.

Wheat producers began establishing contacts with key agricultural representatives of the PRC in the early 70s, even before official diplomatic relations between the two countries were developed, Satter reported. These contacts were expanded further in the later part of the 70s when diplomatic relations were finally restored. In 1979 a delegation of U.S. wheat industry leaders traveled to China to meet with Chinese leaders.

"From previous contact we were aware that the Chinese were interested in modernizing and expanding their baking industry, which was almost non-existent," Satter said. "Therefore, U.S. wheat associates, in cooperation with the U.S.D.A.'s foreign agricultural service (FAS) offered to assist the Chinese government with its bakery development program by establishing a model demonstration bakery-baking school, to be located in the capital city of Beijing." Resulting $1.5 million bakery, which was recently opened will provide a center for demonstrating baking machinery, processing techniques and end production preparation. It will also provide training for bakery personnel and will serve as an actual production bakery for the surrounding area, capable of producing about 1,500 pounds of bread an hour. U.S. wheat associates and FAS supplied the necessary machinery and technical assistance for the model bakery, while the Chinese provided the land, building and labor. The Minnesota wheat council contributed $50,000 toward the bakery project.

Even before the construction of the new model bakery began, four Chinese who were selected to work in the bakery were brought to the United States by U.S. wheat associates for an extensive course in advance baking techniques, so they would be able to operate the facility once it was opened, Satter stated.

With the model bakery now underway, the U.S. wheat associates marketing plan for 1982 has targeted 19 marketing activities to be carried out in the PRC this coming year, Satter stated.

With the model bakery now underway, the U.S. wheat associates marketing plan for 1982 has targeted 19 marketing activites to be carried out in the PRC this coming year, Satter reports. Included in these activites are U.S. wheat sponsored trade teams of Chinese leaders to tour U.S. wheat industry facilities to become better acquainted with the American wheat proeuction and marketing system. Wheat seminars and conferences will be conducted to acquaint the Chinese with U.S. wheat quality and processing and consultants will be sent to supervise and aid in developing projects.

In addition, Satter reports that U.S. wheat associates is also negotiating with the Chinese government for the cooperative construction of a model instant noodle plant and a pilot flour mill to be built in China in the future. As instant noodles offer excellent potential in the PRC for increased consumption of wheat foods, the model instant noodle plant has been earmarked as the next major project.

"With cash exports of U.S. wheat to the People's Republic of China exceeding one billion dollars last calendar year, China is a very important market not only to the U.S. wheat farmer, but also to the American economy," Satter states. "The potential for expanding consumption of bread and other wheat products in this country of almost one billion people also makes the PRC one of the bright spots in the market development program for U.S. wheat," he said.

AIC: Clean Air Available At Less Cost

Each new-car buyer is paying about $725 for emission-control equipment, and auto makers have idicated they could reduce sticker prices about $300 if more appropriate standards were approved by Congress, which now is conducting hearings, says the Automotive Information Council (AIC).

And we still would have cleaner air. AIC pointed out that the Clean Air Act's stringent 1981 standards required emissions of hydrocarbons (HC) and carbon monoxide (CO) be reduced by 96 per cent and oxides of nitrogen (NOX) by 76 per cent compared with the uncontrolled cars of the early 1960s.

But many scientists now recognize that the CO and NOX standards are stricter than necessary to meet the national air quality standards and that clean air is available at less cost.

Even Eric O. Stork, former deputy administrator of the environmental agency, has said the auto standards "have acquired a symbolic value that is out of proportion to their scientific basis." He said there "was virtually no reliable data" on urban air quality when Congress passed the escalating law back in 1970.

However, even-tougher regulations are scheduled for 1983 and 1984 . . . at additional cost to the buyer . . . unless the standards are changed.

The nation's air quality has improved substantially over the past 10 years, says AIC, quoting the March 1981 final report of the national commission on air quality: "Motor vehicle controls have contributed to significant improvements in air quality."

Congressional testimony says improvements will continue under the revised standards proposed by car manufacturers.

No Settlement In Contract Negotiations

Education association.

Approximately 200 to 250 people attended the rally, Lehrer said, which included skits in which participants "made fun of each other and made fun of the school boards". A speaker from the National Education association took part in the activity, he added, but spoke for only a short time. The gathering was intended to be more of a private party and not a public meeting, intended to put a little humor into the situation and boost morale.

Date and place for the rally had been set well ahead of the date set for the negotiating session, Lehrer said. He added that the rally put no pressure on negotiations and from the teachers' standpoint, they would have preferred that the rally and negotiations had not been held simultaneously.

The strike continues into its 16th calendar day today.

Dear Readers,

Every day in the U.S. more than 5,200 people die. The majority are elderly and it often marks the involuntary end of a marriage. Survivors then face what psychologists feel is the greatest adjustment that life calls on us to make — adjusting to the loss of a loved one. Grief counseling is often needed to help the bereaved readjust to a new, wholesome pattern of life.

Respectfully,

Belmont Funeral Home

Hearings To Study Banking Policies In MN.

Interest rates on money lent for productive purposes such as farming should be set at a lower rate than money lent for other uses, Cy Carpenter, president of Minnesota farmers union, told members of the U.S. House of Representatives committee on banking, finance and urban affairs during a hearing in St. Paul recently.

"Money is different things to different people. There are money 'users' and money 'changers'. And there is a difference," Carpenter pointed out.

"Money users require borrowed money as a tool in their cash flow, to be used just like seed or fertilizer. Because farmers receive payments at the time a crop or animal reaches maturity or is sold, they must use borrowed money in the meantime. It is just as necessary for farmers to have monetary transfusion as it is for a person to receive blood," he said.

Hearing in St. Paul was the first of a series being conducted across the country to study the effects of banking policies and today's economy on the nation's businesses.

"It is vitally necessary to make the connection between banking and the problems facing family farmers and the entire rural community today," Carpenter said in commending the committee for including agricultural testimony. Others on the witness list provided testimony about the effects of high interest rates, the Reagan administration's budget cuts, and the overall economy on cities, counties, the elderly, and other segments of the population.

"Today we are moving more and more toward capital intensive agriculture," Carpenter said. He noted that borrowed money is accounting for more and more of the farmer's cash resources, at 23 per cent of the resources this year, compared with only 5 per cent in 1970. "Interest payments alone will cost farmers $20 billion in 1981," he said, "exceeding projected net farm income."

"The latest economic indicators from USDA state that net farm income declined 39 per cent last year. Interest at 15 per cent, applied to that lost income, is equivalent to almost 10 per cent of the farmer's total net income," Carpenter said.

"The intensive capitalization of agriculture that has occurred since 1973 can be directly attributed to the effect of mismanagement of our agricultural economy. The pent up demand for facility and equipment modernization, which had been literally growing for decades, finally exploded into the American economy. The supply side forces in our farm sector — big equipment, facility and capital sources, were more than willing to not only supply the demand, but in many cases pushed demand to the detriment of farmers.

"For our purposes here, the point to remember is that the failure to provide adequate, innovative, and forceful programs is too expensive a price for any sector of our economy to endure," he said.

"It's foolhardy to apply the same cost of money to luxury or investment uses as compared to money for productive uses. I urge you to make sure the Federal reserve board sets a ceiling on interest rates charged on money loaned to farmers and other productive users."

Carpenter urged the congressmen to extend the economic emergency loan program, authorized under the emergency credit adjustment act of 1978. Program expired September 30, but extension is included in the House version of the 1981 Farm bill.

Economic emergency loan program enabled 115,000 farm operators to get loans when all other sources of financing had been exhausted. At the end of June this year, $6.2 billion in loans had been made through the program.

H.R. 3603, the House farm bill, provides for extension of the program. Farmers Union has proposed an additional $4 billion in loan authority for the program, so that it can reach as many farmers as possible with money loans, to be repaid to the federal coffers.

Additional hearings will be conducted next month in Seattle, Tucson, Chisago, Atlanta and Providence, R.I.

NW Banco Has Increase In Sept. Earnings

Northwest Bancorporation (Banco) reported increased earnings for the quarter ended September 30, 1981, and for the first nine months of 1981.

Income before securities transactions was $28,945,000 for the third quarter, equal to $1.11 per share, up 2.8 per cent from $28,149,000, or $1.09 per share, for the same period in 1980. On a fully diluted basis, earnings per share were $1.06, compared with $1.03 in 1980.

For the nine months ended September 30, income before securties transactions reached $87,449,000, equal to $3.36 per share, up 1.8 per cent from $85,902,000, or $3.32 per share, in 1980. On a fully diluted basis, earnings per share were $3.20, compared with $3.16 in 1980.

After securities transactions, net income for the first quarter was $28,155,000, or $1.08 per share, compared with $27,747,000, or $1.07 per share, in 1980. On a fully diluted basis, net income per share was $1.03, compared with $1.02 in 1980.

For the first nine months, net income was $83,115,000, or $3.19 per share, compared with $84,888,000, or $3.28 per share, in 1980. On a fully diluted basis, net income per share was $3.04, compared with $3.12 in 1980.

Commenting on the results, Banco chairman and chief executive officer John W. Morrison said earnings growth resulted principally from a higher volume of earning assets and improvement in net interest margin. He attributed margin improvement to increased levels of higher-yielding, rate-sensitive commercial loans. Morrison noted that the growth of consumer and real estate loans remains sluggish.

Former TRF Resident In Naval Academy

Michael Overby, 1976 graduate of Lincoln high school, Thief River Falls, and son of Duane and Norma Overby, Oronoco, former residents of this city, is presently majoring in the general engineering field in the United States naval academy, Annapolis, M.D.

Overby, a senior, will graduate with a bachelor of science degree from the academy when he will be commissioned either as an ensign in the navy or as a second lieutenant in the marine corps.

In addition to academic courses, which include 18 majors, each midshipman is required to complete course work in naval science, seamanship, tactics, navigation, leadership and law. During summers preceding their sophomore and senior years, midshipmen depart for six to eight weeks of training aboard ship, stopping off in spots across the world.

Overby spent the past summer aboard the USS Mississippi in the Caribbean, with a few days spent touring St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands.

As a squad leader, Overby is responsible for about 12 midshipmen. He sets his own policy, applying leadership techniques he has acquired in the past three years.

Overby is active in VRNV, the midshipman radio station; intramural football, and the Navigators, a Christian organization.

'81 Diabetes Campaign Launched

Volunteers throughout various communities will be assisting the American diabetes association (ADA) by launching the 1981 diabetes campaign during November, national diabetes month.

There are 32,500 diabetics in North Dakota alone," says Robert Warner, N.D., president of the North Dakota affiliate of the A.D.A. "Unfortunately, diabetes is now the third leading cause of death by disease in the country. This association is extremely grateful to the dedication of our volunteers who put aside this time of year to assist us in raising funds so that our many services may continue . . . . funds that have established our annual parent-youth retreat, Camp Sioux, our free camp for children with diabetes, screening clinics and this year, a diabetes registry so that every child with diabetes through the age of 18 can be helped."

"This campaign," continued Warner, "helps to accomplish our slogan — we teach diabetes survival. Help us do it — by reaching every household with the 'warning signals' of diabetes and make persons with diabetes and their families aware what materials and services are available and of course, to raise funds for education and research."

Diabetes, with its side effects, claims over 300,000 lives annually and is the leading cause of new cases of blindness. It is a major cause of heart attacks, strokes, high blood pressure, kidney failure and amputations. It knows no restrictions and afflicts people of all ages, races and nationalities.

For more information concerning the diabetes campaign, please contact the A.D.A. state office, P.O. Box 234, Grand Forks, ND 58201.

Halloween Can Create Special Safety Hazard

Visions of Halloween loot may turn little trick-or-treaters into safety hazards.

Minnesota AAA reminds motorists to be prepared for the unexpected when traveling after dark on Halloween. Costumed children may forget safety in the excitement of the night and dart out in front of oncoming cars.

Parents should take steps to ensure their children's safety by following these safety tips: Dress children in light-colored costumes and apply reflective tape so they are easily visible to drivers; have them carry a flashlight so they can see and be seen easily; take them trick-or-treating while it is still light; use makeup instead of masks, masks can obstruct vision;

Also, if you cannot accompany your children, send them with an older sibling or a group of children; be sure children understand which route they should follow and set a time for them to arrive home; remind them to cross the street only at corners, not from the middle of the block or from between parked cars; if there is no sidewalk, they should walk facing traffic; when they arrive back home, sort and check treats before allowing them to be eaten.

You can help protect trick-or-treaters by keeping your entrances and sidewalks well-lighted.

As an alternative to trick-or-treating, invite neighborhood children to a Halloween party at your house.

Small Business Meet Reviews Tax Programs

Delegates to a November conference in Minneapolis met in Crookston and East Grand Forks recently to discuss ways or improving the business climate in the state. Small business representatives from Crookston, Thief River Falls and East Grand Forks will become part of a contingent of small business people throughout Minnesota who will meet November 12-14 in Minneapolis to draft 10 proposals to be presented to the governor and legislature.

Issues such as tax laws, workmen's compensation, unemployment compensation and product liability head a list of areas that need changing, according to the group's chairman, Doug Oman of Crookston. According to the group, Minnesota laws, for example, have some businesses contributing $28 for every $100 of wages paid in the area of workmen's compensation. Minnesota state personal income tax is third highest in the nation. Corporate taxes rank fourth and only 11 other states have a five per cent or more sales tax.

"We have reached a point where if we continue the current trend, we will have ever increasing unemployment due in most part to businesses moving out of the state," Oman said.

"An underlying concern of many present at the meeting was the need for all businesses to enlighten their employees as to the effects of our state's attitude toward the abovementioned programs and the effect of these programs upon their future employment.

The group was unanimously in the belief that change can come about when the general public through votes take an interest in these critical issues facing us in Minnesota.

If anybody has opinions or recommendations for the delegates from this area, call Russel Christianson at Moser, Christianson and company.

Senator Asks Apology For Interior Quote

Senator Dave Durenberger has demanded an apology from the interior department spokesman who was quoted as putting down the Sierra club petitionn and rally on Interior Secretary James G. Watt as a "60s-typed Vietnam demonstratiin, with 50 kids made to look like thousands."

Durenberger wrote to interior spokesman Douglas Baldwin asking for his apology.

"Writing off the rally because only a few people could afford the expense of a trip to Washington is comparable to Secretary Watt writing off all the laws protecting our natural resources because a few may be too extreme. The people who traveled to Washington represent 1.1 million Americans, and probably millions more, who have the impression of a secretary of the interior who is subverting his authority through his confused notion of the concept of government of laws rather than of people. The petition is a historic vote of 'no confidence' in a member of the cabinet.

"If you insist on dismissing the petition and rally, perhaps you will listen to a United States Senator who spends an average of 2½ days a week traveling around his home state and many more hours in Washington answering his 'Watt mail' rom constituents. The district of Secretary Watt goes far beyond '50 kids.' It knows no boundary of age, sex, race, outdoor experience or any other consideration. Believe me, the 1.1 million names is the tip of the pine tree," Durenberger wrote to Baldwin.

Durenberger and Watt will be addressing the same national convention next week in Minneapolis. Durenberger is scheduled to give the opening address to the national recreation and parks association Sunday. Watt speaks to the group Tuesday.

Indexing Tax Relief Program Is Successful

Gov. Al Quie recently gave credit for Minnesota's lower national ranking in personal income taxes to his indexing tax relief program.

Figures from the U.D. department of commerce show Minnesota's ranking in per capita invidual income taxes dropped from third to sixth in the nation during fiscal year 1980. State dropped from third to seventh in the category of income taxes collected per $1,000 of personal income. The last time the state ranked so low in either category was in 1973 and 1971, respectively.

"We're accomplishing what we set out to do, and it's about time," Quie said. "The new rankings show that indexing is successful, and that Minnesota's income tax is no longer going up faster than inflation. We have taken some moves that have begun putting us in line with other states."

Indexing the major campaign issue for the governor, and he was primarily responsible for pushing the indexing law through the Legislature in 1979. During his first four years in office, indexing will have saved Minnesota taxpayers nearly $1 billion.

"Our prognosis for the future is even better, because with indexing, we will continue to improve in the rankings until we reach a stable position — one which Minnesotans will accept," the governor added. "And, as I've said before, I am looking at other tax areas as well to ensure job opportunities for people and make sure we are competitive in business with neighboring states."

FACTUAL NEWS REPORTING EFFECTIVE ADVERTISING

How Far From Where?

Until Twin Cities residents make a trip up to the northwestern corner of the state, it is difficult for them to realize that the distance is as great as it is. For that reason, it is often a problem for those of us up here to convince state officials and others that it is a hardship to have to travel to St. Paul or Minneapolis to achieve or supplement representation, or to attend various functions.

That distance factor was called to our attention in a rather unique way through a feature article in the October 22 issue of the North Star News published at Karlstad. The feature was an interview with a new intern pastor at Karlstad's First Lutheran church. Both the pastor, Joe Campeau, and his wife, are native Twin Citians unaccustomed to small town living.

We chuckled at what appeared to be a writing error in a paragraph stating the following: "He said that neither of them had ever spent a considerable amount of time living outside of the city atmosphere. For that reason, he had requested to serve his internship outside of the state of Minnesota. It was basically for that very reason that he was assigned to the Karlstad-Halma parish."

"Is the Karlstad-Halma area considered outside the state of Minnesota?" was our first reaction. Then we read the next paragraph.

"They told me that I could have gone anywhere in either Iowa or Wisconsin and still have been closer to home than I am being assigned here," he said.

If the pastor-to-be had a bit of culture shock adjusting to a new life in rural Minnesota, the distance shock must have been a real blast.

First Things First

"The board considers the establishment of hazardous waste processing facilities — rather than the selection of a hazardous waste disposal site — its 'first' siting process," states chairman Robert Dunn of the Minnesota waste management board in a recent board publication.

"We believe that hazardous waste processing facilities, in the long run, offer the potential for addressing the state's hazardous waste problem effectively and comprehensively."

Board member David Harley of Hermantown noted that no one type of facility or technology can solve the state's hazardous waste problem, but that citizens around the state are strongly urging the board to remove hazardous waste reprocessing, recyling and source reduction.

"We intend, will all our powers and authority, to promote all possible alternatives to the on-land disposal of hazardous wastes," Harley said. "Through the establishment of new processing facilities, as well as other measures, we can accomplish that goal."

It seems as though the board is acting in concert with the public's wishes and in accordance with what seems the most reasonable path to follow. Why indeed simply dump something that can be utilized, neutralized or altered to become less of a hazard to people and the environment.

"By establishing processing facilities Minnesotans will be able to utilize some of the most promising advances being made in industry and technology today," noted board member Louise Kuderling of Minneapolis. As examples she listed treatment processes than can "dry down" liquid wastes, make hazardous materials non-hazardous and convert hazardous waste to reusable materials.

The proposed number of preferred sites for hazardous waste processing has now been reduced from 60 preliminary areas to 18 remaining following further evaluation. Six of these are in the Twin Cities metro area, three are clustered around St. Cloud and two are in the Fergus Falls area. Only site in northwestern Minnesota still under consideration is at Crookston. Where a long, irregular shaped area of 2.2 square miles on the south side of the city is being considered.

"The waste management board," chairman Dunn said, "can certify the need for any hazardous waste land disposal facility only to the extent that it has determined that there are no feasible and prudent alternatives including waste reduction, separation, pre-treatment, processing and resource recovery.

"That's no mere board statement of preference. It's in the law — the 1980 waste management act — and it requires the board to emphasize hazardous waste reprocessing, recycling and all other alternatives to hazardous waste disposal.

"I point this out," Dunn said, "because Minnesotans in recent weeks have called upon the board to stop or delay its hazardous waste disposal site selection process. They say that — because the board is pursuing that process — the board has a special bias toward a disposal facility that will involve hazardous waste burial."

Not only is the board pursuing the alternatives to waste disposal, the law says the board must consider all "feasible and prudent" alternatives to land disposal. We think this is entirely proper and follows the logical pattern of putting first things first.

A 20-Cent Bargain?

While there has been plenty of criticism of the U.S. postal service for instituting its rate increases effective November 1 — including the price of the first class stamp from 18 to 20 cents — not all writers are looking at it that way. Following article was prepared by the Copley News Service:

The U.S. postal service has defied the Postal Rate Commission and raised the first-class stamp to 20 cents, effective Nov. 1. The measure, designed to pay the post office's costs, was immediately challenged by a suit by greeting card manufacturers protesting that the volume of season's greetings will go down. Comfortingly, rates for most second-and-third-class postage, including junk mail, were also raised, passing increased costs along to users.

The arguments against postal rate increases are that they add to inflation, feed waste and pay overblown salaries. From 1970 to 1981, first-class postage has risen from 6 cents to 20 cents, while non-management postal workers salaries rose from $8,775 to $19,915. Service has not improved proportionately, but one-day mail and computerized handling have been instituted, for a high price.

Even at its new high, the U.S. mail costs about one-half as much as in Sweden, where letters have to travel across an area only as big as California. People in Europe and Japan pay more than we do.

We should stop snapping at postal people who deliver the mail through rain and snow, traffic jams and condominium complexes, and look at our own letter-writing complexes. One reason that postage is so high is that Americans are not writing enough. We have dropped the pen and picked up the phone.

For 20 cents you can propose marriage interstate. You can apply for college. You can receive word that you've gotten a new job. You can avoid going down to the public service company, or the IRA, and pay by mail. And you can send a letter to the editor protesting the postal rate hike!

The mail remains a system so magnificently simple that all subsequent communications systems have only duplicated its functions, at higher speed, and at vastly higher expense.

As Americans face personal budget deficits, the ax may fall on long-distance phone calls. Reach out and write someone! At 20 cents a letter that lasts a lifetime, the mail remains the most permanent and fulfilling means of personal communication.

Bogus Food Stamps?

Counterfeiting of food stamps is increasing as they become used more as a general medium of exchange, Congress has been told.

John Graziano, who has been named inspector-general for the agriculture department, said there has been "a definite rise in counterfeiting."

He commented during a Senate agriculture committee hearing on his nomination. Graziano has held various investigatory positions in the federal government.

Noting the number of food-stamp recipients has more than doubled, to 23 million people in the past decade, he said:

"As more and more people are involved with the program, the food stamp becomes more of a common type of currency, and there is greater opportunity for exchange."

He said the agriculture department has taken steps, which he declined to detail, to make counterfeiting the stamps more difficult.

He said agriculture department investigators had found evidence that food stamps were being used as currency in a wide range of transactions, including housing and weapons.

Private School Control Bill Stirs Debate

School superintendents must see that private school students receive education "essentially equivalent" to that of public school students. Private school representatives say that HF1459, a bill that would define "essentially equivalent," is a violation of their constitutional rights.

The Minnesota school boards association and certain public school officials support the definition. According to testimony before the House education committee last month, many worry whether students in private home schools get appropriate education. The bill requires all teachers to hold state board of education teaching licenses.

Private school teachers, administrators, advocates and parents of private school students told the committee that the proposed definition would put new and small schools out of business. The bill would infringe on families' free practice of religion and parents' right to educate their children as they see fit under the 14th Amendment, according to testimony.

Joe Palmer, who started his own school to educate his children, said that parents who choose private education think carefully about what is best for their kids. "Why would we pay twice for education if we didn't think it was right?"

Donald Lenzen from the Association of Christian Schools International said that children in his classrooms score better than public school children on standardized tests.

"I've never seen one of them inadequately prepared for public school, college or work," he said. "After all, whose children are they?"

NCC Football Goals

Northland community college football team will close out its 1981 season Saturday when the Northmen travel to Brainerd for a 1:30 p.m. Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) Northern Division football game.

You might think that a team buried in the middle of the standings and playing its final game some 200 miles away from home would simply be "playing out the string" and "going through the motions" under those circumstances.

But there's a number of goals the Northmen can shoot for Saturday that should provide the incentive for a strong performance.

First of all, the Northmen, currently 3-4 for the year, have a shot at producing the best record in the six-year history of intercollegiate football at the school. The program started with a 2-6 mark in 1976 and followed with an 0-8 finish in 1977; 2-6 in 1978; 3-6 in 1979; and 1-7 in 1980. A win over Brainerd would make the Northmen 4-4 and give them their first .500 season — a milestone of sorts.

In addition, Northland will be trying to beat Brainerd for the first time. The Red Raiders are one of just three teams the Northmen have never beaten in five years of Northern Division competition. The other two are Golden Valley Lutheran and Vermilion.

And if the Northmen can pick up their first win over Brainerd they could find themselves finishing as high as third place in the 1981 Northern Division standings.

Match-up of the unbeaten division leaders takes place Saturday when Fergus Falls and Golden Valley Lutheran, both 6-0, square off in the Twin Cities. The winner will represent the Northern Division against the Southern Division winner in the MJCAA state championship game Nov. 14 at Macalester college in St. Paul.

But other than the unbeaten Spartans and Royals, the Northern Division has nobody else with a winning record at this point. A win Saturday would assure Northland of at least a fourth place finish and could very well push them into a tie for third when the division schedule is completed next week. A loss, though, could drop the Northmen into the division basement. While Northland closes out its season this week, everyone else has one more round of MJCAA games.

Miscellaneous

+Thief River Falls' Bob Fitzgerald, a sophomore, and Dave Geatz, a freshman, are candidates for the 1981-82 Bemidji State University hockey team. Geatz, a defenseman, has been one of several newcomers who have been impressive in practice drills, reported Bemidji coach Bob Peters. The Beavers, who will compete in league play this winter with St. Cloud, Mankato, Eau Claire, River Falls and Superior, will begin play Nov. 13 against River Falls.

+East Grand Forks will open its 1981 post-season Class A football playoffs Tuesday, November 3, at Hermantown, the Sea-Range Conference champion. That's a preliminary qualifying game leading to the MSHSL state quarterfinals next weekend.

+Bemidji high school football team, unbeaten following a 3-0 overtime win over Thief River Falls two weeks ago, suffered a pair of losses last week, falling to Grand Rapids 21-6 Tuesday and losing to Moorhead 28-0 Saturday. The Indians scored twice on passes from Tony Kellin to Ron Renner (15 yards in the first quarter and 10 yards in the third quarter), and Bruce LaRouque scored on a seven-yard run while also coming up with one of the four Grand Rapids interceptions in the match-up of unbeaten teams. Bemidji quarterback Daryl Strunk left the game in the third quarter with a knee injury after throwing a five-yard touchdown pass to Craig Smith following a Grand Rapids turnover, pulling the Lumberjacks to within 7-6 at the time. Saturday Bemidji was never in the game. Moorhead dominated from start to finish, limiting Bemidji to 20 yards ennroute to a 21-0 halftime cushion. Bemidji crossed midfield only once through the first three quarters — by recovering an onside kick to start the second half. The results assured the Spuds of a post-season Class AA playoff berth Nov. 3. They have an open date this week, with Bemidji closing the year Thursday at Hermantown, a team scheduled to meet East Grand Forks in Class A playoff action next week.

Five Interceptions, Four Fumbles Beat Vikings . . .

Nine Itasca Turnovers Hand Northland 16-14 MJCAA Win

Sometimes it's better to be lucky than good. Just ask Northland community college football coach John Helley, whose Northmen are known for their good defensive play. In fact, they probably play defense as well as anybody in the Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA). Normally. Saturday, though, Itasca riddled the usually impregnable Northland defense for 362 yards and 20 first downs. But that's where the luck came into play as the Northmen benefitted from the bounces, the tips and a few calls in beating the error-plagued and luckless Vikings 16-14.

While the Northland defense must be given some of the credit for forcing the plays, the self-destructing Itasca offense did a lot of it on its own, losing four of seven fumbles and suffering five interceptions. Their impressive offensive figures did them little good in the Northern Division game played in freezing temperature, wind and snow on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

"We made too many mistakes to win the thing," admitted Itasca coach Dave Hourda. "Obviously we had the yardage, but they made the plays and we didn't."

Helle, too, knew the Northland defense didn't perform up to its remarkably high standard, but quickly said, "We can give up the yards, not the points."

In defense of the defense, they were missing a pair of starters in Dave Gorski, a sophomore end from Lancaster who was involved in an automobile accident the week before, and freshman linebacker Don Hudek, a student at the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical school who has returned home to Washkish because of the teachers strike in School District 564.

Hudec is also the team's place kicker. Sophomore defensive end Mike Busse was quickly pressed into service as a kicker and as unlikely as it sounds, wound up providing the game's winning points with a 23-yard second quarter field goal.

There are people missing on offense, too, with tight end Nate Kiel injured in the automobile accident with Gorski; fullback John Dillon out of the line-up because of an ankle injury suffered in last Saturday's 16-0 loss at Fergus Falls; Gorski, the back-up tight end was missing; and quarterback Scott Wiebolt was forced to play tight end because of an arm injury suffered in practice during the week that wouldn't allow him to throw the football.

And that's the only way the Northmen were able to move the ball Saturday. Thirty-six rushing plays netted them just 23 yards, but sophomore Dave Furbish of Baudette came up with an 8-for-17 day passing for 114 yards that helped offset three interceptions. The first-year member of the Northland squad who has seen limited action this fall as a back-up quarterback and receiver, had a hand in both Northland touchdowns — a 50-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Ken Crouch in the first quarter, and a four-yard quarterback sneak in the second period.

"The offense did the best they could," noted Helley. "I can't ask for anymore than that. We wanted to give Furbish a chance at Quarterback. He's looked good in practice, and he deserved a chance to play."

It looked like it might be a long afternoon for Northland at the start when Itasca runningback Ed Maus broke an option 43 yards to the Northland 24 on the very first play of the game. Immediately the Vikings had more rushing yards than most people are able to net against the Northland defense for an entire game.

But in a preview of things to come, linebacker Steve Jorstad intercepted quarterback Cameron Gagne at the Northland 15 to end the early threat. Jorstad finished with two interceptions, with fellow linebackers Marty Semanko and Jeff Canivez, along with cornerback Coby Burslie also collecting interceptions before the day was done. Fumbles were recovered by Mike Oppegard, Scott Larson, who was playing in

HEADING TO THE right on a sweep, Northland runningback Mike Punton was being pursued by Itasca's David Sura (42) and John Bender (70), among others, during Saturday's community college football game played on the snowy Thief River Falls athletic field. Troy Levenhagen (43) and Dave Kays of the Northmen tried to provide blocking support in the middle of the line. The Northmen capitalized on nine turnovers by the Vikings to win the Northern Division game 16-14.

Bemidji Wins NWAC

Bemidji won both the boys and girls titles Tuesday in the 1981 Northwest Athletic Conference (NWAC) high school cross country meet.

The event was reduced to a three-team field with teachers strikes at Crookston and Thief River Falls keeping the Pirates and Prowlers out of the running, and also forcing a change in race sites from Crookston to Bemidji.

In the boys competition, Bemidji finished with a near-perfect 20-point afternoon, followed by East Grand Forks 50 and Fergus Falls 75. In the girls race, Bemidji out-scored Fergus Falls 27-36, with East Grand Forks fielding an incomplete team.

Ted Sundin of East Grand Forks was named the winner of the boys race even though he was the 15th runner into the finishing chute. Sundin, who proved throughout the 1981 season that he was the best runner in the area, took a wrong turn while leading the race, then misinterpreted direction signals from a race official.

When the race was completed, officials met and decided that nobody would have challenged Sundin under normal circumstances and handed him the victory.

Bemidji runners placed second through eighth, with Steve Lumbar running a 17:30; Steve Doggett 17:32; Jon Cameron 17:34; Rob Iverson 17:35; Bob Soular 17:43; Duane Hill 17:44; and Paul Lyle 17:45. Jon Helt and Dave Lee of East Grand Forks were ninth and tenth in 17:51 and 18:01, respectively.

It was the Lumberjacks' fifth straight NWAC cross country title.

Sue Ness was the individual winner in the girls race with a 12:36 run, followed by Michelle Anderson, Fergus Falls, 12:39; Liz Dickinson, Bemidji, 12:42; Mary Jensen, Bemidji, 13:30; Brenda Pickett, Bemidji, 13:43; Barb Carlson, Fergus Falls, 13:44; Alyson Sagedahl, Bemidji, 13:44; Terri Meyer, Bemidji, 15:13; and Patty Jensen, Bemidji, 15:13.

It was the Lumberjills' second NWAC win in the second year of girls competition in the conference.

Thief River Falls was expected to challenge Bemidji for team titles in both the boys and [illegible] division.

While Northwest Athletic Conference officials had to correct the mistake involving Sundin, Region 8AA officials Saturday ran into an even bigger problem in Alexandria.

The Region 8AA race was run, but the results weren't counted because a race judge sent the first 30 runners the wrong direction. After talking with Minnesota State High School League officials by telephone the race was rescheduled for 2 p.m. today (Monday).

Girls portion of the Region 8AA meet was completed without a hitch Saturday, with host Alexandria winning team honors with 25 points, followed by Moorhead 51, Bemidji 132, Sauk Rapids 144, Cold Spring-Rocori 157, Little Falls 165, Detroit Lakes 184, Fergus Falls 193, Park Rapids 200, Brainerd 246 and Melrose 263, with East Grand Forks fielding an incomplete team.

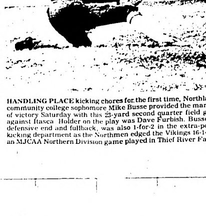
Alexandria and Moorhead will both advance to the Class AA state cross country meet Saturday.

Top five Region 8AA individuals also qualified for the state meet. Becky Ryskamp of Alexandria won the meet in 12:13, followed by Julie Thorkelson, Alexandria; Sue Ness, Little Falls; Shari Huck, Moorhead; Bobbi VanAmber, Alexandria; Sheila Waverek, Sauk Rapids; Liz Dickinson, Bemidji; Jody Aslagson, Alexandria; Lisa Fernholtz, Alexandria; and Kim Olson, Moorhead.

Hockey Rules Meeting Set

Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) hockey rules meeting will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the card room of the Thief River Falls city auditorium.

The meeting is designed for hockey officials and coaches.



HANDLING PLACE kicking chores for the first time, Northland community college sophomore Mike Busse provided the margin of victory Saturday with this 23-yard second quarter field goal against Itasca. Holder on the play was Dave Furbish. Busse, a defensive end and fullback, was also 1-for-2 in the extra-point kicking department as the Northmen edged the Vikings 16-14 in an MJCAA Northern Division game played in Thief River Falls.

WHILE TEAMMATES Marlys Huot and Kathy Skjerven (left) looked on, Northland community college sophomore Kathy Walker kept the ball in play during Saturday's volleyball match against Rainy River. The Northwomen won 3-0, raising their season record to 11-8. They'll host the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) Wednesday at 7 p.m.

Northwomen Sweep Pair Of Weekend Volleyball Matches

Weekend wins over Brainerd and Rainy River improved the Northland community college volleyball record to 11-8 as the Northwomen outlasted Brainerd 3-1 in a two-hour marathon match Friday night and routed Rainy River 3-0 in a quick 45-minute affair Saturday morning.

Playing at Brainerd Friday, Northland won 15-11, 14-16, 15-11, 15-10. It was the fourth straight win over a Northwest Division opponent for the Northwomen.

"We played well," reported Northland coach Deb Jacobson, "especially in the third and fourth games when we came back after losing that second game."

Returning home to host Rainy River Saturday, Northland out-classed the Voyageurs 15-4, 15-8, 15-2.

"We were working today for a balanced attack," noted Jacobson, who was striving for an 85 per cent success figure on the bump-set-spike sequence. They hit that mark — a pretty high figure — in the final game.

Northland hosts the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) in a Northwest Division match Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Northland gym.

Tues., Oct. 27 — Hallock at Marshall County Central; Stephen at Argyle; Tri-County at Greenbush.

In the span of less than a week, Marshall County Central high school football team experienced both ends of the spectrum. The Nordics, who drubbed Tri-County 55-0 in their previous start, suffered an embarrassing 60-6 thrashing at the hands of unbeaten Top of the State Conference champion Argyle Wednesday.

Standing at 4-4 for the year, the Nordics will close out their 1981 season Tuesday when they host Hallock in a 7:30 p.m. game at Newfolden. The Bears won the first meeting between the two this year 10-6.

Argyle, led by Mike LaBine, scored at will in the first half against visiting Marshall County Central, jumping out to a 28-0 first quarter lead and carrying a one-sided 54-0 cushion into halftime. LaBine scored five touchdowns and added a pair of two-point conversions for a 34-point night that hiked his Top of the State Conference scoring total to 132 points in seven games.

It was 60-0 before Marshall County central got into the scoring column on a three-yard touchdown run by Troy Broderson in the fourth quarter.

Argyle, already assured of a post-season Minnesota State High school League nine-man playoff berth, will try to complete an unbeaten regular season schedule Tuesday at home against Stephen. Tri-County will be at Greenbush that day to round out the season-ending Top of the State Conference schedule. Argyle will host the Northern Lights Conference champion Friday at 7:30 p.m. to kick off the post-season playoffs in the MSHSL nine-man division. That winner, in turn, will play North Tri County Conference champion Middle River Tuesday, November 3, at 3 p.m. at Middle River.

Antlerless Deer Permits Are Issued

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources began sending out notices Oct. 19 to the winners of this year's computerized drawing for permits to take antlerless deer by firearms.

A total of 84,405 permits were available and 212,281 applications were received.

However, said officials, there were 1,520 applications for the drawing that arrived after the September 15 deadline. Some permit areas received fewer applications than there were permits available, and some applications were rejected for failure to properly fill out the application form.

As a result, a total of 76,137 permits will actually be issued for this season's hunt.

Officials reminded that all deer licenses, including archery and muzzleloaders, must be purchased no later than Nov. 6.

The Crookston and East Grand Forks matches were to close out the Lincoln regular season volleyball schedule. The Prowlers, who will finish with a 7-10 record, are scheduled to compete in the 1981 North Half Region 8AA tournament Nov. 5-7 at Bemidji.

Swimming season still has regularly scheduled meets planned Thursday, November 12, at Moorhead and Tuesday, November 17 at Bemidji. Ray Kvalvog

Area Runner Makes Mark In Cross Country

Middle River native Ray Kvalvog has made a rousing contribution to the cross-country success story at Moorhead State University this fall and nobody has been more pleased than MSU head coach Fred Dahnke, reports MSU sports information director Larry Scott.

"Ray has come a long way from last year when he didn't even make the team," Dahnke explained. "This is a prime example of what hard work and dedication can do. He has been our number two runner behind All-American Dave Sederquist (Bagley) all year. His attitude has been tremendous, and I'm sure he'll continue to develop during his collegiate career."

Kvalvog, a Marshall County Central graduate, helped the Dragons capture the 1981 Northern Intercollegiate Conference championship at Winona recently by placing fourth. Moorhead State easily outdistanced the seven-team field with 25 points, placing seven runners in the top 11. All were decorated with All-NIC honors.

The Dragons motor to St. Paul for the NAIA District 13 championships November 7.

SMILEY . . .

Mrs. Carolyn Haugen and children and Mr. and Mrs. Anton Torkelson were Wednesday evening guests last week at the Oliver Swanson home in celebration of Patricia's birthday anniversary.

North Tri County Games End Tues.

North Tri County Conference high school football teams will close out their 1981 seasons Tuesday, although unbeaten Middle River will have its schedule extended by post-season play.

Tuesday's final round of nine-man North Tri-County Conference games will find Goodridge at Plummer, Middle River at Grygla-Gatzke, Oklee at McIntosh-Winger, Erskine at Gonvick-Trail and Mentor at Clearbrook.

Last Tuesday Middle River clinched at least a title tie and gained a playoff berth by beating defending conference champion McIntosh-Winger 36-12, Goodridge edged Grygla-Gatzke 8-6, Gonvick-Trail handled Plummer 34-12, Erskine defeated Clearbrook 28-14 and Oklee stopped Mentor 40-12.

Middle River will be trying to complete an undefeated regular season tomorrow at Grygla-Gatkze. Erksine and Gonvick-Trail could still gain a title tie should the Skippers be upset by the Eagles, but Middle River beat both the Comets and Bulldogs this fall to lock up the Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) nine-man playoff berth.

The skippers will host a preliminary round playoff game Tuesday, November 3, at 3 p.m. Opponent that afternoon will be the winner of an elimination game Friday at Argyle matching the Top of the State Conference champion Eagles against the Northern Lights Conference representative at 7:30 p.m. Kennedy and Badger will meet Tuesday and decide the Northern Lights title.

Actual MSHSL state nine-man playoff quarterfinals will be played Saturday, November 7.

City League Hockey Will Have Meeting

Men's city league hockey organizational meeting will be held Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the card room of the Thief River Falls city auditorium.

All team captains or a team representative must attend the meeting.

State Tennis Tournament Matches Set

Four-day eighth annual Minnesota State High School League-sponsored state Class AA and Class A girls tennis tournament will begin Wednesday at three Rein Tennis Clubs in St. Paul.

Team competition will be contested first with action scheduled for the first two days. Singles and doubles play will take place on Friday and Saturday.

Wednesday's team play, which features matches between three singles players and two doubles teams, starts at Lilydale, Como and Phalen facilities. Following Wednesday's quarterfinals, winning teams will take part in Thursday's semifinals and championship matches. The title match in Class A will begin at 1 p.m., with the Class AA championship match scheduled for 3. Both will take place at Lylydale.

Pairings for team play have been decided as a result of the completion of region tournament competition in the eight various regions in each class.

Class AA pairings for team play are as follows: Upper bracket — Detroit Lakes will oppose Virginia at 1 p.m. at Como, while Willmar will meet Osseo at the same time at Lilydale. Lower bracket pairings find Apple Valley meeting tournament favorite Edina at 3 p.m. at Lilydale and Alexander Ramsey will go against Hill-Murray at the same time at Phalen. Semifinal play is scheduled for 8:30 and 10:30 a.m., respectively, at Lilydale Thursday. Edina East was the 1980 champion.

Class A field is paired this way: Upper bracket — Staples meets defending champion St. Paul Academy at Como at 3 p.m. and Rochester Lourdes will dual Blake at 5 p.m., also at Como. The lower bracket will find Madison taking on Greenway of Coleraine at one o'clock at Phalen with Blue Earth scheduled against Roseau at 5 p.m. at Lilydale. The upper bracket victors will play at Como with the lower bracket winners set for semifinal action at Phalen. Both Thursday match-ups begin at 8:30 a.m. St. Paul Academy is the two-time defending champion.

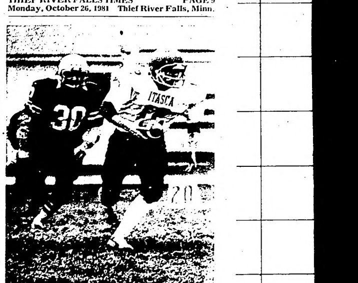
Singles and doubles play in both AA and A classifications will be conducted on Friday and Saturday with action beginning at 8:30 a.m. and running through 4:30 p.m. at all three clubs on Friday. Saturday's semifinal play begins at 9:30 a.m. Singles championship matches are scheduled for 1 p.m. in Class A and 3 p.m. in Class AA. Doubles title matches start at 1 p.m. in Class A and 3 p.m. in Class AA. All finals matches will be held at Lilydale.

One defending singles champion returns, while no doubles team victors from a year ago will be back. Returning to defend her singles title in Class A will be Lisa Martin, a senior from St. Paul Academy who will try and become the first girl in the eight-year history of the tournament to win three consecutive singles championships. In Class AA, last year's state runner-up, Janet McCutchseon of Wayzata is considered the player to beat.

Doubles teams from St. Paul Academy and Edina are considered teams to beat in Class A and Class AA doubles competition.

In all 16 girls in Class A and 16 others in Class AA will challenge for top honors in the singles portion of the tournament, while the same number of teams will play in Class A and Class AA for the doubles titles.

National Wildlife Federation, with the help of grants from Exxon, Union Oil and the Kleburg Foundation, has established a new wildlife research unit which will emphasize its studies on rare, threatened, and endangered species.



ITASCA QUARTERBACK Cameron Gagne was running the option as Northland defensive end Mike Busse closed in during Saturday's community college football game played in Thief River Falls. With Gagne leading the way, the Itasca offense chewed up 362 yards, with the freshman quarterback 12-for-26 passing for 172 yards against the normally stingy Northland defense. But the Vikings killed themselves with four fumbles and five interceptions in losing 16-14 to the Northmen.

Wildlife Habitat Threatened By Uncontrolled Land Use

From the California desert to the Adirondack lakes, from the tallgrass prairies to the Mississippi delta, many of the nation's best remaining wildlife habitats are in trouble, according to a report in the current issue of National Wildlife magazine on ten of the country's most endangered ecosystems.

These habitats are threatened as a result of centuries of uncontrolled growth in the U.S. — a tradition begun by the nation's determined pioneers. Forests have been cleared, swamps drained, deserts defiled and entire rivers diverted. Today, says the magazine, we realize that the resources of this land are finite, and "finding the best and most responsible way to use them may be the toughest judgment Americans have ever had to make."

"Obviously, some resources must be developed," Dr. Jay D. Hair, executive vice president of the National Wildlife Federation, points out in the conservation group's bimonthly publication. "The real argument is over manner and degree."

How that argument is settled is sure to have a lasting impact on large portions of wild America, including these ten endangered habitats examined in the National Wildlife report:

Cascade Forests — Nation's last large stands of old-growth forests — made up of trees 150 years or older — are found in the Cascade mountain region of the Pacific Northwest and provide habitat crucial to a variety of Northwest and provide habitat crucial to a variety of animals. On federal lands, however, these trees are being cut down at a rapid rate for timber. If these federal areas were designated as "wilderness," they would be closed to logging.

Prairie Potholes — Depressions left by retreating glaciers during the last Ice Age are spread across Canada and the Dakotas and Minnesota. Nearly 50 per cent of all North American ducklings are born in this prairie pothole region each year and millions of migratory ducks could not survive without these wetlands. Yet thousands of acres of prairie potholes are drained annually for agricultural use.

Bridger-Teton National Forest — This three-and-a-half million acre national forest is located in Wyoming above the Overthrust Belt, which contains potentially vast reserves of oil and gas. Last year exploratory drilling disrupted hundreds of acres of woodlands. A Wyoming game department biologist told National Wildlife: "We're particularly concerned about the effects of new roads and of potentially dangerous gases on such creatures as the grizzly bear, bald eagle and elk."

Barrier Islands — Three hundred barrier islands that dot the U.S. coast from Maine to Texas act as buffers between the sea and adjacent marshes, which are havens for hundreds of species of coastal birds, fish, reptiles and furbearers. Because they are constantly changing, most barrier islands are unsuitable for development, yet Americans have been building upon them at an alarming rate.

Columbia River Basin — Pacific Northwest's Columbia river has an enormous drainage basin extending across seven western states, providing habitat for everything from deer to songbirds. The river's surging waters irrigate seven million acres. Since the 1930's, more than two dozen dams have been built on the Columbia and waterways that flow into it, reducing the once teeming anadromous fish population to a fraction of its former size. Only one small stretch of the Columbia is still open to spawning and that area is being considered for yet another dam.

California Desert — Sprawling across a fourth of the state, near the Los Angeles-San Diego megalopolis, the California desert is rapidly becoming the nation's most widely used outdoor area. Since 1970, off-road vehicles have denuded at lease one million acres of the terrain. Half of California's nonpetroleum mineral production takes place there. Eight species of wildlife, including the bighorn sheep, and 100 desert plants are now endangered in an ecosystem that looks rugged but is, in fact, delicate.

Chesapeake Bay — Nation's largest estuary, the 4,400-square-mile Chesapeake Bay, yields an average of 125 pounds of seafood per acre to sport and commercial fishermen annually. More than 200 species of fish feed and spawn there, and the bay is a major wintering area for waterfowl. Unfortunately, pollution threatens the bay's wildlife. Every day an estimated 400 million gallons of municipal sewage are dumped into it. Toxic chemicals seep into the estuary and about 800 tanker oil spills occur each year.

Tallgrass Prairies — Once an incredible sea of grass, the nation's tallgrass prairies grew along a wide midwestern corridor from Canada to Texas, sheltering hundreds of millions of wild creatures. The few isolated pockets of tallgrass prairies that remain today are rapidly being converted to agriculture and destroyed by other development while conservationists try to push grassland protection bills through Congress.

Adirondack Lakes — Half of the 2,800 Adirondack lakes are now devoid of fish, and 10 per cent of them are completely "dead." The killer is acid rain, caused when sulfur dioxide emissions released from coal-burning power plants mix with water vapor to form acids. The acids return to earth in rain and snow. The problem could grow worse if Congress weakens the clean air act this year.

Mississippi Delta — Lush swamps and marshes of the Mississippi Delta are literally vanishing into the Gulf of Mexico. "During the past 30 years at least 800 square miles of Louisiana wetlands have disappeared from an area that provides more than a third of the nation's annual fisheries harvest," reports National Wildlife. The wetlands were created over the centuries as the Mississippi river deposited silt. When engineers build levees and drainage canals, they interfere with the natural flow of fresh water. With nothing to hold back the open sea, the marshes have rapidly deteriorated.

One highly productive ecosystem in the delta region is the Atchafalaya river basin, home to some 300 species of birds and 100 species of fish. Two years ago, a U.S. District Court, ruling in favor of an NWF lawsuit, granted protection for the region's bottomland hardwood swamps, which were being cleared at a rate of six square miles a year. Now the provisions of the clean water act which protect this ecosystem are being challenged in Congress.

DNR Hunter Training Is Often Needed

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources warned that many western states and some Canadian provinces require proof that nonresidents have had hunter safety training before they will be issued a license.

Enforcement officials said Minnesotans planning to hunt in other states frequently find out after expending a considerable amount of money to cover reservations, guide fees, permits and other costs that they won't be allowed to hunt without evidence they have had such training or can pass a written test.

Regulations often apply to adults as well as youth.

Those planning to hunt out of state should check the requirements.

Nothing could be simpler.

County Board Proceedings

October 26, 1981
Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minnesota
October 5, 1981

Pursuant to mailed notices of Hearing on the redetermination of benefits and consolidation of County Ditch 25 and Judicial Ditch 25-3, the County Board met in the first floor meeting room in the Courthouse at 7:30 p.m. October 5, 1981.

Members present: Grabanski, Koop, Stenberg, Hoffman & Tasa. Viewers present: Verner Arveson, John Hoffman and Sam Brattell. Fifteen interested parties registered as being present.

The Auditor presented proof of 132 notices mailed out.

Sam Brattell reviewed the map the reviewers had drawn up showing the benefitted area that would be included. The map also showed the benefitted areas that were included before in these two ditches and the new area being brought into the benefitted area.

Discussion was held with most of the concern being that if there was a larger benefitted area that more water would be drained into these ditches.

The County Board indicated that the whole procedure to bring in more benefitted area would not increase the water flow as the water has been flowing in that direction naturally anyway. This would include those benefitted from the drainage before but not having to pay for it.

Being no more discussion the Board will make decision at the next regular Board meeting taking all suggestions into consideration.

Meeting declared adjourned.

Attest: Kenneth Olson, Auditor

Clerk of the Board

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Tasa and upon call for vote, was declared unanimously approved.

Commissioner Koop introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

Department Heads from Road & Bridge, County Treasurer, Attorney and Sheriff Departments were in to discuss their proposed budgets with the County Board. No action taken.

Recessed until 7:00 p.m. for Old Sanitarium meeting.

At 7:00 p.m. The Board reconvened to conduct a Public Hearing on the Use of the Old Oakland Park Sanitarium Building. Commissioner Koop was not present at this Hearing.

Others present were: Mrs. Vernon Kees, Vernon Kees, Daryl V. Norberg, Patricia Norberg, Paul Johnson and Harold Kees.

The Board explained that they had hired Reiko Carroll Muller Associates, Inc. to do an adoptive re-use study on the Pennington County Sanitarium. They came up with a plan to remodel the building into 27 apartments for the elderly at a cost of $700,000.00. The Board felt this plan was too costly.

Those present were concerned about the possibility of the Board using the Old Sanitarium Building for a Health-Care facility which they thought was not needed. The City Planned had researched the matter with the Board and had found a Health-Care facility not feasible.

With no more suggestions the County Board discussed the boarding up of the basement and first floor windows and the removal of heaters from the basement.

Northmen Tip Vikings 16-14

place of Hudec, Busse and Canivez.

Northland offense got off to an inglorious start after Jorstad's initial interception, losing two yards in three plays and then having a high fourth down snap downed by punter Jeff Westberg in the end zone, giving Itasca a safety and a 2-0 lead with just 3:56 elapsed.

The 50-yard Furbish-to-Crouch touchdown combination made it 6-2. Actually, it wasn't that much of a pass. Furbish simply took the snap, took one step back and tossed the ball along the line of scrimmage to Crouch, who should have been stopped for no gain on the play. Instead, his spinning efforts kept him away from several would-be Itasca tacklers at midfield, and he picked up a big block from Busse, who was the fullback on the play, downfield as he ran down the left sidelines. Busse's first kick attempt on the extra point try missed the mark with 1:53 left in the first quarter.

But even with less than two minutes left, Northland did not get out of the first quarter with a lead as Itasca scored on a quick 65-yard, three-play strike. The touchdown was a 45-yard burst up the middle by John Stifter, a sophomore from McGregor who finished with 163 yards. The Northmen overran him as he cut back on his touchdown run with just 30 seconds left in the opening period. A missed conversion kick left it 8-6, Itasca.

Crouch looked like he had himself another long touchdown when he went 47 yards on a reverse early in the second quarter, but the play was wiped out by a clip.

Instead, Northland waited until Oppegaard, a freshman defensive tackle from Mahnomen, came up with a fumble recovery at the Itasca 13 to go in for the go-ahead touchdown. Busse, who enjoyed a strong afternoon in the defensive line, broke through and stripped Gagne of the ball.

One of those before-mentioned lucky breaks helped ease Northland into the end zone on the four-play mini-drive when an apparent Mike Punton fumble at the Itasca seven on second down was covered by a quick whistle. The Itasca coaches argued vehemently on the play and were slapped with an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty that saved Northland a down and moved the ball to the four. Furbish then scored on a play in which the Vikings jumped offside and did not respond to the play when flags flew as the ball was snapped, giving Furbish an easy shot at the goal ine with 6:48 on the clock. Busse made the kick this time to make it 13-8.

Busse set up his winning field goal himself by breaking through, hitting the beleaguered Gagne as he tried to option the ball and recovered the fumble at the Itasca 33 with 4:10 left in the first half.

Furbish completed a 26-yard pass to Crouch — downfield this time — to get the ball to the seven and Busse got off a strong kick from the 13 with 2:05 to go for the 16-8 halftime margin.

Second half featured more yards and more turnovers for the Vikings, who went 50 yards in 12 plays on their first possession to narrow the gap to 16-14. The touchdown was a one-yard sprint around the right side by Stifter with an option pitch. But Jorstad and safety Thaddous Forman both converged on receiver Brian Skadsem and broke up Gagne's try for a tying two-point conversion pass in the end zone with 7:39 remaining in the third quarter.

That was it for the offense on either side. The Vikings' final five possessions were ended by four interceptions and a fumble.

Gagne, a freshman from Cambridge, had some good numbers in the passing department despite the winter-like weather as he hit 12 of 26 attempts for 172 yards. But the interceptions ruined those figures. Skadsem, a sophomore receiver from Marshall County Central in Newfolden, caught six passes for 78 yards for the visitors.

It was the first Northland victory over Itasca in six tries and left both teams at 3-4 for the year. The Northmen will complete the 1981 season Saturday for a 1:30 p.m. game at Brainerd.

Immunization Against Winter Illness Advised

As the cool months of fall arrive, Minnesota health officials are again urging that certain people be immunized against winter illnesses like influenze, and some types of pneumonia.

Shots are being recommended for people who face special health risks if they get these diseases. Influenza or pneumonia can lead to serious, even fatal complications for people in certain "high risk" groups, authorities say.

Among those being urged to seek protection against influenza are people over 65, and people with

- + heart disease;
- + chronic lung disease;
- + chronic kidney disease;
- + diabetes;
- + some form of chronic anemia, such as sickle cell disease;
- + lowered resistance to infection, caused by a disease or some type of medical treatment. Such lowered resistance can be caused by certain forms of cancer, for instance, or by drugs which suppress the body's immune system.

Authorities say it's hard to predict what type of influenza may strike during a given year, or how widespread the disease will be. Each year's vaccine is designed to protect against those virus types, or "strains," considered most likely to make an appearance. This year's vaccine protects against three different strains — A-Bangkok, A-Brazil and B-Singapore.

During last year's epidemic, influenza cases exceeded the number expected in a "normal" year by the greatest margin since 1968. In Minnesota, the season's first influenza cases are usually reported shortly after the first of the year.

Immunization against pneumococcal pneumonia, which accounts for about a fourth of all pneumonia cases, is also being recommended for a number of high risk groups. National centers for disease control have concluded that "pneumococcal polysaccharide" vaccine, which has been available for about four years now, may offer protection against this type of pneumonia. Those who should have the vaccine include

- + persons over two years of age who do not have a functioning spleen;
- + persons over two years of age who have had an organ transplant;
- + persons over two years of age who have any of the following conditions: sickle cell anemia, multiple myeloma, cirrhosis, kidney failure, alcoholism, diabetes, congestive heart failure, chronic lung disease, or any condition in which the body's immune system is weakened;
- + persons living in nursing homes or other institutions, in close contact with groups of people who are especially vulnerable to disease.

Authoritites are not recommending the pneumococcal pneumonia vaccine for the general population, including the elderly. Physicians are being advied to use their own judgment about immunizing individual patients.

"Booster" doses of the pneumonia vaccine are not needed, and may increase the risk of an adverse reaction, authorities say. Persons who need the influenza shots should get them once a year, but no one should receive the pneumococcal vaccine more than once.

State Small Business Meet Opens Nov. 12

More than 500 delegates will convene for the Minnesota conference on small business at the Radisson South hotel in Bloomington beginning November 12.

Purpose of the conference, as mandated by the legislature, is to sift and sort, refine and develop a series of recommendations which will be developed into a final report for presentation to the 1982 Minnesota Legislature. When the conference begins, delegates will be dealing with between three and four hundred recommendations.

Conference is a result of a process begun in June of this year involving 20 different regional meetings conducted around the state in June and July to elect 402 delegates to the November conference and the generation of more than 500 small business related and business climate recommendations. In addition, each Minnesota legislator is permitted to nominate one delegate, and each of the conference's nine commissioners may appoint up to 10 delegates.

Meetings began when the delegate selection process was completed at the end of July and 100 new recommendations have been developed through meetings of delegations from across the state as well as district meetings of elected or appointed Minnesota conference on small business delegates around the state.

Conference will begin with a delegate reception Thursday evening, November 12. Discussion and voting sessions led by facilitators will take place November 13 and 14. At a special luncheon November 13, Gov. Albert H. Quie and officials of Inc. Magazine, a national small business publication, will present Inc. 100 awards to representatives of 16 Minnesota companies selected by the magazine as being among the top 200 fastest growing small businesses in America.

At 7 p.m. November 13, the conference will sponsor a dinner and reception for government officials from the executive and legislative branches of the state and federal government.

At noon November 14, Milton Stewart, Inc. Magazine editor and former director of the U.S. small business administration's office of advocacy, will address the conference.

While the participants in the deliberations are elected and appointed delegates, a number of functions will be open to anyone wishing to attend. Some events will have registration or meal fees.

Gene Wright, chairman of the nine member commission supervising the conference, will open the conference, November 13, by explaining, "this process of developing recommendations for legislative consideration of business issues' is unprecedented. Never before has such a grass roots approach been taken within the state to the development of policy positions and approaches to solving business problems. There have been many studies of small business in recent years. But none will have the impact that the report of this conference will have for two reasons: the grass roots approach, and the fact that delegates will remain as a network of new and committed activists urging the legislature to enact recommendations which are developed."

Conference will conclude at 2 p.m., November 14.

Use Right Card In Depositing Federal Taxes

That axiom, "time if money," may hvave a new ring to it for businesses making federal tax deposits but using the wrong deposit cards.

"Just a little time when you're filling out the deposit cards can save you a lot of money, not to mention a few headaches," C.D. Switzer, director of the IRS in Minnesota said. For example, if a payment of withheld income and social security (FICA) taxes is made with a deposit card for federal unemployment tax (FUTA), the payment will be applied to the business' FUTA account. Later when the business files its quarterly tax return, the payment will not show up on the account and a bill with an underpayment penalty may be sent to the business, Switzer said.

In Minnesota almost 500,000 employment tax returns are filed every year. Based on this, the IRS estimates a potential of up to 16,000 businesses in the state could be using the wrong deposit cards.

Taxes deposited directly to an authorized financial institution must be accompanied by the appropriate federal tax deposit cards for the type of tax being paid since the cards are coded so that they can be processed by IRS computers. The cards also have printed information indicating the type of tax and the tax period for which the card is to be used.

If the printed information on a deposit card is incorrect, instructions on the back of the card explain what to do. Cards with the business name of employer's identification number shown incorrectly should not be used. Instead, the card should be corrected in ink and sent with the payment to the Ogden, Utah IRS service center where the tax returns are filed. However, if only the business address, tax period, or type of tax is wrong, the business may use the card for a deposit after correcting it, Switzer said.

Minn. Milk Production Up Two Per Cent

Minnesota's milk production gained two per cent in September, 13 million pounds more than a year earlier, according to Minnesota Dairy Roundup, a report from the Minnesota agricultural statistics service.

Milk per cow was up five pounds, and output was raised mainly by the increase of 10,000 milk cows from last year.

United States milk production during September totaled 10.7 billion pounds, three per cent more than September of 1980.

Accumulated milk production for the first nine months of 1981 was 101 billion pounds, compared with 97.4 billion pounds, during the same period in 1980.

Production per cow averaged 974 pounds, 19 pounds above September a year earlier and 45 pounds more than September of 1979.

Total milk cows averaged 10.9 million head, one per cent more than a year ago and two per cent above September of 1979.

Other dairy products, including butter, cheese and dry milk products, rose in production, unlike frozen desserts which noted a decline as the summer came to an end.

Butter production in Minnesota in August was up five per cent from a year ago. Wisconsin and New York were up 25 per cent and Pennsylvania was up 31 per cent. Gains in other states were more moderate as United States butter was 13 per cent over a year ago.

American cheese manufacture for August increased one per cent in Minnesota and five per cent in the United States from a year ago. Production was down 12 per cent from July for the state and down seven per cent from July for the United States.

August United States nonfat dry milk was up 10 per cent, dry whole milk up 20 per cent, and dry buttermilk was up 33 per cent from a year ago.

United States ice cream and ice milk were both down four per cent and sherbet was down seven per cent from August of last year.

Farm milk prices report illustraed that the price of manufacturing grade milk at 3.5 fat test in the Minnesota-Wisconsin series declined one cent per hundredweight from August to September to $12.46 per hundredweight. Price was 39 cents higher than September of 1980.

Mediation Solves Nothing Monday

Mediation session which lasted for 10 hours Monday in the Pennington county courthouse produced more sour grapes than vintage wine as neither side in the controversy between the Thief River Falls board of education and negotiators representing the Thief River Falls Education association moved from previously established positions.

The school board held firm at its offer of $4,500 increase over a two-year contract and the TRFEA didn't budge from its last request of $5,497.57 average per teacher.

No further dates for mediation nor negotiations have been set and the teacher strike which began October 13 continues in effect. Mike Lehrer, president of the TRFEA, told the Times this morning that the negotiating team within the organization has been working on a plan to bring movement and that he has met informally on several occasions with Supt. Robert Block with a goal of getting negotiations formally underway again. Teachers stand ready to meet at any time, Lehrer said.

Supt. Block termed the existing situation a "Mexican stand-off". The TRFEA feels it made the last move in reducing its request from an average $5,600 increase to $5,497 and the next move is up to the board. Board chairman Ken Wiebolt has stated that the board doesn't consider the TRFEA reduction significant and there is no point in meeting until there is greater movement by the teachers' group.

The superintendent said that although discussions have taken place and he would like to see a settlement reached, he recognizes that scheduling a meeting is the board's prerogative and he couldn't commit the members to that. Neither side has severed communications with the other and the potential for negotiations soon remains open.

In the meantime, nine students have transferred from the public schools to non-public schools in the community. Our Saviour's Christian academy has added five students which brings the school to capacity. St. Ber-

Plummer Dist. Sets Levy Vote

Voters in School District 628 at Plummer will go to the polls Friday from 6 to 9 p.m. to vote on an eight-mill maintenance levy. The levy would raise approximately $52,000 expected to be needed by the district in excess of its regular levy to balance the books for the 1982-83 school year.

According to Supt. Norman Johnson, the referendum will be held in the school cafeteria. He said that 118 people attended a public meeting on the referendum Monday evening which lasted about an hour and a half and that interest seems to be high, making him optimistic about passage of the levy.

If approved, the supplemental levy would add the $52,000 to the district's general fund where it is expected the bulk of it would be used to pay increases in faculty salaries.

The Plummer school board and the Plummer Education association, which represents the 21 full-time and two-part-time teachers in the district, have not yet reached agreement on the 1981-82 and 1982-83 contract. Last meeting between the groups was October 14, and the first meeting with a state mediator is scheduled for Thursday at 9 a.m. at the Red Lake county courthouse in Red Lake Falls.

At the last meeting, the board offered at 1981-82 contract ranging from $12,175 to $16,590 at the BA level and $13,400 to $17,940 at the MA level. For 1982-83, the board offered $13,502 to $18,052 at the BA level and $14,752 to $19,432 at the MA level. Supt. Johnson said the board's offer over the two-year contract was approximately a 30 per cent increase from the present salary schedule.

The Plummer Education association last requested a 12-step salary range of $12,200 to $17,900 at the BA level and $14,100 to $19,800 at the MA level for 1981-82. For 1982-83 the request was for $13,800 to $19,000 at the BA level and $15,700 to $20,900 at the MA level.

1st Concert Production Brings 'Mikado' Cast

Sandra Holland, "Yum-Yum"

Robert Hildreth, "Nanki-Poo"

by Bonnie Wentzel
Times Reporter

A Saturday afternoon visit with Yum-Yum and Nanki-Poo who had just arrived from Winkler, Manitoba along with Ko-Ko, the Mikado, and Katisha, among others, provided a "colorful" experience.

After all, it was Nanki-Poo, the son of the Mikado, who disguised himself as a wandering minstrel to avoid marriage with the coy and aged Katisha. Then, in his disguise, he fell in love with Yum-Yum, who is betrothed to Ko-Ko who agrees to surrender Yum-Yum, but only if Nanki-Poo will volunteer to be executed and thus rehabilitate Ko-Ko's reputation. Yet, all returns to normal when Ko-Ko is obliged to marry Katisha and Nanki-Poo reveals his true identity.

Confusing?

Not really, Especially when Yum-Yum's real name is Sandra Holland, a performer from Balvmore, MD and Nanki-Poo is actually Robert Hildreth, a performer from Valparaiso, IN and both performers appeared in the first production of the Thief River Falls concert series "The Mikado" last Saturday in the Lincoln high school auditorium.

The character played by Holland in the production, "sweet,' young, innocent girl" and "one of the three little maids," is completely separate from her real character, she explained Saturday before the production in the dressing room at the high school. (Not to say that Holland is not a sweet girl, of course!)

"I'm a different person from the character I play," Holland said. "But people swear that when I put on my wig I get a vacant look in my eyes!"

Hildreth, a graduate of Indiana university, agreed that his character in the production is quite different from his true-life figure. "I play a character like Yum-Yum only male," he smiled, describing his part in the satirical comedy.

Both performers agreed, however, that it does take awhile to "come down" after a performance, and time is needed to "unwind."

To Holland, one who is experiencing her first trip west of the Mississippi, the "open space" is "beautiful."

Farm Income Taxes Subject For Meeting

"Income Tax Management for Farmers" is the topic of a meeting sponsored by the Pennington county extension service, on Wednesday, November 4 at 1 p.m. in the meeting room of the new Production Credit association building in Thief River Falls.

University of Minnesota agricultural extension service economist Earl Fuller will present information on tax planning that can assist farmers in minimizing the income tax paid by utilizing tax management procedures provided for in the law.

County extension director Terry Courneya indicates that there is still time for planning tax procedures that will help reduce the impact of low income years such as the one farmers are currently experiencing. By looking back and planning ahead, Courneya suggests farmers can take advantage of provisions in the federal and state tax laws that are designed to level out the tax burden between high and low income years in farming.

Increase of $889,824 From Year Ago . . .

School Board Approves $3,422,225 Local Levy

Approval of a local tax levy of $3,422,225 — up $889,824 from a year ago — was given by the Thief River Falls board of education at its meeting Monday morning in the school district service center board room. The levy will be for 1981 taxes payable in 1982.

The levy of $3,422,225 compares with the levy a year ago of $2,532,401, according to Harry Nelson, school district business manager. He notes that state credits of about $800,000 applied against that levy a year ago, and that similar credits are anticipated for the levy adopted Monday.

Nelson said much of the large boost in local taxes comes from an increase in the assessed valuation of the district from about $72 million to about $85 million and an increase in maximum allowable levy from 21 to 23 mills. The school board has levied the maximum allowable for the past several years.

By various funds, the new levy includes the following with comparable levy for a year ago listed in parentheses: Maintenance, $2,525,458 ($1,874,680); transportation, $231,733 ($91,875); community service, $48,586 ($30,817); capital outlay, $380,937 ($297,956); debt service, $97,905 ($103,525); AVTI debt service, $135,511 ($133,547); and AVTI unemployment insurance, $2,098 (0).

Nelson noted that the maintenance levy includes a new item of $29,166 for summer school, that the transportation levy includes funds for bus purchases, that the capital outlay levy includes $80,000 for energy conservation projects and that more than $98,000 of the AVTI debt service is to be recovered from the state.

Total expenditure budget approved previously by the board for the 1982-83 school year was $8,099,414.

The board Monday also authorized the administration to proceed with the list of items established as priorities in energy conservation by the architectural firm of Armstrong, Torseth, Skold and Rydeen. Tom Skold and Tom Peterson of the firm made a presentation to the board regarding the priorities under a state energy grant received by the school district.

Total projected costs are $255,483 and involve improvements at Lincoln, Franklin-Mark Twain, Knox and Washington schools and the AVTI aviation mechanics shop. The board removed one item — insulation of storage garages at a cost of $9,573 — from the priority list.

Twenty-six items are included on the list and involve weatherstripping, insulation of roofs and walls, window caulking, replacement of gym windows at Washington school, air system modification, replacement of

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Milt Fletcher could probably be a success in a number of fields, but thousands have benefitted Because he chose to do what he does best — share his knowledge of management in a way which makes it understandable as well as enjoyable.

"Selling chamber of commerce participation is something like selling insurance," Fletcher said. "You're dealing with an intangible, something that customer can't feel, so you have to develop an interest. 'How many children do you have? Do you want them protected?' You have to show the person what's in it for him. That's the key."

As a director of local chamber activities with the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Fletcher was in Thief River Falls Saturday for the local chamber of commerce retreat and goal setting session. He has been active in voluntary organization management since 1947.

Johnson And Tharaldson Marriage Vows Spoken

Sheila Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy F. Johnson of Goodridge, became the bride of Kevin Tharaldson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Tharaldson, also of Goodridge, at a recent ceremony at Faith Lutheran church, Goodridge.

Rev. Gene Broughton officiated at the double ring ceremony. Anne Manderud was the organist and Lisa Kriel, with Ryan Haugen as guitarist, sang "For Baby (For Bobbie)," "God, A Woman and A Man," and "Wedding Song."

Ferns graced the chancel and peach ribbons marked the pews.

The bride given in marriage by her parents, was attired in a gown of poly organza fashioned in Southern belle style with billowing skirt and attached chapel-length train edged with a flounce. Venice lace outlined the Queen Anne neckline and matching lace motifs were appliqued on the bodice, sheer sleeves and were scattered across the skirt and train. A fitted lace headpiece held her walking length veil of bridal illusion, also trimmed with Venice lace. She carried a cascade of silk peach roses, white and peach daisies and babies' breath, with lace backing, accented by peach and white ribbon streamers.

Angie Berndt and Valerie Sand were the bride's personal attendants.

Maid of honor was the bride's sister, Susie Johnson of Goodridge. Bridesmaids were Cherie Tharaldson, sister of the groom, Debbie Johnson, sister of the bride; Janelle Bakken, a friend of the bride; and Leann Holen, a cousin of the bride. Their peach floor-length gowns with pleated skirts featured blousey bodices with rounded necklines, complemented by a bow on the shoulder. In their hair they wore a cluster of peach rose buds and babies' breath. They carried white lace umbrellas accented with a cluster of peach roses.

Flower girl was Shannon Sjulestad, a cousin of the groom. Her gown of a coordinating peach floral print was styled with a ruffled neckline and a flounced hemline.

The rings were carried by Nathan Johnson of Anoka, a cousin of the bride. Like the groomsmen, he wore a brown tuxedo with a peach ruffled shirt and a peach rose boutonniere.

The groom, who wore a white tuxedo with tails was attended by his brother Randy Tharaldson of Thief River Falls, as best man. Groomsmen were Gerry Tharaldson, Goodridge, a brother of the groom; Greg Sjulestad, Thief River Falls, a cousin of the groom; Jeff Bakken, Goodridge, a friend of the groom; and Ritchy Johnson, Apple Valley, a cousin of the bride.

Serving as ushers were Mitch Josephson, Minneapolis, cousin of the bride; Jack Miller and Mike Hemmestvedt of Goodridge, friends of the groom; and Richard Holen, Goodridge, a cousin of the bride. Usherettes were Sandy Johnson and Nicole Tharaldson.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Johnson selected a peach, floor-length gown with long sleeves and a rounded neckline. Her corsage featured three peach roses, peach and white daisies, babies' breath and peach and white ribbon. A similar corsage complemented the peach, long-sleeved floor-length, lacy-look gown worn by the groom's mother.

Honor guests were Mr. and Mrs Vernon Wikstrom, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Johnson, Mrs. Clara Kaushagen and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Sjulestad.

A wedding supper followed in the church dining hall. Reception hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Selmer Holen and Mr. and Mrs. David Sjulestad. Kym Tharaldson and Ginger Lundeen presided at the guest book as Becky Johnson and Bridgett Sjulestad served the punch.

Highlighting the table was a triple, double-tiered cake on an oblong base surrounded by ferns and peach roses. The tiers, in graduated sizes, were supported by crystal columns filled with ferns and peach flowers. Topping the tallest tier was an ornament featuring a miniature bride and groom, backed by a filligreed heart and peach blossoms. The tiers were connected by a stairway with members of the bridal party on the steps. Peach colored blossoms and ferns decorated the cake, which was cut and served by Esther Fjeld and Shirley Sjulestad. Karen Sjulestad, Joni Bjerklie, Yvonne Wikstrom and Joann Langseth poured coffee.

Waitresses were Micki Haugen, Sandy Wiseth, Robyn Johnson, Tracy Tabor and Dianne Holen. Ryan Bjerklie, Doreen Langseth, Sonya Johnson and Jason Langseth arranged the gifts. Distributing rice packets were Shannon and Kari Manderud, Heather Baurer, Corey Wikstrom and Christopher Bjerklie.

For traveling on the wedding trip to the Black Hills of South Dakota, the Bride wore blue jeans and a casual blouse.

The bride is a 1981 graduate of Goodridge high school and prior to her marriage was employed by the Down Home cafe. The groom, a 1979 graduate of Goodridge high school is manager of Midland station in Goodridge. The couple is at home at Goodridge. Photo, Ed McCoullough and Dorie Josephson, Minneapolis.

Mikado First Concert Given In TRF Series

she said. People in the small towns (Thief River Falls the largest thus far) where the group has conducted performances, have been thoughtful and appreciative, both affirmed.

The group, based out of Minneapolis, began its tour September 19, with the first show presented two days later. Team consists of eight singers and one accompanist. Their tour will end November 24, making the Winkler performance the half-way point, according to Holland.

The group has toured in such places as Miles City, MT; Silver Lake, WI; North and South Dakota, Nebraska, and as far south as Lebanon, MO.

"Tomorrow we'll be in International Falls," Hildreth said.

Holland, who received her music degree from the University of North Carolina and who is pursuing a career in opera, got the part of Yum-Yum through "word of mouth," she stated. A friend who was called to audition couldn't make it, and recommended Sandra for the part.

Holland auditioned with Plato Enterprises, a touring branch of Coastal Theater Productions, she said. "The Mikado," a presentation of Sarasota Plato Productions, Inc., is directed by Robert Ennis Turoff, a graduate of Denver university and the author of two screen plays and one musical. More than 250 Turoff productions have been presented in almost every prominent theatre in the country including Hawaii.

Enjoyment from their work was freely expressed by the two performers as they sat in their casual clothes before the performance. Behind us stood a rack of colorful costumes and to our left, four coal black wigs decorated with tiny flowers, all patiently waiting for the evening performance when they would be displayed before another audience.

"I love it!" Holland said, referring to her selected career as an actress ". . . the different audiences and theatres. . ."

It seems, according to Hildreth, that little children are most entertained by "The Mikado."

"But adults enjoy it too," Holland added. "They seem to enjoy the adult humor in it." Even though the comedy is set in Japan, it contains British humor. Author and composer of the operetta are Gilbert and Sullivan, the 19th century British team who collaborated on 11 comic opera hits.

One would begin to believe that being "on the road" every day would get somewhat fatiguing. Holland admitted that it is tiring to pack and be on the road every day. But the performers seem to be able to get enough rest — which is important. For experienced performers and singers, it usually takes a week to master a rehearsal for a performance, Hildreth said, which means eight hours of steady work each day. There is usually time for a full eight hours of sleep each night and even occasional naps, he said.

"We've all been relatively healthy," and that's a good thing," Holland said. "Taking vitamins helps."

The group runs into few difficulties while on state, the performers agreed, but there are occasional complications. For instance, in Winkler the night before the group had arrived in Thief River Falls, some of the sets were knocked over as the "three little maids" entered the stage with their umbrellas.

"But it turned out okay," Hildreth said. "We laughed about it. Things like that don't happen very often."

Both Holland and Hildreth noted that the type of audience to perform for is the type that laughs freely.

"Most audiences that we perform for, especially in the small towns, like live entertainment," Hildreth said. "And most take the time to realize that we're an operetta comedy."

All of "The Mikado" characters, including Ko-Ko, Nanki-Poo, Yum-Yum, Katisha, Pooh-Bah, Pish-Tush, Mikado, Pitti-Sing, and Peep-Bo, seem to get along well together.

"We're a congenial group," Hildreth smiled.

"For being together for five weeks, I'd say we're doing pretty good," Holland added.

Mediation On Monday Solves Nothing Here

nard's Catholic school has added three students and the Seventh-day Adventist school has added one.

All three of the schools have received other inquiries. Our Saviour's academy could have enrolled other students if it had the room. St. Bernard's school has its first and third grades filled and would have room for up to 19 more in a combination of kindergarten, second, fourth, fifth and sixth grades. The Adventist school now has 18 students and room for more, but board approval is required for acceptance.

All of the private schools indicated that students are accepted only on the provision that they finish the current school term in the private school where they have been enrolled. Tuition is being prorated on days remaining in the school schedule, and St. Bernard's requires the tuition to be paid on enrollment for students entering during the school term.

Effect of the strike on the area vocational-technical institute is anything but good. Number of students who have found employment or gone to other schools is unknown but expected to be high. Students who have not made changes are faced with indecision on renting housing and the 182 who receive aids for housing, food and other necessities are seeing their financial assistance come to an end. Approximately 60 new students who were enrolled for classes which would have started since the strike began are presently lost to the district.

Director Orley Gunderson said that AVTI administration is attempting to take as many of the student and parent calls as possible and that the words which best describe the AVTI situation among callers are "discouragement and despondency".

"All we can advise the callers to do is to check back with us later," the director said. The school is accepting collect calls from students to inquire about the local situation. Only 22 per cent of the AVTI enrollment is from Pennington county.

Parents Invited To Self-Esteem Program Nov. 3

Pennington county extension service invites local parents to attend a program on "Developing Self-Esteem Among Family Members." Sue Meyers, extension family life specialist at the University of Minnesota, will focus on how the esteem of family members may be enhanced for the well-being of all concerned.

Teenagers face pregnancy, chemical dependency and emotional situations which relate back to the entire family. Children, as well as adults, need to have a high level of self-esteem to have satisfaction in life.

Program will be conducted November 3 at 7:30 p.m. in the Pennington county courthouse meeting room in Thief River Falls.

Open Forum On Negotiations Set At Armory

Public forum on teacher negotiations in Thief River Falls is being sponsored by the Thief River Falls Education association Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the national guard armory in Thief River Falls. Public attendance is invited and special invitations have been sent to the members of the local school board, according to a TRFEA advertisement published in today's issue of the Times.

In connection with the existing strike situation in Thief River Falls, president Mike Lehrer of the Thief River Falls Education association has released an open letter to the public. Entitled "What Is The Teachers' Strike in Thief River Falls All About?", the letter was prepared by the TRFEA and approved for publication by the president. The letter follows:

"We are striking because we are tired of watching our educational system being gutted by lack of programs, low salaries, large class sizes and a misguided school board. We are tired of watching this school district systematically destroy itself by denying its children the opportunity and the things they need to cope with the society in which they will live.

"We as teachers have tried everything. We have negotiated in good faith, communicated with the public, warned time and time again that public education is being hurt. Who has listened?

"Our patience has been stretched to the breaking point by those who claim to have the best interest of education at heart, but in the end, are willing to sacrifice educational quality for personal prestige and large surpluses in the school district budget. We have faced the attacks of the school board's professional negotiator, who apparently is only interested in amassing huge legal fees by delaying the settlement process. Education has been victimized by a narrow-minded portion of this community who never have been interested in preserving the system of quality education. Quality education is the backbone of our community.

"Yes, teachers' salaries and benefits are issues; yes, contract language and insurance are issues; they are all part of the big issue — preserving the best educational system possible. We are the ones who face our students, your children, every day. We know what is needed, we understand what they must have, and we KNOW what happens when students don't get it. To those in this community who are attempting to destroy the educational process, we have this to say: 'We will fight for what our students need, whatever it takes!'

"Would you like to help settle the strike? Contact a school board member personally."

A COVERED WAGON caught a lot of people's attention on both Monday and Tuesday resulting in phone calls to the Times when this group of Canadians passed through the area on their way to California. Marcel Robert, his wife, son and friends, spent the night north of Thief River Falls, and passed through the city at about noon Tuesday. Having traveled from Montreal since May 17, they hoped to be in Louisiana in three months.

8,000 Mile Journey Planned . . .

Canadians Travel In Covered Wagon

by Dave Berg
Times Reporter

Horse-drawn covered wagons were once the chief method of transport across the prairie, but when the automobile and the railroads rendered them obsolete, they all but disappeared from the scene.

The sight of one of these vehicles from the past lumbering down Highway 59 was unusual enough to cause a number of people to call the Times office, wondering if we knew about it.

Sent to investigate, and spotting the wagon coming down the highway, I found a place where they could stop without causing a traffic hazard, and waited there at the intersection with Marshall County No.2. Standing in the open, with the cold wind blowing, one learns that covered wagons do not move fast. In fact they move at about four miles per hour, according to Marcel Robert, who with his wife Huguette, son Fabian, and two friends Gaetan Venne and Daniel Slythe, left Montreal May 17, on their way to California in a covered wagon and on horseback.

Marcel, speaking English with a strong French accent, acts as spokesman and interpreter for the group, members of which speak only French among themselves. He says they average between 20 and 25 miles per day, making as many as 30 miles on a particularly good day. They only made about 17 miles on Monday, traveling from the Clyde Swenson farm at Newfolden to the Gary Clow residence just north of Thief River Falls. A meter attached to the right front wheel of the wagon indicated that they had traveled 1,743 miles so far.

Robert says he built most of the 5,500 pound wagon himself. The axles and wheels were old originals that he purchased, but the upper part he made using standard two by four construction. Improvements over the original design include grease fittings installed in the wheel hubs so they can be lubricated without being removed and tires cut from strips of conveyor belt nailed to the rims to keep the wheels from grinding away to nothing against the hard surfaced roads.

A bit more radical changes are the radio and CB built into a console on the left side of the driver's seat. They are used to keep track of the weather and for communication.

An electronics repairman for 15 years, Robert says the trip has been " a long-time dream of mine." Slythe worked on a dairy farm, and Venn, Robert describes with a twinkle in his eye, as "the best lumberjack in all Quebec." They didn't actually begin making plans until about a year and a half before their departure.

Those plans have already been modified. Originally intending to travel across Canada through Alberta and down to California, Robert says that the rapid approach of winter caused them to decide to cross the border at Emerson, Manitoba, and come this way. They hope to reach Louisiana in three months, and travel up the coast to California from there.

Inside the wagon they carry complete camping supplies, tools, and 500 pounds of oats for the horses. He says they have not had to camp since the weather turned cold, with people offering the use of their homes for the night. He says they stop two or four times a day to rest and water the horses. Wherever they halt, people stop to ask questions and visit.

"People have been very good to us along the way,"' he says. As they prepared to move on, Mrs. Swenson, whose farm they stayed at the night before, drove up and offered them a thermos of hot coffee, lending credence to the statement.

Why did he decide to undertake such a long journey? Is he celebrating something special or symbolic? "No, it is just for the experience," he says. "It is what you call an adventure."

Also traveling with the group is their dog Charley, two seven-year-old Belgian horses Frank and Pat who pull the wagon, and two quarter horses, which the travelers take turns riding.

A Canadian firm donated 50 rolls of 35 mm color film, which Robert says he hopes to put together with a taped narrative as a slide presentation, on his return home. After that, what will he do? "Who knows?" he replies.

Answers from the Bible by Pastor Don Peres

Q. Pastor Don, would you please explain from the Bible why God is against homosexuality.

A. The Bible has much to say about this problem that is growing in our nation today. God is very much against homosexuality but loves the homosexual as a person.

When God made the blueprint for marriage, He never intended it to be male with male, or female with female. In Genesis 2:18 "when God saw that it was not good for a man to be alone, He gave him a woman," not another man. Genesis 2:22

The first account of homosexuality or sodomy in the Bible is found in Genesis 13, where God opposes their acts. Genesis 13:13 says, "But the men of Sodom were wicked and sinners before the Lord exceedingly."

Genesis 18:20, God says their sin is very grievous.

Leviticus 18:22 says "Thou shalt not lie with mankind, as with womankind; it is an abomination."

Leviticus 20:13 says "If a man also lie with mankind, as he lieth with a woman, both of them have committed an abomination: they shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them."

Romans 1:27 says "and likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the women, burned in their lust one toward another; men with men, working that which is unseemly (shameful), and receiving in themselves that payment of their error which was due penalty."

I Timothy 1:10 (Living Bible) says "Yes, these laws are made to identify as sinners, all who are immoral and impure: homosexuals, kidnappers, liars, and all others who do things that contradict the glorious Good News of our blessed God, whose messenger I am."

I Corinthians 6:9 (Living Bible) says, "Those who live immoral lives, who are idol worshippers, adulterers or homosexuals — will have no share in His kingdom."

Homosexuals do not have to remain homosexuals all their life, there is hope, you can be changed if you repent and ask forgiveness.

I Corinthians 6:11 says, "and such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God."

If you have any questions that you would like to have answered from the Bible, please write Pastor Don Peres, Box 129, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Science Show Has 'Genesis' For Second Run

Science Museum of Minnesota's premiere Omnimax film, "Genesis", will be presented for a second run beginning Tuesday, October 27, in the William L. McKnight-3M Omnitheater, 10th and Wabasha, St. Paul.

The acclaimed "Genesis" is a flight through 20 billion years of earth history, simulating the creation of the universe, soaring over the earth, dropping down to the ocean floor, probing the volcanoes and rifts of the continents.

"Call it show-biz if you will, but the effects are so unforgettable that they are bound to stamp some science information into anyone's head", one reviewer said.

"Genesis" dramatizes science's new understanding of the earth through the theory of plate tectonics: our planet is not as fixed and rigid as it once seemed. The earth is in a constant state of change. The continents drift apart, running into one another, thrusting up mountains, breaking apart to form new oceans. The oceans are the birthplace of the continents.

Running time for "Genesis" is 50 minutes. It includes a 17-minute prologue produced by the Science Museum. The 33-minute film portion was produced by Graphic Films under the direction of George Casey, who also directed "The Eruption of Mount St. Helens" and "The Great Barrier Reef".

MSACVE Meet At Cass Lake Is Conducted

Minnesota state advisory council for vocational education (MSACVE) met at the Minnesota Chippewa Tribe council chambers in Cass Lake, recently.

Primary purposes of the meeting were to gain an insight into the vocational education program opportunities and particiapation in programs by members of the Minnesota Chippewa tribe, listen to update reports on the activities of the special activities, evaluation report and special populations committees, and to adopt a program of action to address the issue of the governance of vocational education in Minnesota. MSACVE will be presenting a position to the Minnesota state board for vocational education of governance in December.

Keynote speaker at the Cass Lake meeting was Dr. John J. Feda, Minnesota commissioner of education, who stressed the need for joint planning and cooperation among all segments of education to maintain quality services in light of financial restraints. Feda also suggested that the MSACVE prepare an impartial paper on the governance of vocational education in Minnesota.

Chairman of the MSACVE is Lyle C. Sorum, First Bank System, Minneapolis.

Farm Bureau Head Advises Spending Cuts

Reduction by the legislature in spending to solve the state's fiscal and budgetary problems was recommended Friday to Governor Al Quie by the president of the Minnesota Farm Bureau federation.

Merlyn Lokensgard, St. Peter area cash crop and livestock farmer, invited by Governor Quie to his capitol office for consultation, advised the chief executive that he felt it best "to make cutbacks in our spending until we get straightened around and income starts to come back in."

Lokensgard attributed the state's current financial dilemma to the "weakness in the national economy," coupled with what he said is "the fact that Minnesota hasn't changed with the trend of the economic times." As a result, said the Farm Bureau leader, "we're still spending as if outgo weren't ahead of income."

State spending curtailments would probably mean tax increases locally — "increases for some of us, especially property owners," Lokensgard said. However, he views that as a mixed blessing. Depending more heavily on property tax revenues for funding education and local government, he said, would provide opportunity for "more direct citizen participation and control" at the grassroots.

"If we had to pay directly for local services," said the farm organization spokesman, "maybe we would become more a part of the decisions. It would behoove up to police things."

10th Annual MCCL Meet November 7-8

Principal speaker at the 10th annual convention of Minnesota Citizens Concerned for Life (MCCL) will be Dr. Bernard Nathanson, one-time abortion rights crusader and former head of the western world's largest abortion clinic. Because he has become convinced of the humanity of the child before birth, Nathanson now urges a return to legal sanctions against abortion.

The convention, which is expected to draw several hundred participants from across the state, will be conducted at the St. Cloud Holiday Inn November 7-8. Nathanson will address those attending a Saturday evening banquet.

In conjunction with the convention, singer Jeff Steinberg, born with no arms and badly deformed legs, will present his Minnesota premiere performance at the St. Cloud Holiday Inn 8 p.m. November 6. Steinberg travels over 150,000 miles a year sharing his view of the positive value of life, and his appearance is particularly appropriate during this "International Year of Disabled Person."

Addressing conventioneers at a Saturday luncheon will be Ernest Ohlhoff, executive director of the national committee for a human life amendment, a Washington-based organization with grassroots affiliates in various states, that since 1973 has been working toward overturning the supreme court's abortion-on-demand decisions. Sunday luncheon speaker will be Jean Doyle, vice president of the national right to life, committee and executive director of Florida right to life.

Seminars dealing with the broad spectrum of bioethical issues of concern to prolifers will be offered throughout the weekend. Among the 18 seminars being offered will be those dealing with communicating the pro-life philosophy; infanticide, conducted by Dr. Norman Virnig, head of St. Paul-Ramsey Hospital's neo-natal intensive care unit; child abuse and the abortion connection, conducted by black social worker Erma Craven; euthanasia and numerous others.

A resource center will display a wide variety of printed and audio-visual materials and a number of professionally produced pro-life films will be shown during the convention. The MCCL lifemobile, a mobile education unit used as a model by a number of other state right-to-life groups, will be on display.

Advance registration is necessary for the luncheons and banquet. For information contact Bev Voigt, R.R. 2, Box 419, Sauk Rapids, MN 56379 (612) 253-1441. Registration for seminars only opens at 7:30 a.m. November 7 and a general session is scheduled for 9 p.m.

Steinberg concert is open to the public and handicapped people are especially welcome. Tickets are available at the door for a requested donation of $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for those aged 6-12.

Fletcher Sells Management In C of C Role

142 institutes for organization management, he could be expected to have grown a little weary. On the contrary, it seems that each session breathes new life into the slight frame of the soft-spoken Georgia native.

"Boredom is self-inflicted," he insisted about keeping his enthusiasm. "I approach each of the sessions as if I had never done one before. Most people talk to impress themselves; you know that. I don't use 25-cent words for nickel people."

Fletcher prides himself in being quick to read an audience. "Most of the time I deal with groups that range from smart smart to dumb dumb," he said. "I have to work to the middle. And I make good mistakes. I make 'em, but I learn from them. If you watch an audience's eyes you can learn whether you're getting through to them or not. You can't always judge an audience by outward appearances."

He told of one man in particular at the recent program who sat with head on hand and a changeless expression throughout the presentation, never even cracking a smile. After the talk was over, he came up to Fletcher and said, "Man, you are funny!" "He was laughing inside," Fletcher said. "He just never showed it on the outside."

Management functions remain the same regardless of the type of business or organization involved, the U.S. chamber representative said. "We teach management. When you get to the use of your work gangs — which in the chamber of commerce are called committees — the motivation factor has to change because you can't fire them if they don't do the hob. You can't even raise their pay if they do a good job. You can't command the people in a chamber of commerce to do the job, so you have to use intrinsic motivation."

Fletcher explained this by stating that it is necessary to find out the interests of people — not necessarily their business, but their interest — and then showing them how a job which must be done will benefit them.

In his work with the chamber of commerce group, Fletcher asked them to list "things that are really bugging you". From the items listed, he asked them to consider what type of chamber programs were necessary to address those concerns.

And he cautioned that "getting more jobs" should not be the task of a chamber of commerce. That's not the big problem, Fletcher said, it's the end result. "You get jobs when you find the kind of industry which fits your community, when you have government which permits business to operate and make a profit, when you have good schools producing the kind of workers that industry needs in its plants, where you have recreation and other things that people want."

Years ago, Fletcher noted, chambers of commerce hired failures as managers because they would work cheap. In his first class in organization management the average age was about 45 and there was one woman attending. Chamber executives attending the institutes now are younger, smarter as well as better educated, and about 60 per cent women, he noted.

He suggested that businessmen wear their business hats into chamber of commerce work. "Too often people become involved in voluntary organizations and leave their management knowledge back at the store," Fletcher said. "We have to make the decision to do something as an organization, then get the people to implement the activity."

"I like a sales person who will let me buy, rather than trying to sell me something, and a good sales person will do that. In management of a voluntary organization, we must determine what product (program) will sell by assessing the interest in it."

Fletcher said he didn't know if there is another motivational aspect other than "what's in it for me?" "People respond to two things — fear or love," he said. "Am I going to survive in my business? Am I going to be able to provide for my family? Am I going to be happy here?"

Fletcher attributes his ability to last in his field to being able to laugh at himself. And he listed four basics that most people need for a happy existence.

"You need a faith fit to live by, a self fit to live with, a work fit to live for and someone to love and be loved by," he said.

There's enough food for thought in that statement alone to keep a person thinking for a good long while.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

As retired individuals and as life-long residents of Thief River Falls, we would like to state a few of our opinions regarding the current teacher's strike.

We believe that teachers have the right to a salary they can live on. One they can live on for twelve months, without looking for part-time work outside the profession. We have a hard time believing that a person who has been a teacher in Thief River Falls for twenty years is making just $20,000 — even the UPS drivers make more than that after a few years on the job.

Perhaps taxes may have to be increased. We are ready to support that kind of move, even though we live on a fixed income. We support the system of free public education as the backbone of a strong America. As youngsters we were able to take advantage of a good school system, a good education and full life. Hopefully, our children can say the same.

Management of our school system is the job of the school board. Over the past few years we have seen a steady deterioration of our school buildings, our sports program and the quality of education. We regret we cannot call that "good" management. Too much has been spent on legal fees, advertising, telephones and the like. That money was our taxes — we wish those funds would have been spent on teachers, salaries, books, etc. The purpose of the school is education — isn't it?

Sincerely,
Ken and Beth Halldin

Hints For Homeowners

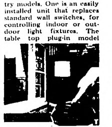
Going away for a long weekend or longer vacation? It's a good idea to give your home that "lived-in" look.

Some things are dead giveaways: mail collecting in the box, newspapers and circulars piled high on the porch, an uncut lawn or unshoveled snow . . . even a light in one room of the house, left burning day and night. They all say: "Come burgle me."

Planning can lessen the chances of being burglarized or vandalized while you're away. Of course, it's a good idea to notify police of the dates you'll be gone and to temporarily discontinue delivery of your mail. There is also a good way to fool the burglar with lights.

To accomplish this, there are a variety of timer devices on the market. One that's unique is the new Night Sentry, a computerized electronic timer, which can shed new light on security. It can be easily programmed so a light goes on and off at varying intervals, confusing the burglar into believing there's a whole family of folks at home.

There are two Night Sentry models. One is an easily installed unit that replaces standard wall switches, for controlling indoor or outdoor light fixtures. The table top plug-in model (shown here) controls lamps, and has an energy-saving built-in dimmer. Both models can be used as standard "on-off" switches without disturbing the memory. Night Sentry, available at leading hardware, department and chain stores, and home centers. Permits up to 48 "on-off" settings in a 24-hour period. They can really turn a burglar off your home.



A new electronic timer can foil the unfriendly neighborhood burglar.

Chief's Corner

by Ken Froschheiser
Chief of Police
Thief River Falls, MN.

Once again, winter is upon us and our thoughts turn to winter storms and safe driving habits. We should remind ourselves of the hazards we encounter with snow and freezing rain.

Last year the department began enforcement of calendar parking during winter months and we will continue this year. One of the best safety procedures we have is to ensure proper removal of snow from our streets. It is imperative for the street department to have clear streets in order to operate their equipment and do a good job. In these times of economic problems, removing snow in a quick, efficient manner is a huge savings for all of us.

On November 2 the department will begin issuing warning notices for violations of the calendar parking ordinance. On November 30 the department will begin issuing parking citations for violations. When snow removal is in process any vehicle found parked in violation of calendar parking will be towed.

We ask all residents to comply with the ordinance and request that you instruct any persons staying with you who are unaware of the ordinance about calendar parking. If you are unsure, please call the law enforcement center at 681-6161 to ask about information regarding the ordinance.

Calendar parking: No parking on avenues (North & South), Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. and No parking on streets (East & West), Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m.

New Farm Bill Minimum Says Stangeland

"On the basis of the House's action on the 1981 farm bill, I believe that the final legislation we send to President Reagan will provide our farmers with a bare minimum of what they need for the next four years," Congressman Arlan Stangeland said recently.

Differences between House and Senate versions will be settled by a joint conference committee in the next few weeks. "The House version is far better for farmers than the Senate proposal," Congressman Stangeland said. "If we can get the Senate's sugar program into the final version, I think we will come up with a fair and equitable program."

The farm bill, which sets the shape of federal farm programs for the next four years, has been the subject of heated debate in the House for the past three weeks.

"There's no question that Congress needs to pass the strongest possible farm bill," Stangeland said. "For two years, our farmers have been crippled by effects of the Soviet grain embargo, double-digit interest rates, inflation and declining farm prices. But in a year when we are trying to reduce the federal deficit, it is very difficult to get a fair and reasonable farm bill through Congress," he added. "What a lot of these urban representatives have to realize is that farm programs have already taken their cuts during the past 10 years."

Since 1972, federal funds for farm programs have declined by 48 per cent, while other programs have risen by as much as 779 per cent, he said.

"Of course, the best thing that we can do for farmers and all Americans is to get inflation and these interest rates down," Congressman Stangeland said, "and part of that effort includes fiscal restraint. So we had to work for the fairest farm bill possible while staying within limits set for the budget."

Stangeland noted that the House version includes:

—Target price of $4.20 per bushel of wheat, 20 cents higher than the Senate's proposal;

—Provision for higher percentages of parity for dairy products during the second, third and fourth years of the farm bill; and,

—Better target prices and loan levels for producers of corn and other feed grains.

"Because the Senate version already has as sugar program that is identical to the proposal which was barely defeated in the House, I believe that a fair sugar program will be included in the bill which will be sent to President Reagan," he said.

"I am also pleased that the House added my proposal for a Commodity Credit corporation loan program for sunflower growers," Stangeland said. "This program will provide growers with interest-bearing loans of $8 per hundredweight for their oil sunflower seeds. These loans will provide some needed insurance for sunflower growers if there is a sudden disruption in their market, such as the grain handlers' strike in Duluth two years ago," he continued. "Last year we exported over $350 million worth of these seeds to Europe. Since 90 per cent of these seeds are grown in the Red River valley, this program will have a positive effect on our local economy.

Stangeland pointed out that this farm bill is not just for farmers. "Our federal farm programs help to maintain a steady supply of food at stable prices, which helps to keep inflation down," he said. "And lower inflation helps farmers and consumers alike."

"Another thing to remember is that our farm products are the most important item we have for sale in the international market," he continued. "These food sales improve our balance of trade and ease the impact of the billions we put out for imported oil. Other countries aren't buying our cars, our televisions or our clothing," he concluded. "They're buying over $40 billion of our wheat, corn, sunflowers and other food products every year. And that's another reason for supporting a strong farm sector of our national economy."

Mock Pineapple From Zucchini Squash Unsafe

Recipes for mock pineapple made from zucchini squash are currently circulating throughout the state. A University of Minnesota extension food microbiologist suggests, however, that both the recipes and any jars of the pineapple-zucchini mixture already made from the recipe should be discarded.

Edmund A. Zottola of the university's department of food science and nutrition says the recipes call for grated zucchini, pineapple juice and other fruit juices and flavorings. The boiling juices are poured over zucchini in canning jars and the jars are then processed in a boiling water bath.

Zottola says there is potential for safety problems with such mixtures. Research at Michigan state university suggests that the high water content of the zucchini can dilute acidity of the canned product during storage. If this happens, mock pineapple could become a medium for the growth of dangerous micro organisms.

Because there has been little research done on such recipes, Zottola says there is no way to be sure the product is safe to eat. He suggests that if you have such recipes, do not use them. If you have already canned mock pineapple, discard it without tasting.

Mikado Players Display Keen Stage Presence

by David Morken

About 100 years ago in England Sir William Gilbert, trained in law, and Arthur Sullivan, a composer of serious music, joined their talents to produce a series of farcical operettas. The most successful was "The Mikado", the first offering of this season's concert series. Together they formed works parodying politics in particular and human foibles in general, then wrapped it all in a genial cynicism that still leaves contemporary audiences laughing.

This is the third operetta that has played here in recent years — all successes and all produced and directed by Robert Turoff. Mr. Turoff has a remarkable talent for reducing full-scale stage productions — piano dubbing for orchestra, actors doubling some roles, minimal sets, inexpensive but effective costumes — yet conjuring up highly entertaining productions. To do this one must have performers with a keen stage sense.

"The Mikado" cast displayed this as they romped through the hilarious choreographic blocking and actions with precise timing yet made it appear fun and spontaneous. Keeping a fine line between the characters' ludicrous inanities and the dramatic flow is a test of artistry and taste and one in which Saturday night's production excelled.

In the leading role of Ko-Ko, B.G. Gustafson, with his clarity of diction, more than met the demands of Gilbert's fast-paced, occasionally tongue-twisting and usually subtle lyrics.

In addition to his very attractive tenor voice, Robert Hildreth's convincing naivete lived up to the sound of his stage name — Nanki-Poo, the romantic lead. Nanki-Poo's innocently vain beloved, Yum-Yum (and she was that, but no dumb-dumb) was ably played by Sandra Holland.

The entire cast portrayed and projected their characters with the needed whimsical understanding even though the treble voices were frequently difficult to understand. Also, by locating the piano upstage, the accompaniment seemed muffled and lacked balance with the singing, especially when in ensemble.

However, both during and following the performance the audience's reaction was enthusiastically positive. So, after a third Robert Turoff production, let's hope we can have another one soon.

Land O' Lakes Midland Okay Merger Plans

Boards of directors of Midland Cooperatives, Inc. and Land O'Lakes, Inc., both regional cooperatives headquartered in the Twin Cities area, met jointly recently and approved final plans for consolidating the operations of the two organizations.

Merger discussions between Midland and Land O'Lakes were first announced August 21. Since that time, management and committees of both boards of directors have been preparing discussing concepts of merger. A draft plan of merger was presented to and approved by the full boards of both organizations September 17.

Final plan as endorsed by both boards will also require approval by the membership of both Midland and Land O'Lakes. This membership vote is scheduled for November 30. In the meantime, informational meetings will be conducted with members of both cooperatives to permit thorough discussion of the proposed consolidation.

In a joint statement, Delbert Burns, Wausau, WI, chairman of the Midland board, and Claire Sandness, LaMoure, ND, chairman of the Land O'Lakes board, said, "the boards of directors that we represent have voted unanimously to approve the merger plan and we strongly recommend that the memberships also approve. Our studies indicate that we can effect important economies and improve services for the members of both organizations by working together as a combined organization dedicated to improving the financial position of our members."

Midland, based in Columbia Heights, is a regional wholesale organization owned by more than 650 community cooperatives in the Upper Midwest. Sales in 1980 were $523.5 million.

Land O'Lakes, based in Arden Hills, is owned by nearly 950 local farm supply and dairy processing cooperatives and more than 10,000 farmer stockholders. Total farmer membership exceeds 250,000. Sales in 1980 were $3.3 billion, $700 million of which comes from the sale of feed, seed, fertilizers and other farm supplies. In addition to its farm supply business, Land O'Lakes is also a major marketer of packaged foods processed from milk, beef, soybeans, and turkey produced by its members.

Both organizations have a similar cooperative philosophy and a common membership territory. If the members vote for the merger it will become effective January 1, 1982.

Great American Cupcakes Start With Cocoa

Fudgy chocolate cupcakes, with a glass of ice-cold milk, might just be the all-time favorite after-school snack. It has made going "back to the books" a lot more palatable for generations of American kids. Here's a streamlined version of this popular classic that tastes super rich and chocolatey with moist, delicate texture. And since these cupcakes are super simple to put together, older children can have fun making them—less work for mother—with minimal supervision. Start with a base of versatile unsweetened cocoa—chocolate in very concentrated form so flavor will be robust. Cocoa blends readily for smoother batters, another boon to beginning cooks. Measure and mix it in, right from the can, with no messy premelting. And here's an important lesson in kitchen economy they're never too young to learn—cocoa helps save money, two ways: it costs less per ounce than baking chocolate and, 4½ ounces of cocoa goes as far as the 8-ounce bar. Swirl cooled cupcakes with cocoa buttercream or fudge frosting...then let the children create colorful "faces" with sprinkles and tinted coconut.

QUICK 'N' EASY CHOCOLATE CUPCAKES

2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
1½ cups granulated sugar
⅔ cup Hershey's Cocoa
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt cup shortening
2 eggs
¾ cup milk
½ cup hot water
1½ teaspoons vanilla

Heat oven to 350°. Line 30 ungreased muffin cups (2½ inches in diameter) with paper bake cups. In large bowl of electric mixer combine flour, sugar, cocoa, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Add shortening, eggs, milk, water and vanilla. Beat mixture 1 minute on low speed, scraping sides and bottom of bowl with rubber scraper. Turn speed to medium; beat 3 minutes or until mixture is creamy smooth. Spoon batter into lined muffin pans, filling each about half full. Bake 15 to 20 minutes. Press center of cupcake lightly at minimum baking time—cake springs back when it's done. Remove cupcakes from oven. Lift each cupcake out carefully or turn pan upside down to remove cupcakes. Turn them right side up on wire rack to cool.

Traffic Flow Plans Are Slowed At Council Meet

Opposition to both the traffic flow plan and the Highway 59 frontage road plan (as proposed) was expressed to the Thief River Falls City Council at their regular meeting Tuesday night in council chambers at city auditorium.

Captain Lloyd Rudd, representing the Safety Council, presented their findings regarding a proposed traffic flow plan for the city. The plan had been presented to council in September, and at that time the Safety Council had been asked to gather public opinion on it. Rudd commented that they had received "very little opposition", noting that the majority of comments received had been supportive. He said, "The only thing that we can conclude is that it is the desire of the citizens of our city that this plan be approved."

A delegation of citizens from the vicinity of First and Kendall presented opposition to removing the four-way stop at that intersection, which was suggested by the plan. Dick Tyler, 110 N. Kendall, commented that if their only concern was to speed up traffic the four way should be removed, "but if you are concerned with pedestrians and concerned with human life, you will leave the four way stop," he said.

Donovan Liden who owns a store near the intersection, noted that on a summer Sunday he had counted upwards of 1500 people in his store, with about half of them children. "They're crossing that street, a lot of them," he said. "I think this is where you should put your consideration. It's not the fenderbenders," he added, "better we should have 20 fenderbenders on that corner than one little kid killed."

Other persons commenting expressed concerns for pedestrian traffic, noting that people were crossing the street where the stop signs were.

Council took the report under advisement, but action was delayed until the November meeting.

David Jansen, owner of T-59 Motel, presented council with a petition in opposition to the design proposed last week by Minnesota Department of Transportation (MnDOT) for the construction of frontage roads along Highway 59 at the south edge of the city. He noted that all the property owners along the affected area had signed the petition except the owner of the Holiday Motel and two others who were not available. The petition stated in part, that the proposed plan, with its "deletion of access roads to our business community would be detrimental to most, and devastating to others."

Jensen suggested some alternatives to the design, including widening the highway, incorporating a left turn lane, traffic lights, pedestrian crosswalks, and a reduction in the speed limit. He said that he would like to work with MnDOT or the city council on a revised plan.

Mayor Carlson noted that since the hearing last week, opposition had surfaced from other areas in the community due to the costs involved in the project. After considerable discussion, he commented that he would like to "move ahead as quickly as possible" to come up with a plan that would be acceptable to those involved, and suggested that should an opening on the planning commission become available consideration be given someone from the area.

L.E. Vandeventer, resident manager of the Riverside Terrace apartments, approached council with a request that the city vacate a 10 foot strip of land between the apartments and the Medical office building. Discussion ensued over what rights the city might give up in such a case. City Engineer Dave Kildahl indicated that the area was set aside as a public access. Vandeventer noted that drivers were using it to avoid stopping at the intersection. Attorney Robert Wurst gave an opinion that the property could be vacated without giving up easements for maintenance of utilities. A hearing was set for November 24 to discuss notice of intent to vacate.

City Planner Jack Quinlivan presented an estimate of costs to remodel the old Library building for use as a senior citizen center. He noted that cost of installing an elevator was considerably higher than originally figured. The figure estimated was a total of $90,000. He noted that an alternative idea for installing ramps for wheelchairs was not feasible due to lack of space, and asked whether he should pursue the matter further, with ideas such as electric lifts, etc. After some discussion the matter was tabled.

Considerable discussion was generated about an operation and maintenance agreement for county Ditch 70. The consensus of opinion was that the city was obligated for the maintenance of "historic flows" into the ditch between the sewage lagoon and the river because of agreements made with the county at the time the lagoons were built. A move was made to enter into an agreement with the Pennington County Soil and Water Conservancy District for the maintenance.

In other business the council:

—set salary for election judges at $3.50 per hour during normal hours, and $4 per hour after midnight.

—heard City Attorney Wurst state that he had been the only person expressing opposition to a rate increase by Inter-City Gas at a public hearing. He stated "there was no great public uprising."

—awarded a bid of $5,256 to Brodin Sheet Metal Incorporated for installation of air conditioning for the offices in the City Auditorium.

—referred a proposed new airport noise permit rule from Minnesota Pollution Control Agency to the airport committee.

—heard, in regard to questions on the durability of an aluminum culvert to be installed on Barzen Avenue, that the culvert was constructed of "marine grade aluminum alloy" rather than ordinary aluminum, and should prove durable.

—set a hearing for November 10 to review the revised assessment roll for the Fifth Street East sanitary sewer project.

—turned a request to use the Auditorium for a dance from three high school seniors, Jeff Moser, Kim Moran and Robin Dallmann, over the building committee. The students asked to use the building Friday night, and were told to get signatures of at least three adult couples who would chaperone the dance before permission would be granted.

—set a policy that the city would pay the employer's share of basic Public Employees Retirement Association (PERA) fund requirements in cases where an employee's top five years of income would be adversely affected by paying workmen's compensation. The top five years of an employee's income is used to figure his retirement income. The policy was established to protect employees who might be injured shortly before retiring, since the city does not normally pay into the PERA fund while paying workmen's compensation.

The meeting was adjourned to discuss litigation on possible lawsuits regarding the painting of the water tower and action resulting from a Sunrise Market claim against the city.

Council will next meet at 5:15 p.m. November 4 for purposes of canvassing election ballots.

W. Anderson Featured In MN Program Nov. 4

Can Minnesota, which was hailed a few years ago by Time magazine as the "State that Works," still claim that title?

Former Minnesota governor Wendell Anderson will be featured in a "Perspectives from our Past" program which addresses that question November 4 in the city council chambers at Moorhead city hall at 7:30 p.m.

Anderson will be joined by fellow panelists Professor Arthur Naftalin, Minneapolis; Professor Harding Noblitt, Concordia college, Moorhead; and former Minnesota legislator Calvin Larson, Fergus Falls.

Plans for the evening's program include a showing of the television documentary on Anderson and his term, the panel discussion, a question-and-answer session with the audience, and a premiere showing of a documentary on the late Floyd B. Olson, governor of Minnesota from 1931 to 1936.

Program is free and open to the public, and is one of a series of seven regional meetings featuring former Minnesota governors and funded by a grant from the Minnesota humanities commission.

Northern Lights library network (a multi-county, multi-type library cooperative in northwest Minnesota), the friends of the Moorhead public library, the Clay county historical society, and the Moorhead league of women voters have joined with the Minnesota historical society, the Hubert H. Humphrey institute for public affairs, University media resources, and the Minnesota association of library friends to sponsor this event.

Cooperating libraries in this area include the Northwest regional library and Northland community college library.

Juveniles Have Legal Rights If Stopped

Adults have legal rights when they are stopped or arrested by the police. Juveniles (young persons under the age of 18) also have legal rights.

Junveniles who are approached, questioned, stopped, detained or arrested by the police should stay cool and not panic, run or resist. Such actions could later be used against them.

Police have the right to stop and question juveniles whom they suspect have done something illegal; this is not the same as an arrest. Police also have the right to "pat down" a juvenile whom they suspect is carrying a weapon; this is not a search.

If police do anything more than these two things, such as fully search, physically abuse, or arrest a juvenile, that young person should ask for and get an attorney. In such a case he or she does not have to answer any questions — and should not — other than his or her own name and address, until his or her attorney comes.

(This information by the Community Legal Education Program of Central Minnesota Legal Services is meant to help you learn your rights, but does not provide complete answers to individual legal problems. If you need legal help, see your family attorney or call your legal services office which serves low-income persons.)

Adventists, Pathfinders Visit Oct. 31

This Saturday evening, the children from the Seventh-Day Adventist school and Pathfinder club will be knocking on doors in the Thief River Falls area between 5:30 and 7 p.m.

The activity is not a trick, and the children do not expect a treat, according to a recent news release about the event. Instead, this is an annual visit to collect canned goods to be distributed in food baskets at Christmas time.

Avenues to be visited this year include Kneale, Merriam, Crocker, Tindolph, Kendall, Markley and St. Paul.

Any help is appreciated and a thank-you is extended to those who responded in the past. Those not contacted who would like to help in the project may call 681-3332.

Area Entrants In Sunflower Bowl Pageant

Sixteen homecoming queens have been entered by their respective area high schools in the 14th annual Miss Sunflower Bowl queen pageant at the University of Minnesota Technical College-Crookston (UMC) Saturday (October 31. Celebration is the longest-standing event that has been observed without interruption in the history of UMC.

Among 16 girls vying for the title of 1981 Queen of Sunflower Bowl will be the following area young ladies: Tamie Anderson, Newfolden (Marshall County Central); Lori Beyer, Red Lake Falls; Robyn Dallman, Thief River Falls; LaRae Franklund, Plummer; and Shelly O'Neill, Oklee.

A panel of three judges will conduct informal interviews with each candidate Saturday morning. This year's interviewers will be Mrs. Gerald (Colleen) DeMartin, Ray Ecklund, and Mrs. Wes (Charlette) Plummer. Criteria used to evaluate candidates and select a titlist are, in order of priority, personality, poise, responsiveness to extemporaneous questions and personal charm.

Traditional Sunflower Bowl queen's luncheon will be at noon with Mike Dahlgren, vice president of Dahlgren and Company, as master of ceremonies. Also featured on the luncheon program will be UMC Provost Stanley D. Sahlstrom, a UMC student senate representative, and a representative from Town and Country for Women.

Identity of the new queen will be revealed during halftime ceremonies of the UMC Trojans vs. Hibbing Cardinals football game, which kicks off at 1:30 p.m. on the UMC gridiron. The 1981 winner will be crowned by the UMC Homecoming queen. A floral bouquet will be presented to the new queen by Dr. Sahlstrom.

After the game the Sahlstroms will host a party in their home to salute the queen and her court and other members of her entourage.

Director To Health Dep't. Office Named

Arnold Rosenthal has been named to replace Jean Donaldson as director of the state health department's office of health facility complaints (OHFC).

Rosenthal had served as acting director of OHFC since May. Donaldson left the office in January, to take a position with the Minnesota Veterans' home.

OHFC, which has been in operation since 1977, handles complaints from the general public and other sources about state-licensed health care facilities. Complaints investigated by the office involve facilities such as hospitals, nursing homes, "boarding care" homes, and "supervised living" facilities, as well as health professionals who serve the residents of such facilities.

OHFC investigators can enter a facility at will, without prior authorization, to investigate a complaint. Persons with complaints can call the office collect at (512) 296-5562.

OHFC's role has expanded since Minnesota's vulnerable adults act went into effect last January, according to Rosenthal. Since May, the office has been responsible for investigating complaints of abuse and neglect under the new law, in cooperation with county government, law enforcement officials, physicians, care facilities licensed by the state department of public welfare, and other responsible parties.

New arrangement has "stimulated more reporting of the problems," Rosenthal said. As a result, the workload at the office has increased, and the complaints tend to be more serious in nature, he said.

Church Youth To Collect For UNICEF

Middle school and high school youth from Trinity Lutheran and United Methodist churches of Thief River Falls will be out trick-or-treating for UNICEF Halloween night. They will wear official UNICEF volunteer name tags, and bear official UNICEF collection boxes in which gifts should be deposited.

UNICEF, the United Nation's children's fund, is working in over 100 countires to bring clean water, health care, good nutrition and basic education to imperiled children. A $1 donation buys four clinical thermometers for a health center in Guatemala; $5 stocks a pond in Bangladesh with baby fish for potential protein supply for an entire village; $8 buys a large chalkboard for a classroom in Kenya; and $22 provides a soil-and-water testing kit to insure that rural water supplies in Indonesia are safe for drinking.

After collecting for UNICEF, the youth will return to Trinity Lutheran church for games, refreshments and a pumpkin carving contest. Youth from both participating congregations may bring friends along. Wearing Halloween costumes is optional. Those desiring to participate in the pumpkin carving contest should bring along a pumpkin to carve.

'Once Upon A Classic'

'A Tale Of Two Cities' Next On PBS

The Emmy Award-winning Once Upon a Classic dramatization of Charles Dickens' timeless tragedy, "A Tale of Two Cities," will be featured in six exciting episodes on PBS this November and December (check local listings for times and dates in your area).

Once Upon a Classic, which is presented by WQED/Pittsburgh with a grant from McDonald's, is hosted by Bill Bixby. The "Tale of Two Cities" series was co-produced by the BBC and Time-Life Television.

"A Tale of Two Cities" blends the most recognizable elements of Dickens' artistry — mystery, intrigue, love and honor — and puts them against the tumultuous backdrop of the French Revolution. The familiar tale unwinds in Paris, where an entire society collapses and "The Terror" sends thousands to the guillotine; and in London, where the masses watch with horror the vengeful slaughter of the French aristocracy.

"A Tale of Two Cities," Charles Dickens' classic story of the French Revolution, will be presented in six episodes on PBS. Shown above: Paul Shelley in a dual role as Charles Darnay and Sidney Carton, both of whom are in love with Lucie Manette (Sally Osborn).

During the past five years, the Once Upon a Classic series has received numerous awards for outstanding children's programming. In addition, the series and McDonald's have received four citations for excellence from Action for Children's Television, and George Foster Peabody Award.

Other classics scheduled for this season are: "Black Island" (beginning December 12); "Glitterball" (Beginning December 26); "The Talisman" (beginning January 20); "The Boy With Two Heads" (beginning March 6); and "Night Ferry" (beginning April 24).

Tom Yelle, known to many area sports fans as a contributing writer for the "Let's Play Hockey" publication, covers the athletic scene for the Anoka County Union and was caught up in the controversy surrounding the much-publicized teachers strike in the Anoka'Coon Rapids school district. His thoughts on the future of athletic programs in the schools provide interesting reading:

"Already this high school sports season, there have been changes and circumstances which have been foreign to most who live in this section of the North Suburban area.

Before the season even started, several of the local secondary schools imposed an athletic participation fee to help cover expenses. Then, of course, the recent teachers strike wiped out a chunk of District 11 high school games and matches, something which perhaps was predicted, but not totally expected by the athletes or public.

To some, those changes and circumstances were traumatic experiences; to others, just a couple of things which were taken in stride in the same vein as rising gas prices.

To all, however, it should be noted, more changes and new influences probably will be coming.

Whatever one's view on the teachers strike, it should have enlightened everyone to the face that high school sports is no longer a sacred bastion of our soceity. The strike and ensuing cancellation of schedules proved that at a moment's notice, for the good of the education part of an educational system, the extracurriculars (as they are officially termed) can be dropped.

Whatever one's view of an entire high school athletic system, whether it be a general or specific interest of all sports of just a few, eyes should be kept on the status of swimming.

Next month a recommendation will be made to drop the Minnesota State High School League sponsorship of both boys and girls swimming from its list of programs. Although the decidated high school swimming coaches will argue vehemently, it is felt by the league and several schools with weak or non-existent swimming programs, that this sport is nonessential, a duplication of efforts put forth by the statewide network of amateur swim clubs.

In reality, however, it is a way to cut back in times of a sagging economy and tight money.

Because swimming already has the non-school framework to continue as a sport, it could be cut loose and perhaps survive. And if the economy continues to sag and money becomes even tighter so that an athletic program will be even more expensive in the future, swimming will not be alone.

Take hockey for example. And everyone knows how expensive that sport is to run.

The non-school framework is already in place for kids to continue in hockey if it were dropped as a high school sport. In fact, the Minnesota Amateur Hockey Association, a branch of the larger Amateur Hockey Association of the United States, has the best stepladder program for athletes for any sport.

First there is the Squirt level, then the Pee-Wee, the Bantam, the Midget, the Junior and finally the Senior. High school hockey usually intercepts players between the late Bantam and early Junior years. If it became too expensive for an educational system to operate, hockey players (and their parents) could pay their own way through the entire Bantam, Midget and Junior levels just as they have done through the Squirts and Pee-Wees.

Other sports could be affected, too. Girls gymnastics could be left to the existing amateur clubs or organizations and so could wrestling. Baseball and softball, two sports perhaps more closely associated with summer, could be left to outside groups.

Of course football and basketball, two sports which are among the most popular in terms of participation throughout Minnesota high schools, will perhaps be among the last to be dropped if and when education decides to get out of the athletic business. Because there is no real existing framework to pick up those sports where high school programs could leave off, it would be much tougher to set them adrift.

Actually, it will be tough to set any high school sport adrift by those coaches, athletic directors and administrators who see and know the value of athletics in relation to education.

But unless the economy suddenly and dramatically improves over the next several years, nothing is certain. High school athletics as we have learned, are no longer sacred."

+Detroit Lakes quarterback Dan Douglas was 14-for-20 passing for 174 yards, passed for two touchdowns and ran for another in leading the Lakers to a 26-13 football victory over Wadena Friday. Staples defeated Park Rapids 26-7 that same night, setting up a Mid-State Conference championship showdown Thursday between the Lakers and Cardinals (both Thief River Falls foes earlier this year) at Detroit Lakes. The winner will face the Heart O' Lakes Conference champion — Barnesville or Breckenridge — in postseason Class A playoff action.

+Former Crookston Central and University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) hockey player Jim Clauson has been named hockey coach at UMC.

+Fisher will leave the Agassiz Valley Conference and join the North Tri County Conference for the 1982 football season to once again make the latter a ten-team league. Mentor and Erskine announced earlier they planned to have a cooperative football program next fall.

+Recent Bemidji vs. Moorhead high school football game marked the first time the Lumberjacks and Spuds met on the gridiron since 1956. Bemidji discontinued the six-year-old series back then to pick up Fergus Falls, which at the time was considered the stronger team. Moorhead's football fortunes have risen steadily since then, however, as the school became the largest in the area. But enrollment declines in recent years left the Spuds' school figures just 200 over the Lumberjacks.

Skippers Finish Regular Season With 9-0 Record

Carrying the ball just eight times, Jeff Cwikla still rushed for 157 yards and scored two touchdowns as Middle River handled Grygla-Gatzke 46-0 to wrap up a perfect 9-0 North Tri County Conference championship football schedule. It marks the first unbeaten season for the Skippers since 1963.

While the conference title and unbeaten season are secured, the 1981 season isn't over yet for the Skippers who will venture into post-season football playoff action for the first time Tuesday in a Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) nine-man qualifying game against either Argyle or Oslo, who face each other Friday. Tuesday's game will have a 3 p.m. kickoff time at Middle River.

The Skippers, who locked up at least a share of the North Tri County Conference title and a playoff berth a week earlier with an emotional 36-12 victory over defending conference champion McIntosh-Winger, were not at the top of their game yesterday at Grygla, admitted Middle River coach Eldon Sparby. "We played very uninspired football," he said, knowing the playoff game was uppermost in the minds of most.

Still, Middle River managed to blank Grygla-Gatzke after shutting off several scoring threats by the Eagles in the first half, and put two touchdowns on the board through each of the first three quarters.

Cwikla scored on runs of 23 and 8 yards; Mike Peterson scored on runs of 3 and 5 yards; and Doug Kilen, Steve Bengtson and Kevin McKeever all went in from one yard out. Bengtson finished with 94 yards on 12 carries.

Possibility of finishing as high as third place in the nine-team Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) Northern Division standings will be the incentive Saturday when the Northland community college football team closes out its 1981 season with a 1:30 p.m. game at Brainerd.

A victory over the Red Raiders would give the Northmen a 4-4 season record — their best finish in six years of intercollegiate football — and assure them of at least a tie for fourth place in the tight Northern Division, with thrid place as an added appetizer. But at the same time, a loss Saturday could find the Northmen plummetting all the way into last place.

And Northland has never beaten Brainerd, losing by a 39-0 margin in 1976; 49-19 in 1977; 28-6 in 1978; 32-28 in 1979; and 7-2 in 1980.

The Red Raiders, like the Northmen, are locked into six-team middle-of-the-pack scramble behind co-division leaders Fergus Falls and Golden Valley Lutheran, who meet this week. Brainerd is 3-4 for the year, 2-4 in the Northern Division, with wins over the Bemidji State University junior varsity 34-7, Hibbing 17-7 and University of Minnesota-Crookston 27-6. Losses came at the hands of Golden Valley Lutheran 19-6, Fergus Falls 34-18, Itasca 35-14 and Mesabi 27-12 last week.

Meanwhile, Northland's 3-4 season and division record includes wins over UMC 26-13, Hibbing 9-0 and Itasca 16-14 last week, and losses to Golden Valley Lutheran 19-7, Mesabi 15-0, Vermilion 7-6 and Fergus Falls 16-0.

Playing just an eight-game schedule, Northland's season ends Saturday when the Northmen draw the bye for the following week. Rest of the Northern Division teams filled out nine-game schedules by booking junior varsity programs from four-year schools earlier and will complete their MJCAA schedules next week.

"This is the first time since I've been here that I don't want the season to end," quipped Northland coach John Helley, who is in his second year as head coach and his third year on the staff. A close-knit, enthusiastic team with a winning attitude, he said, makes it hard to end the season. But a nonconference game at the end of the MJCAA schedule would have been anticlimatic, he said, so a ninth game wasn't added.

Northland players and coaches have their sights set on a 4-4 finish.

"We're really looking forward to this game," confirmed Helley. "Our goal has been 4-4 for the year," he admitted, figuring 6-2 would have been within reach with a break or two. "But being realsitic, we've been looking at 4-4."

Northland's line-up, particularly on offense, will still be a patch-work affair because of injuries and absences. But that offense finally put some points on the board last week after producing just one touchdown the previous four starts and will be on the field at the start Saturday.

That'll find Baudette sophomores Dave Furbish and Mike Punton at quarterback and halfback, respectively; either sophomore Mike Busse (Mahnomen) or freshman Troy Levenhagen (Lake Bronson) at fullback; freshman Scott Wiebolt (Thief River Falls) at tight end; sophomore Jeff Westberg (Warren) at slotback; and sophomore Ken Crouch (Inkster, Mich.) at wide receiver.

Furbish started at quarterback in place of Wiebolt, the team's No. 1 quarterback who can't throw because of an arm injury, and was 8-for-17 passing for 114 yards against Itasca. Wiebolt then started in place of Dave Gorski, out because of a car accident, at tight end. Meanwhile, a big void was left at fullback because of an ankle injury suffered by Thief River Falls sophomore John Dillon.

Across the offensive line will be freshman Dave Kays (Thief River Falls) at center; sophomore Bob Benson (Twin Valley) and freshman Kevin Kundert (Winger) at guards; with freshmen Ken Demarais (Fisher) and Rick Gobell (Thief River Falls) at tackles. Freshman Greg Harder (Thief River Falls) will also play guard.

"I felt they played well," said Helley of his often-maligned offensive unit.

Area Teams Enter Football Playoffs

Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) area nine-man football playoffs get underway Friday when Oslo visits Argyle for a 7:30 p.m. game. The winner will play at Middle River Tuesday.

Argyle completed a perfect 8-0 Top of the State Conference championship season Tuesday with a 63-8 rout of runner-up Stephen, while Oslo edged Kennedy 16-12 yesterday in a Northern Lights Conference championship showdown.

Meanwhile, North Tri County Conference champion Middle River polished off an unbeaten regular season with a 46-0 shutout of Grygla-Gatzke Tuesday afternoon and will await the results of Friday's Oslo-Argyle game to find out its first round playoff opponent.

Eventual Oslo-Argyle-Middle River winner will move into the MSHSL state playoff quarterfinals Saturday, November 7, where they would meet the winner of an Agassiz Valley North vs. Agassiz Valley South preliminary playoff game. That game would be played at the site of the most westerly team.

State playoff semifinals and championship games are scheduled Nov. 13 and Nov. 20 at sites determined by the MSHSL after previous results are known.

East Grand Forks in Class A and Mahnomen in Class B are two other area teams slated for post-season playoff action. The Green Wave, advancing as a Class A independent, will travel to Hermantown Tuesday for a qualifying game against the Sea-Range Conference champion Hawks, who close out their 1981 regular season Thursday against Bemidji. Pine-to-Prairie Conference champion Mahnomen is seeded into the Class B quarterfinals Nov. 7, awaiting the winner of a qualifying game matching conference champions in the North Star and Arrowhead leagues. The Indians are the defending Class B state champions.

End of regular season.
Tues., Nov. 3 — MSHSL nine-man playoff game: Argyle or Oslo at North Tri County Conference champion Middle River, 3 p.m.

Quarterback John Cyr passed for 210 yards and three touchdowns while also scoring twice himself Tuesday to lead Oklee to a surprisingly easy 50-14 North Tri County Conference high school football win over McIntosh-Winger.

Cyr, a junior, was 10-for-16 in the passing department. Oklee coach Dale Svaren said his quarterback had a "tremendous game," and was extremely happy with the Bobcats' final game performance that enabled them to finish above .500 at 5-4. "Everything went perfect for us," he said.

Cyr produced the only points of the first quarter on a 20-yard run, then broke the game open in the second period with back-to-back touchdown plays.

McIntosh-Winger appeared to be headed for a tying touchdown at the start of the second quarter when the Bobcats stopped the Scots with a fumble recovery at the Oklee three-yard line. Then on the very next play Cyr hit Jon Lindquist with a perfectly-thrown 77-yard touchdown pass.

That made it 12-0 and on the Scots' next series it was suddenly 18-0 as Cyr came up with an interception and returned to 40 yards for a touchdown.

Cyr later threw touchdown passes of 15 yards to Matt Radniecki and 20 yards to Lief Fore. Lindquist added a 45-yard touchdown pass from Kevin Enerson, who was 3-for-5 passing for 71 yards to hike the Bobcats' passing total to 281 yards, while Fore and Rick Dulka scored on three-yard runs. The Bobcats racked up 394 total yards.

McIntosh-Winger, the defending North Tri County Conference champions, trailed 30-0 before scoring and faced a 44-6 deficit before adding a second touchdown at the end.

Fore, Dulka and Mike Vettleson played their final games as seniors for the youthful Bobcats.

End of regular season.
Fri., Oct. 30 — MSHSL nine-man playoff game. Northern Lights Conference champion Oslo at Top of the State Conference champion Argyle, 7:30 p.m.

Passing combination of quarterback Dave Kragness and receiver Jeff Dahl sparked Marshall County Central to a season-ending 24-21 Top of the State Conference high school football win over Hallock Tuesday at Newfolden.

Kragness was 8-for-17 passing for 134 yards and three touchdowns — all to Dahl, who caught seven passes for 133 yards.

Hallock led 7-6 at halftime and had a 14-6 edge before Marshall County Central finally got untracked in the third quarter. On the Nordics' second possession of the second half Kragness and Dahl hooked up on a 51-yard passing play that set up a nine-yard Dahl-toKragness touchdown pass, narrowing the gap to 14-12.

Moments later Todd Stokke broke through the blocked a Hallock punt at the Bears' four-yard line, setting up a go-ahead one-yard touchdown run by Bill Johnson.

"Those two plays (the long pass and the blocked punt), got us going," noted Marshall County Central coach Sam Gebhart, who said the Nordics were sluggish in the first half.

Marshall County Central opened up a 24-14 lead when Dahl and Kragness got together for a 21-yard pass before the third quarter came to a close.

Hallock scored on a seven-yard Todd Johnson-to-Scott Haugstad pass with 1:20 remaining for a 24-21 game and went with the on-side kick in attempt to get the ball back. But Marshall County Central recovered the kick and ran out the clock.

The Nordics finished with a 250-230 edge in total yardage, getting 153 of it in the air and 93 on the ground. Hallock rushed for 122 yards and passed for 106.

The victory enabled the Nordics to finish an up-and-down, injury-plagued season above .500 at 5-4, 4-4 in the Top of the State Conference. Hallock finished 3-5.

Gebhart said the Nordics played the second half of last night's game minus eight players who were starters at the beginning of the year.

Dahl, in addition to his pass receiving, also led the Nordics on defense with 14 tackles as a defensive end. Safety-linebacker Jamie Sagsteun had seven tackles; middle linebacker Troy Swan came up with nine stops and Troy Broderson had 11.

Motorists Are Told To Watch Out For Deer

Motorists on Minnesota highways have been told to be on the lookout for deer in order to avoid serious accidents and wasteful loss of valuable wildlife.

Department of Natural Resources noted that the fall months are usually the time when the number of deer-vehicle collisions reach their peak.

LeRoy Rutske, a big game specialist, said buck deer become more active during the fall with the onset of the mating season and are more apt to wander into the path of a motor vehicle.

Animals are particularly active during the hours of darkness and because of their coloration are difficult to see as they dart into the road from a ditch or adjacent forested area.

Last year, said Rutske, a total of 8,649 deer were killed on Minnesota roads and highways. He said the figure had been running between six and seven thousand deer annually for the past several years.

"Many thousands of dollars in property damage have resulted from these deer-vehicle collisions," he said, "as well as serious personal injury."

Unbeaten Nordics Try For 18-0 Finish

Marshall County Central volleyball team will try to complete an unbeaten regular season schedule Thursday when the Nordics host Hallock at Newfolden.

It won't be easy, warns Marshall County Central coach Sarah Ackerman. "I expect a good game. They (Hallock) have a good team; they've got a lot of size and they're strong spikers."

Marshall County Central record climbed to 16-0 with three recent wins as the Nordics handled Greenbush 18-4, 18-11 Thursday; came from behind to defeat Warren 13-18, 18-13, 18-4 Friday; and handled Stephen 18-13, 18-15 Monday.

The Warren match was one of the biggest of the year, said Ackerman. The Nordics started in shaky fashion, but quickly adjusted.

"They were nervous at the start," admitted Ackerman, "but then we started playing our game. In the second and third games we couldn't do much wrong. I was really impressed with the way we played."

Sue Olson led the Nordics over the Ponies with 10 spikes. Doreen Larson added eight.

Minnesota hunters killed and retrieved 830,843 ducks during the 1980 season.

In 1556 the most deadly earthquake in recorded history ripped through Shensi Province in China, killing an estimated 830,000 persons.

Huskies Edge Cardinals 8-0

John Cullen scored on a three-yard run to cap off a long, time-comsuming drive following the second half kickoff Tuesday, and that was the only touchdown in an 8-0 Goodridge victory over Plummer.

The North Tri County Conference game played at Plummer closed out the 1981 high school football season for both teams. The Huskies finished 3-6 and the Cardinals went 2-7.

"It was a very well-played football game by both teams," reported Goodridge coach Rick Nelson. "It was a hard-hitting game; the best hitting game Goodridge has had in three years."

Defense ruled the action on both sides. "I thought our defense played really, really well," said Nelson, who also praised the play of his four seniors in their final game: Mike Drangstveit, Bob Miller, Ken Frazer and Cullen.

Plummer coach Gary Brantl agreed with Nelson on both the hitting and defensive comments. "There was a lot of good hitting," noted Brantl. "Both defenses played extremely well."

Brantl cited the defensive play of junior Dean Sletten, a middle linebacker who had 11 solo tackles and six assisted tackles; freshman Russ Fisher, a defensive back who was six solo tackles, an interception and a fumble recovery; and eighth grader Gary Torkelson, a tackle who was credited with 12 solo tackles and five assists.

Like Goodridge, Plummer fielded a young team this fall, with Steve Fossell, Pete Gerardy and Bill Maki the only seniors on the squad.

Cross Country Title Won By Rocori Squad

Cold Spring-Rocori, with its top three runners finishing 1-2-3, defeated favored Alexandria 48-54 Monday in the 1981 Region 8AA high school cross country meet at Alexandria.

Little Falls finished third with 79 points, followed by Moorhead 87, Bemidji 135, Detroit Lakes 140, East Grand Forks 219, Fergus Falls 233, Sauk Rapids 284, Brainerd 297 and Melrose 297, with Park Rapids fielding an incomplete team. St. Cloud Apollo, St. Cloud Tech, Thief River Falls and Crookston runners did not compete in the meet because of teachers strikes in those communities.

Jeff Massman led the trio of top-finishing Cold Spring-Rocori runners with a first place 16:58 effort over the 5,000-meter course. Scott Massman was second in 17:04 and Scott Head was third in 17:12.

Top five individuals, which included fourth place Mark Lingle of Park Rapids in 17:21 and fifth place Paul Nelson of Little Falls in 17:24, along with the winning Cold Spring-Rocori squad, qualified for the 1981 Minnesota Class AA state cross country meet, scheduled to be held Saturday on the University of Minnesota golf course in Falcon Heights.

Alexandria won the girls portion of the Region 8AA cross country meet completed Saturday when results of the boys race were scrubbed because officials sent the leaders in the wrong direction.

Ted Sundin of East Grand Forks, considered the top area runner this falls when he won eight of his ten starts, struggled with a cold and could do no better than 16th at the Region 8AA meet.

LARGE TROPHY RACK was the prize for a party of Goodridge area hunters in the recently-completed 1981 Minnesota moose hunting season. The animal, which had a 53-inch spread and weighed approximately 1,200 pounds, was downed on a combination shot from about 300 yards by Elwood Tieman and Bennie Svanjord. The big bull fell at 9 a.m. Sunday, October 11 — the second day of the season — east of highway 89 just off the Moose river. It was the first animal the party saw. The foresome included, left to right, Orin Anenson, Henry Anenson and Tieman, with Svanjord taking the photograph.

Twins Offer Mail Order Ticket Sales

Mail orders for all 1982 Minnesota Twins home games will be accepted beginning November 1.

The 81-game schedule at the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome commences on Tuesday, April 6, at 7:35 p.m., in the American League opener vs. the Seattle Mariners. That game kicks off a nine-game homestand against West Division rivals Seattle, California and Oakland — all three-game series.

All reserved seating in the Metrodome is priced at $8 while general admission seating is $4. General admission is also available for advance sale; in the past, it's been sold on a game-day only basis.

To order, a check or money order for the correct amount (including $1 for postage and handling) for the specified games should be sent to Twins Tickets, Metropolitan Stadium, Bloomington, MN 55420.

Twins' home schedule breaks down to 12 April games, 11 in May, 13 in June, 14 in July, 17 in August, 11 in September and three in October.

STAYING IN TOUCH!

Congressman
Arlan Stangeland

It was one year ago this week that candidate Ronald Reagan asked the nation, "Are you better off than you were a year ago?"

I think that one question decided the election. The people thought back over the years of double-digit inflation, 20 per cent interest rates, tax burdens that had doubled, and increased regulations. They thought it over and they voted for Ronald Reagan and a change.

The time has come to ask that question again. "Are you better off than you were a year ago?"

Without a question, the biggest economic problem we faced last November was double-digit inflation. Many people didn't think that inflation could drop below 10 per cent this year, but it has.

Another major concern was the record level of tax rates. People saw the increases in Social Security payroll taxes scheduled for 1982 and wondered how big the tax bite would be in their paychecks. But we've passed the tax cut that will more than offset the social Security increases.

Over 36 million Americans who receive social security benefits were concerned about the precarious integrity of the system's trust funds. But, after a lot of wrangling and fear-mongering on the part of the Administration's critics, we've covered the immediate needs of the system with short-term inter-fund borrowing. And we're going to come up with a long term solution as well.

On the economic front, we've eased inflation, reduced the tax burden, and shored up the social security system.

Now critics of the conomic recovery program are crowing that our Gross National Product took a mild dip and inflation increased slightly between June and October. But this has been caused by high interest rates, not the tax cuts and spending rates.

Because the cost of borrowing money is so expensive, many businesses could not afford to expand their production during the third quarter. And the minor increase in inflation was caused solely by the higher costs of new home mortgages and car loans.

But this situation is going to improve. Even the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office (CBO) has predicted that interest rates will fall in the next few months because of the improved inflation picture.

And when interest rates fall, inflation will continue to be moderate, investments will increase and jobs will be created. According to the CBO report, the improved outlook for our economy for 1982-84 will "contrast sharply with the unfavorable economic developments of the past several years."

The President's opponents were silent during the tax and budget battles last spring and summer. Then they seized on the Social Security issue, until Mr. Reagan de-fused it with a sensible and non-partisan solution.

Now the critics are proclaiming that the combination of coordinated tax cuts and spending reductions are a failure, even before the program is one month old.

Let's be fair. It took us twenty years of rudderless economic policies to get into this situation. And we can't expect to have the economy transformed overnight, especially after the four disastrous years we suffered through under the last Administration.

Even former officials of the last Administration concede that something had to be done to turn the economy around. And I think that Congress and the President are on the right track.

As far as inflation, taxes, social security, national defense, and a wide variety of other issues are concerned, I know that we are better off than we were a year ago.

If we can reduce interest rates, we're going to be even better off next year, as employment, investment and productivity increase.

All we have to do is give the new program a chance.

MR. AND MRS. Clifford Nelson, Newfolden (center) were recent overnight guests of Governor and Mrs. Al Quie. The Nelsons were selected in a random drawing in the category of a Vietnam war veteran with an October birthday, and spouse.

Bill Would Aid Cities Served By Airlines

Senate subcommittee has adopted legislation introduced by Senator Dave Durenberger to save commercial air service in Minnesota's smaller cities.

The appropriations subcommittee on transportation included the measure in the department of transportation appropriations bill for the current fiscal year, which was sent to full committee with a recommendation that it be accepted.

Without the bill, five Minnesota cities would probably lose their commercial air service, including Thief River Falls, Brainerd, Bemidji, International Falls and Hibbing.

Durenberger's measure targets existing "406" assistance to airlines serving cities that board 80 or fewer passengers per day. The 406 program was part of deregulation of airlines passed by Congress in 1978, a program established so that small cities would not lose commercial air service overnight. The 406 assistance was scheduled to be phased out in 1985, giving commuter airlines time to begin service to cities that might lose commercial service.

The Reagan administration, however, proposed an immediate cut-off of the program. Durenberger objected, saying the move would be a severe economic hardship to persons and businesses in small cities that depend on commercial air service.

By targeting assistance to cities with no more than 80 passengers per day, rather than the current 100 passenger limit, costs would be cut from $100 million to $28 million in fiscal 1982. The Minnesota senator argued that it would be economical for airlines to serve cities with 100 passengers; but that cities with 80 or fewer passengers would lose service without the 406 program.

While raising three children, I discovered that pumpkins can have character. Using the same tools and a minimum of skill, I turned out jack-o-lanterns smiling and lovable . . . and jack-o-lanterns leering and grotesque.

All parents know that children have character. But how that character develops is not simply a product of parental know-how.

In the religious education our churches provide, a child finds the faith that will mightily mold his character. In the worship and service activities of their church, parents express their own religious belief and make it part of family life.

Truly, God carves character.

Sugar: Just the Facts, Please

By J.R. O'Connell, President of the Sugar Association, Inc.

Sugar is safe. Used in moderation, as any other food, sugar makes a great contribution to a balanced and healthy diet.

But sugar continues to be a profitable target for what we call "pseudo-scientists"—primarily promoters of fad foods and diets and other publicity-seekers.

We at the Sugar Association take exception to all self-appointed lay groups that arbitrarily charge the scientific community—including government and health officials and industry scientists—with irresponsible or careless actions.

We take particular exception when lay opinion concerning the health of individuals is foisted off on the public as scientific fact. This is the cruelest form of consumer exploitation.

One group, for example, suggests that sugar causes such diseases as diabetes and heart ailments. This is both wrong and irresponsible.

An exhaustive four-year study for the Food and Drug Administration, completed in 1976, established sugar's safety. Aside from a limited contribution to tooth decay, no evidence was found linking sugar to other health problems. At least three other major reviews in recent years have corroborated those conclusions.

The sugar industry is proud of sugar's contribution to a balanced and healthy diet. As with any food, the key to true healthful enjoyment is moderation.

Yes, sugar is safe.

Improper Duties

Following editorial is from the Ely Echo:

Members of several state boards discovered recently that unknown to them, their members have been enlisted as officials snoops for the state in regard to child and adult abuse. That is, if a teacher or a tax assessor or an electrical engineer on an official trip relating to his duties and in a home sees what he believes to be abuse of a child or adult, an official report must be made to an appropriate state authority.

This is not something teachers, assessors, or electricians can decide on their own. By law they are required to report any cases of abuse, or be charged with a misdemeanor.

While the thrust of the law (Minnesota Statutes 214.01 and 626.557) is aimed at uncovering child and adult abuse, the methods seem plucked right out of the Nazi operational manual.

Under the U.S. Constitution, all citizens are protected from unwarranted search. If there is some suspected law violations going on in a home and if the investigating agency can make a case, a judge will issue a search warrant. However, under the new state law, no warrant is needed for various inspectors, assessors or advisors who may be in the home on another matter.

Assessors, particularly, are upset over the law. According to Bill Slavin, of the State Board of Assessors, tax assessors have it difficult enough getting permission from people to inspect their property. Once the public understands that tax assessors are required to investigate for other infractions of the law, the welcome could be even more chilly.

In a legal sense, information on private citizens is being obtained by access to homes without a search warrant. As one tax assessor put it: "Where does it stop. The state requires us to snoop in regard to child or adult abuse. Next it could be snooping to determine if people may be cheating on reported taxable income or any other item some state agency may want to know about."

Assessors point out that they are trained as assessors, not criminal investigators. Electricians, surveyors, barbers, teachers and a whole host of other state-licensed operators, also included as state snoops, are not trained in investigatory work and are just now becoming aware that they, too, are expected to spy on their neighbors.

Unless the specific legislation is removed, it will not be long before all state employees are viewed as spies and citizens will be extremely reluctant to talk to them or allow them in their homes.

And for good reason. Big Brother we do not need.

Clean Air Act Revisions

Following editorial is from the Grand Rapids Herald-Review:

Like the man says, "all we know is what we read in the papers, hear on the radio or see on television."

That's what makes it so difficult to form strong opinions on many of the major political issues of the day. We simply don't have the information on which to base sound judgments — or we don't take the time to read and study it. Or we're not really sure if leaders mean what they say.

Nobody should be surprised that business groups are loud in their approval of proposed changes in the Clean Air Act, that environmentalists are incensed, or that Congressional reaction has been mixed. It is a tremendously complicated and important Act, and there will be and should be a great deal of study and debate before action is taken. It is one of the most pressing matters before Congress.

Let's examine two sharply differing viewpoints:

The Reagan administration's basic principles for rewriting the Clean Air Act "appear to turn back the clock on cleaning up the air. If these basic principles become law, they will doom a decade-long effort to safeguard one of our most important treasures — the air we breathe," declares Russell Peterson, president of the National Audubon Society.

"We can anticipate that the administration will seek to weaken the health standards, drop portions of the prevention of significant deterioration program, not enact controls for acid rain, relax auto-emission standards and reduce controls on coal-fired plants. When 86 per cent of the American people call for maintaining or strengthening the Clean Air laws of the land, the Reagan administration continues to cater to the demends of the polluters by proposing a major weakening of these laws," the Audubon Soceity head declares.

Another opinion comes from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States:

"No one objects to the idea of the Clean Air Act, the basic environmental legislation to protect public health. But since its passage in 1970, an awareness has developed that the ACT is not perfect. Keeping the air clean and the country healthy costs more than it should. Perhaps at one time we could afford the Act as written. Now the economy has deteriorated, productivity has declined, and we have double digit inflation.

"The first 'regulatory' test for Congress is the Clean Air Act. The objective is to amend the Act so that its major goals of national health and well-being are retained — but so that it works with more flexibility and less delay and does not obstruct economic progress. We can have clean air and economic progress. . . No one intended the Clean Air Act to be so pervasive; it happened because the Act is not working properly. It is actually impeding the attainment of clean air while adversely affecting the economy," the Chamber concludes.

President Reagan has declared that "the nation should continue its steady progress toward cleaner air. . . statutes and regulations should be reasonable and should be related to the economic and physical realities of the particular areas involved. The basic concept of the health-based primary standards in the Clean Air Act should be maintained. Cost-benefit analysis should not be included as statutory criteria, but the standards should be based on sound scientific data demonstrating where air quality represents health risks." The President also calls for accelerated research on acid rain.

There is always room for concern that changes in the Clean Air Act might weaken it. Dan W. Lufkin, who administered the Clean Air Act for three years in the industrial state of Connecticut, agrees that the Act can stand some modernization. But he warns that "we must be careful not to throw the baby out with the bath water. . . From what I have been able to ascertain, unenforceable, impractical and inneffective travesty of regulation on which so much of our human and physical survival depends."

So there we are. One side insists revision will strengthen the act, and the other is equally certain that it will weaken it. The truth lies someplace between the two views. It is up to all of us to make sure we understand the problems and to express our support for a strong Clean Air Act which is not unduly burdensome and restrictive while remaining effective.

He's Got To Be Kidding!

Following editorial is from the Wadena Pioneer Journal:

The attorney for the St. Cloud school board has got to be kidding. He's asked the district court there to dismiss a lawsuit filed by the St. Cloud Times alleging the board violated the state's open meeting law. The board's attorney says the law is unconstitutional because it violates board members' freedom of speech and right to assembly.

We're not trying to argue whether or not the St. Cloud board violated the state open meeting law. That will be decided by evidence presented to the court. The board has admitted, however, that it held planning meetings in Alexandria without giving notice of those meetings to the public.

But it's a bunch of hogwash when public officials complain that the open meeting law violates their right of free speech. The open meeting law does not deny them the right to freedom of speech. They can say anything they want to. Nor does the law keep them from assembling.

What the open meeting law does is guarantee that when elected officials meet to discuss public matters, the public has a right to know ahead of time and to be there to hear their elected representatives.

Any time elected officials are meeting and talking about subjects that affect the way tax dollars are spent, the taxpayers have a right to be present at those meetings. If there's any question over whose rights have priority, the decision must go to the right of the public.

Borrowed Nonsense:

The kindergarten student turned in his art paper with only a wavy blue line across it. "What's this?" the teacher asked. "A boat," the student replied. "I don't see any boat," the teacher persisted. "It sank," the student said.

Gov. Quie's Column

One of the most difficult and controversial issues facing Minnesota today is workers' compensation.

Workers' compensation is basic medical and loss-of-income protection for individuals hurt as a result of work-related injuries or illnesses. Minnesotans who are injured or become ill as a result of employment have all of their medical bills paid and their lost income replaced at a level set by state law. Further, they receive money if the injury is permanently and partially disabling. Injured workers are also entitled to rehabilitation benefits when it is impossible for them to return to work.

The problem in workers' compensation is to achieve the right balance between the level of benefits paid, the structure of the benefits and the costs. The injured worker must be assured of an adequate level of benefits in order to meet his or her needs while injured and be assured of receiving the benefits promptly. Yet the benefit levels should not be set so high or the system of awarding benefits so constructed that the employee is discouraged from returning to work. Also the cost of the system to employers must be reasonable and competitive with our neighboring states. When the workers' compensation system fails to achieve this balance, it stops working in the best interests of both employers and injured workers. In Minnesota, our system has become unbalanced.

During the past few legislaive sessions a substantial amount of time and effort has been spent trying to correct this imbalance. We have managed to make the payment of benefits more prompt, reduce some of the disincentives to return to work, improve our rehabilitation system and make several other important changes. The result of these changes has been both an improvement in the system and a stabilization of costs to employers.

But, a great deal more needs to be done to improve our system. Many injured workers receive benefits which are structured so they are discouraged from returning to work. Others receive permanent partial disability payments which are far larger in Minnesota than in surrounding states. As a result, the system continues to be priced so that many employers are badly hurt by the cost of workers' compensation. These high costs pose a very serious problem for Minnesota employers and for Minnesota's entire economy.

Because of the magnitude and complexity of the workers' compensation problem, I have instructed Commissioner of Insurance Michael Markman to develop a comprehensive set of recommendations for improvements which will address this issue. After receiving his report, I plan to propose legislation which restructures the benefits to be more equitable, to reduce the disincentives for injured workers to return to work and to save money for employers.

We will not ignore the needs of our injured workers, but we will improve the system and substantially reduce its costs. These changes are desperately needed in Minnesota if we are to vitalize our economy and continue to maintain a strong, stable economy which will provide needed jobs for all our citizens.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

This is in response to the letter to the editor dated Wednesday, October 21, 1981.

I must admit that after reading the letter published in the Times, my behavior has revealed a number of different feelings including anger, disappointment, contempt and the largest of all, a sense of extreme pride in being a teacher.

Since my initial reading of the article on Wednesday, I have reviewed it so many times and must admit, I'm still not sure how I would like to handle my response. I certainly cannot deal with each ludicrous, misinformed remark this person has made as there are just too many of them. Nor do I just want to throw rocks at this person without taking credit for them as this person felt the need to do in that letter.

Instead, I would like to make just a few personal comments in regard to this "Concerned Taxpayer," make a formal apology to Mr. Marv Lundin for the phone call he received from me after my initial reading, and some personal comments.

To this "Concerned Taxpayer": If you are going to write any more letters to the editor such as your one of October 21, or plan to talk to friends or neighbors about the issue, or most importantly discuss this with your children, then let me suggest you inform yourself with the correct information, issues, positions, attitudes, etc. . . so in the future you do not show your ignorance publicly.

To Marv Lundin I apologize for the phone call as I know you did not write the article, just printed it. Although, I might suggest in the future I would like to see a policy where if a person has some views he would like to share with the reading public, he should take credit for his statements or not have them printed.

I'd like to end with a statement that was included in a mailer by the Thief River Falls Education Association. Teachers want quality education. The American ideal is not to abandon the system, but to improve upon it. We have pride in ourselves, our schools, and our community. We have demonstrated our commitment to public education. We will continue to devote our time and talents to our profession and your children's education. Quality education is very important to us."

Finally, it seems that in most cases where individuals attack the teachers' position the comment is made, "perhaps they (meaning teachers) should consider moving there." Let me finish with a quote. "If quality education is not important to you, maybe you should consider moving somewhere else!"

DISCOVER THE BAGEL

Tired of toast in the morning? Try a toasted bagel. This doughnut-shaped roll is crusty on the outside and chewy on the inside. Its firm texture makes it ideal for toasting and sandwiches. It doesn't crumble or break easily. It isn't sticky or greasy. It has the same nutritive value as bread and is no more fattening. Bagels are easy to bake and Fleischmann's Yeast shows you how with this new wheat bagel recipe rich in fiber and protein.

WHEAT GERM BAGELS

Makes 1 dozen

4 to 4 1/2 cups unsifted flour
1/2 cup wheat germ
3 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon salt
2 packages Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast
Water
2 tablespoons margarine
1 tablespoon sugar
2 teaspoons salt
1 egg white

Combine 3 cups white flour and wheat germ. In a large bowl mix 1 1/2 cups flour mixture, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon salt and undissolved yeast.

Heat 1 1/2 cups water and margarine in a saucepan until very warm (120° F.-130° F.). Gradually add to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add 1/2 cup flour mixture. Beat at high speed 2 minutes. Stir in remaining flour mixture and enough additional flour to make a stiff dough. On a floured board knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Set in a greased bowl; turn to grease top. Cover; let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Punch dough down. Cover; let rest 15 minutes. In a large skillet heat a 1-inch depth of water over medium heat to a simmer; stir in remaining sugar and salt.

Divide dough into 12 equal pieces: shape 6 pieces into smooth balls. With a floured finger, make a 1-inch hole in each. Cover and let rest 5 to 10 minutes. Drop 3 bagels into simmering water. Cook 3 minutes. Turn and cook 2 minutes. Turn again; cook 1 minute more. Drain on towels. While cooking first batch of bagels, shape 6 more and let rest 5 to 10 minutes. If necessary, add boiling water to skillet if level drops below 1-inch.

Place bagels on greased baking sheet. Mix egg white and 1 tablespoon water; brush on bagels. Sprinkle with wheat germ if desired. Bake at 375°F. for 20 to 25 minutes. Remove from sheets. Cool.

Treat the Trickster

Here's a gala pitcher punch to serve on All Hallow's Eve. Have your youngsters bring their friends back to your house after the trick-'n'-treating is done. They'll all have fun unloading their tote bags and seeing who got what.

Because of all that loot you really need very little in the way of refreshments besides the punch. Perhaps a platter of bite-sized donuts or some cookies, that's all. The punch is simplicity itself to make. It's based on instant tea which gives it body without masking the flavors of the other ingredients. Canned orange punch gives it the appropriate color and the clove-studded lemon slices make a gay garnish.

GOBLIN PITCHER PUNCH
(Makes about 2 quarts)

2 tablespoons instant tea
1 (46-oz.) can orange punch, chilled
1 cinnamon stick
2 lemons, sliced
Whole cloves
1 (12-oz.) bottle lemon-lime carbonated beverage

Combine tea, orange punch and cinnamon stick. Insert 2 or 3 cloves into each lemon slice and add to tea mixture. When ready to serve, pour over ice cubes and add carbonated beverage.

Power to Burn
FIELDMASTER Super Premium Diesel Fuel
You've made a big investment in diesel-powered equipment because it's more efficient. So it's smart to use a special fuel, one that's made to maintain diesel engine efficiency and deliver all the horsepower you paid for.
CENEX FIELDMASTER is specially formulated to wash away power-robbing deposits, restore precise spray patterns for clean burning and give you full power from every gallon. In fact, power can be increased 5% to 15% without producing more smoke than with non-additive fuels.
And, regular use of CENEX FIELDMASTER can actually help reduce engine maintenance and downtime by extending injector life and protecting against internal rust. A typical test showed injector life increased by 71%.
So use FIELDMASTER in all diesel engines operating under heavy-duty conditions for which ASTM2-D fuels are recommended. You'll have power to burn.

PRECIOUS PLATINUM

Platinum is the most precious of all jewelry metals. So precious that even the world's most famous diamond, the Hope diamond, is secured by it. In fact, many of Europe's most extravagant crown jewels are set in this lustrous metal.

Today, platinum is enjoying an increased popularity as more jewelers and consumers learn of its unique and affordable characteristics. Platinum is rarer and nobler than either gold or silver, and is also the longest-enduring, strongest jewelry metal. Unlike white gold and other metals, it will never cause allergic irritations or discolorations. Because it is so pure it can be worn by people with even the most sensitive skin. Platinum is almost invincible.

In today's market, platinum is highly valued by designers and consumers for its intrinsic value and fresh breath-taking beauty. When a consumer purchases platinum jewelry she is making a life-long investment, for the metal's deep white luster grows richer and deeper with every passing year. Platinum never competes with, or affects, the color of any gem. It enhances a stone's brilliance while dramatizing its size impression. And of course, no other metal compliments a diamond like platinum. Today there is a growing trend among designers to mount almost all precious stones in platinum.

Because platinum has not fluctuated in price as drastically as either gold or silver, it has become an even better value. More and more manufacturers are designing everyday jewelry in platinum—simple necklaces, bracelets, rings and earrings—they are more durable, more practical and, many think, more beautiful than jewelry made of common metals. Since the metal is so strong, even the most delicate pieces can be fashioned from it. Some platinum jewelry is so fine and supple that it drapes on the skin like silk.

Platinum jewelry, in all its durability and beauty, is available and surprisingly affordable. So now is the time to choose platinum, the strongest of all precious metals, for your most precious jewelry. Because you want it to last.

FOR A COUNCILMAN WHO CARES
VOTE NOV. 3rd
THIEF RIVER FALLS CITY ELECTION
☒ DONALD R. GOODRICH — Alderman at Large

DEAR FELLOW CITIZENS,

Four years ago I made a very special effort to meet and talk to as many of you as possible in a door-to-door campaign. At that time I was getting acquainted with you and of course you had a chance to meet me, and tell me your thoughts on city government.

Over the last four years as your Alderman-at-Large I have been working hard to get acquainted with the workings of our city. I have served faithfully on the Park Board, Airport Commission, Insurance, License and Building committees and as liason to the Chamber of Commerce. Governor Quie appointed me to serve on the Governor's Commission of Economic Development.

Although as city, state and nation we have come upon some difficult economic times, yet the city has been able to hold its budget increase to 3½% for 1982. Some changes in services or programs may be necessary to hold to this modest increase, but it must be done to keep a balanced budget.

I feel we must take a conservative approach to all new expenditures and programs.

I told you that if I was elected I would do my best to serve the people of Thief River Falls. I know I may not have always voted the way you might have wished. However, my votes have never been cast without much concern for what is best for Thief River Falls.

I'll close with a word that my father left with me. "Any job worth doing is worth doing well." If you feel I have done well, I would appreciate your vote.

Sincerely,

RE-ELECT

When the temperature between the interlining of the stove reaches 150 Farenheit, blower will engage and continue to transfer the heat produced by the wood burner until the fire extinguishes and the interjacket temperature goes below 120 Farenheit. At this time the blower will shut down.

Farm and Shop Portable Gas Heaters
The most efficient heaters under the sun!
- High efficiency direct fired. Because unvented heaters are about 20% more fuel efficient than vented types, they quickly pay for themselves in just a few years.
- Massive volumes of warm air flood out the vent to bathe the barn or shop in a dry, clean atmosphere.
- Easy Installation. Since they require no flue or vent, these units can be hung or set just about anywhere heat is required.
- Safety is first. Sun/America heaters have automatic gas valves, high temperature shut-off switches, and are always cool to the touch even after long hours of operation.
- Automatic thermostatic controls maintain a comfortable temperature setting automatically day or night.
- Low purchase cost. Few other thermostatically controlled, cool-to-the-touch heaters can compare to Sun America's extremely low cost per BTU ratio.
- Minimum maintenance. Solid steel and cast iron construction in a simple design insures years of efficient use with little service or maintenance.

Marie Gustafson, Rt. 3, City, 681-1697

Mr. and Mrs. Gust Gustafson returned last week from Burlington, Vermont where they had been house guests at the Jim Dean home. Mrs. Dean is a niece of Gust and Marie. They traveled by bus to Winnipeg and from there by Via Rail to Montreal where they were met by Cheryl Dean. Vermont is beautiful in its fall colors and very different from Minnesota. Farms there are very small. They saw many beautiful and interesting places and things. Among places visited were Mount Mansfield, the highest peak in the Green Mountains and a noted ski area. Stowe, where the Von Trapp family, of Sound of Music fame, have a resort, restaurant and gift shop, and Shelburne Museum where they saw the cruise ship Adirondack which was in active service on Lake Champlain for over forty years, a schoolhouse dating to 1762 and tools in use in 1732. Burlington is located on the shore of Lake Champlain with New York state and the Adirondack mountains visible on the other side of the lake. They crossed the lake by ferry and visited the town of Essex, New York which was founded in 1783. Many of the original buildings are still there and are being lived in and are being used for business places and for churches. It was indeed a memorable trip. It was very wet all through Canada as it is here.

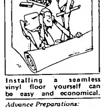
How To Install a Vinyl Floor

In a few hours, you can install a beautiful no-wax seamless vinyl floor with good-looking results and at great savings. Even if you have never installed a floor before, you can have a durable, attractive new floor in an afternoon. Plus the satisfaction of knowing you did it yourself.



Installing a seamless vinyl floor yourself can be easy and economical.

Advance Preparations:

Before buying your floor, make a simple diagram of your room to determine exactly how much flooring you need to complete the job. Twelve foot wide rolls such as those from Mannington, for example, will allow seamless installations in most rooms.

Step 1: Prepare the room:

Clear the room of all furniture and movable appliances.

Carefully remove and save moldings, cove base and other trim along the edge of the floor.

Make vertical cuts at the corners so flooring will lie flat.

Make sure your present flooring surface is clean, dry and smooth.

Step 2: Measure and cut the floor:

Unroll the flooring in a larger room or in a clean basement, driveway or garage, and cut to the dimensions of your floor plan. Add about three inches on all sides for easy trimming later on.

Using a straight edge, cut the flooring along the walls.

Now roll it up along the longest side, pattern side in, and transfer it to the room for installation.

Step 3: Positioning the floor

Fit the flooring along the longest straight wall, allowing it to curve up the wall.

Make vertical cuts into the flooring so it will lie flat in the corners.

Use a two by four and press the flooring into the wall/floor juncture all along the walls.

Step 4: Trimming the floor

Now, using a metal straight edge or yardstick, cut the flooring along the walls, leaving about 1/4 inch between the edge of the flooring and the wall for normal expansion and contraction of the subfloor.

Replace molding and trim by nailing them to the wall.

Around door casings and thresholds trim a bit more carefully. Make a series of vertical cuts like those you made at the corners to fit the flooring into the wall/floor juncture. DON'T leave 1/4 inch space as you did along the walls, but fit the flooring snugly against the casing.

Step 5: Finishing Touches

Replace molding and trim by nailing them to the wall and not to the floor. Allow a bit of clearance above the flooring, about 1/8 inch for normal expansion and contraction. That's all there is to it.

Mannington Resilient floors are quite easy to care for. For more tips on how to install seamless vinyl floors, write to Mannington Mills, Inc. DIY DEPT. PO Box 30, Salem, NJ 08079.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

We all know Uncle Sam as a defender of our shores, administrator of social programs, lawmaker, regulator, and of course, tax collector. But did you know that he is also, among others, a printer, janitor, chauffeur, ink manufacturer, tire maker, data processor, insect exterminator and even a grave digger?

Some 400,000 federal employees now perform 11,000 commercial or industrial activities that could be done by private firms. The cost to taxpayers: $19 billion in 1980. As if high interest rates, spiraling inflation and crippling regulations aren't enough, the federal government socks it to the nation's smaller business one more time by directly competing with those firms for services the American people want and need.

Small business people aren't the only losers. As usual, the taxpayers pay the cost of government's insistence on being a jack-of-all-trades. A recent study by economists James T. Bennett and Manual H. Johnson reveals that in most cases, a "bureaucratic rule of two" can be applied when comparing the costs of an activity performed by the federal government as opposed to contracting it out to the private sector. In other words, Uncle Sam will usually spend twice as much as a private firm to perform the same task. For example, a National Weather Service facility at Washington's National Airport in 1979 hired a private firm for $126,000 to provide the same services that had cost taxpayers about $240,000 when these services were being performed in-house.

Contracting out would not only provide us with cheaper goods and services, but better ones as well. Government agencies would have more flexibility to award, terminate and reopen contracts to those businesses which can best accomplish particular activities at a given time. The healthy competition of the marketplace, which fosters efficiency and creativity in the private sector, would be brought to bear on the federal bureaucracy — to the advantage of the government, taxpayers and the recipients of government's services.

President Reagan has already ordered his cabinet and agency chiefs to determine which activities in their departments could be turned over to the private sector. Legislation has been introduced in Congress which would affirm this order. Both these efforts deserve the wholehearted support of business people, workers and taxpayers.

It has been noted that every president since Eisenhower has attempted to reaffirm the practice of contracting out, but that vocal and politically powerful federal employee unions have resisted them at every turn. They have opposed these efforts in spite of the fact that approximately 85 per cent of federal employees who lose jobs as a result of contracting out is hired by the private contractor who has been awarded the job. Such figures indicate that the representatives of federal employees are not so much concerned about their members' potential unemployment as they are in losing their own political clout.

At a time of budget austerity in Washington, government must creatively stretch each federal dollar to provide more services at a reduced cost. I cannot think of a better place to begin this effort than to call upon the nation's businesses and workers in the private sector to bring a much-needed measure of efficiency and cost-effectiveness to the activities government needs and provides. In this way, we can help the President meet his goal of balancing the federal budget by cutting waste and unnecessary bureaucratic overhead — and not by eliminating essential services to the poor.

A World Without Printing... Just Imagine

Ever stop to consider what life would be like without printing? For one thing, you would not be reading this!

No newspapers, books or magazines, no signs to provide directions, no printed advertising, no paper money. Consider what the modern supermarket would be like without printing.

Business depends on printing for everything from forms of every description to money and stock certificates.

But, it wasn't always so.

Printing as we now know it began during the mid-15th Century, although the Chinese, Japanese and Koreans used it much earlier.

About 1450, Johann Gutenberg of Germany invented printing with movable type.

Following that, printing became the first means of mass communication. It put more knowledge in the hands of more people faster and cheaper than ever before.

Printing has undergone many changes in its history, most occurring since 1900. New technology in only the past 20 years has revolutionized the industry.

Today, the printing and publishing industry has grown to become the eighth largest industry in the United States, employing more than one million people and producing more than $70 billion worth of printed matter a year.

One of the most recent technical improvements is in the printing of carbonless paper forms — office forms that make duplicate copies without carbon paper.

In a few recent years the growth of this technology has made "carbonless" virtually universal — from driver's license applications to the medical forms we complete before hospital treatment.

A spokesman for 3M, a leading supplier of carbonless papers, says that while no one knows how many carbonless forms are used every day, the number is surely in the millions.

Carbonless papers have special chemicals coated on the paper surface or mixed into the body of the sheet. These chemicals are activated by pressure — pen, pencil or typewriter — to produce an image on the sheet.

An uncoated self-contained carbonless paper has been developed by 3M — it has built-in chemistry. There are no over-coatings. When pressure is applied, the chemicals mix and form the image inside the sheet.

Other carbonless paper called "coated transfer" has mating chemicals on two different sheets. Both sheets must be used together to produce an image.

Carbonless paper is a marvel of modern imaging technology. Gutenberg would be pleased.

Mrs. Edna Appleman of Highlanding underwent knee surgery recently at the United hospital in Grand Forks and is doing fine.

Mr. and Mrs. Burnell Myrum of Pengilly, and mother Mrs. Oscar Qualley of Gully were luncheon guests Friday at the Orlando Chervestad home. They also visited at her sisters' homes, Mrs. Darwin Eidelbes of Goodridge, Mrs. Helen Klopp of Thief River Falls and old neighbor Thore Skomedahl of Thief River Falls.

Mrs. Qualley stated they had a little accident the other day while sawing stove wood for winter. Her husband stopped the John Deere tractor to fix a belt. Oscar was standing by the tractor getting it started and suddenly the big wheel ran over his leg. Not realizing he had left it in gear, it was impossible to move fast enough to get out of the way. The tractor decided to go up the wood pile and it stopped near the granary wall, almost running over his wife. They walked to the house so Oscar could put some relief on his leg. Fortunately, his leg was not broken. An hour later they were back out sawing their wood, getting ready for the cold winter. Oscar is 81 years old and they live north of Gully.

Mr. and Mrs. Orlando Chervestad attended the potluck supper for the Goodridge historical society Saturday evening at the Ethel Wiseth home. They enjoyed the Centennial Pioneer film shown by Lynn and Norma Hanson. Norma presided at the business meeting. Parental Health Relates To Babies

When to get pregnant was once not much of a question. Women married in their early 20s and most got down to the business of having children as soon as possible.

But lifestyles change. Today many married women postpone parenthood, often to establish themselves in a career.

Trend toward older women in the delivery room has been building slowly over the last 10 years, according to Dr. Ismail Barrada, maternal-fetal specialist at a hospital in St. Paul. Statistics show that the number of women having their first child after they turn 30 had doubled in the last eight years.

Statistics also show that these older mothers face risks that don't usually concern their younger counterparts. As a woman and her husband grow older, the chances that one will become infertile increase. In addition, a 35-year old woman faces twice the risk she did at age 25 of having a child with serious birth defects; she runs three times the risk of a miscarriage early in her pregnancy; and her child is three times as likely to be stillborn.

A dim picture? Not really, according to Dr. Barrada, who specializes in the treatment of high-risk pregnancies.

In many cases, infertility may be cured medically if the potential for pregnancy is still there. And although older women run higher risks of having defective babies, the odds of giving birth to a healthy baby are still good.

For example, 98 per cent of the children born to 35-year-old women are without birth defects. By age 38, a pregnant woman has a 97 per cent chance of having a healthy baby.

"Age-related difficulties in pregnancy begin to appear at about age 35," Dr. Barrada said. 'By age 40 age-related problems become more obvious. By the time a woman is in her late 40s, the risk of serious problems is high; however, pregnancies at that age are rare."

Part of the reason for age-related difficulties in pregnancy has to do with simple biology. Women are born with a set number of immature eggs that later ripen and become available for fertilization with the onset of menstruation.

As a woman ages, so do her eggs. Over the years the eggs are also exposed to environmental hazards. "Old eggs are more likely to divide improperly or otherwise make a mistake, causing birth defects," Dr. Barrada explained. "In addition, the eggs are less fertile."

Men experience similar changes. Although they continue to produce sperm throughout their reproductive years, sperm cells decrease in quality as well as quantity as men grow older. Some studies say the process begins at about age 40.

Diabetes, high blood pressure and uterine fiberoid tumors are examples of age-related conditions that can interfere with a successful pregnancy. It is often necessary for doctors to monitor the unborn babies of women with these and other conditions through techniques like ultrasound and electronic monitoring. In addition, amniocentesis, a procedure performed by inserting a needle into the womb and withdrawing amniotic fluid, can reveal congenital malformations to expectant parents.

Screening for health risks to mother and baby followed by appropriate care and counseling help doctors and patients anticipate problems and ensure a healthier pregnancy. Each pregnancy should be dealt with on an individual basis after assessing the parents' situation, Barrada said.

Although age is a factor in producing a healthy baby, Dr. Barrada emphasizes that a lifetime of good health practices are more important than matching up birth certificate dates with statistical evidence.

Your chances for a successful pregnancy are very good if you and your husband are between 35 and 40 and healthy," Dr. Barrada said. "In general, healthy people have healthy babies."

Great Moments In Soap

For the first mention of soap in our history books, one has to go back about 1,800 years to second century Greece. In the writings of Galen, a Greek physician, he notes the importance of soap as an agent in curing skin diseases.

First made in the home, soapmaking remained a household art until well into the 19th centry. When soap manufacturers began to process soap in bulk quantities, they found that the housewife was their greatest competitor. So they introduced fragrant soaps of convenient size and enclosed in wrappers to persuade the housewife that their soap was not only cheaper . . . it was better.

For a revolutionary breakthrough in soap, one doesn't have to go back far. Today, a liquid soap has been designed and formulated exclusively for shower and bath use called Shower Up. It's a good example of how far soap has come through the ages.

Cattle On Feed Numbers About Same As 1980

On October 1, Minnesota feedlots contained 310,000 cattle, 21 per cent less than July 1 but the same as last year, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service.

Placements fell four per cent below the previous quarter, but eight per cent above the previous year. Marketings increased 50 per cent above April-June period, and 18 per cent above the same quarter last year.

Farmers expect to market 190,000 cattle during the next three months (October-December), three per cent more than the actual marketings for the same period last year.

For the United States, cattle and calves on feed October 1 for slaughter market in the 23 states totaled 9.03 million head, nine per cent below the last two years. This is the lowest October 1 number on feed since 1967. All weight groups for heifers and steers are below a year earlier except the heaviest weight group of steers which is one per cent above last year.

Placements during the July-September quarter totaled 5.67 million, 11 per cent below the same quarter last year and five per cent below the comparable period in 1979. Placements for the July-September 1981 quarter were the lowest since 1974. Other disappearance of 281,000 head leaves net placements of 5.39 million. Marketings of fed cattle for slaughter during July-September totaled 5.93 million, up four per cent from the same quarter last year but one per cent below July-September of 1979.

Learn How To Survive Hotel Fire

Surviving a hotel fire begins the minute you check in, according to the Minnesota safety council. Walk down the corridor and find the fire exits. Check the exits to make sure they are usable. Count the doorways and any other features between your room and the exits. If the hotel has a fire alarm system, find the nearest fire alarm.

It's important to know the layout of your room because you may have to stay in it if smoke in the corridor cuts off your escape. Place your room key close to where you sleep so you can find it easily. Try the windows to know whether they will open and can be used as a fire escape.

If a fire begins in your room, report it to the telephone operator immediately. Then only try to put it out if you're sure you can handle it. If you are at all in doubt, get out of your room and close the door behind you to keep smoke and flames out of the corridor. Sound the alarm and arouse your neighbors.

If a fire starts in another part of the building, you will probably be alerted by an alarm, a telephone call or sounds of distrubance in the corridors. Here's what to do: Grab your key and go to the door. If there is smoke in the room, roll out of bed and crawl to the door (stay low, smoke and deadly gases rise). Feel the door with the plam of your hand. If the door is hot, don't open it.

If the door is not hot, open slowly and be ready to slam it shut if necessary. If the hall is clear, walk to the nearest exit. If there is smoke in the corridor, crawl into the hallway and close the door behind you. Stay close to the wall so you can count the doorways to the exit. Walk down to ground level; hold on to handrails for guidance and protection in stairwells. If fire or smoke is dense at lower levels, turn around and walk up to clearer air or to the roof if it is accessible.

If your room door is hot or smoke is dense in hallways, stay in your room. Open a window to vent the room. Let someone know you are there. If the telephone works, call for help. Hang a bed sheet out the window to signal firefighters. Fill the rub with water. Wet towls and sheets to put them around the doors and cracks if smoke seeps in. Get fresh air through the open window. If your room becomes filled with smoke and you're unable to breathe, as a last resort head for the closest exit, but remember to keep low.

Alternate was Laura Amoit of Red Lake Falls. Kyle will advance to the state contest to be held in Alexandria on November 21.

Awards Earned In Wool Sewing

Three division winners earned advancement to state competition when the District I Make It Yourself With Wool contest was conducted Saturday at Northland community college in Thief River Falls.

Selected for advancement were Collette Thune, Thief River Falls, junior division; Kyle Pearson, Georgetown, senior division; and Mrs. Marilyn Hanson, Thief River Falls, adult division. Susie Thune of Thief River Falls won the pre-teen division but there is no state competition for that age group.

39 Per Cent Of NCC Students Over Age 22

Present enrollment figures released by the Minnesota higher education coordinating board indicate that Northland community college, Thief River Falls is playing an increasingly important role in the provision of educational services to older nontraditional students as well as the traditionally aged 18-22 year old college enrollees.

While 61 of the total enrollees at Northland in the fall of 1980 ranged in age from 16-22, 39 per cent were above that and of these, 35 per cent were more than 25 years of age. Part-time enrollees, in particular, represent older than traditional age groups as 127 of 253, or 50 per cent were in the older than 25 age group.

Northland dean of instruction, Sally Ihne, noted that "these figures are encouraging, as one of NCC's goals is to be of service to those individuals who, for whatever reason, have been unable to pursue higher education at the traditional time because of finances, travel or similar constraints.

Coordinator of nontraditional and adult and continuing education at Northland is Arlyne Forsberg.

All school board members have been sent a personal invitation, according to a flyer distributed by the TRFEA, but it is unknown which if any of the board members will attend. Any interested member of the public are invited to attend and participate in the forum.

2nd Ward Holds Only Contest In City's Election

Only one contest exists in the Thief River Falls city election scheduled for tomorrow. That contest is in the second ward, where Bill Hogan and Ken Murphy are competing for the seat being vacated by the retirement of Alderman Ole Engelstad.

Other incumbent city officials up for election and running unopposed include Mayor Bob Carlson, Fourth Ward Alderman Bill Penning, and Alderman At Large Dr. Don Goodrich.

City Clerk Gerald Wigness stated that the polls would be open from noon until 8 p.m. and that the city would be using a punch paper ballot system in which the voter makes his selection by poking out a hole next to the name of the candidate he wishes to vote for.

Polling places in the various wards are as follows: First Ward, Northrop School; Second and Third Wards, City Auditorium; Fourth Ward, Knox School; and Fifth Ward, Ben Franklin Middle School.

William J. Hogan, (53), 1313 Arnold Ave. North, has been a resident of Thief River Falls for 16 years, and manager of Simplot Soil Builders for 15 years. He and his wife Jean have five children. Hazardous Waste Site Is J. Carey's Back Yard GRAVEL DEPOSITS are scattered throughout the land farmed by Joe Carey in Section 33 of Espelie township of Marshall county — one of three sections being considered by the Minnesota waste management board as a hazardous waste disposal site. Carey maintains that the board is ignoring its own criteria in site selection, still considering the Espelie township site although it floods, often, contains porous soils, and harbors a farm building site (Carey's own farm house) and a cemetery.

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Joe Carey isn't pleased by the fact that a public agency seems to be interested in about half of his farm. The agency is the state waste management board and interest is due to 480 acres of Carey's land laying in a proposed area for a hazardus waste disposal site.

"I don't think much of the idea at all," Carey said in an interview last week. "I've filled out all the forms they sent me and I supplied them with information about the property that shows it isn't suitable for what they want. But that doesn't seem to make any difference. I think they plan to put that thing where they get the least squawk from the people."

The area in question in a three square mile area which comprises sections 33, 34 and 35 of Espelie township in eastern Marshall county. The sections extend westward from County Road 54, commonly known as the Grygla road which connects highways 89 and 1. Of the 1,920 acres of land in the three sections, the Minnesota department of natural resources controls 1,080 and four private land owners hold 840.

The three square mile area is one of 20 proposed candidate areas in the state being considered as possible sites for a hazardous waste disposal facility. The number of potential sites is being reduced according to application of criteria adopted by the board. By May of 1982 the board expects to select six candidate sites in six different counties.

Of the 840 acrea privately owned in the proposed area, Carey owns 520. They comprise about half of his farm operation and include his residential building site with a modern home, grain bins and other buildings. For a time the house has been rented to other occupants, but Carey expects to move back into it within the next several weeks.

Other property owners in the area include Lloyd Wiseth, 40 acres; Walter Quam, 240 acres; and Lloyd Mosher, 80 acres. In each of the sections, 280 acres are privately owned and 360 acres are owned by the DNR.

Property owners in the proposed site recently received letters from Robert G. Dunn, chairman of the waste management board, pointing out that they have been identified as "a property owner within one of the 20 acres, based on the most current available county courthouse records". A questionnaire to verify accuracy of the records was included with the letter.

"These 20 siting areas are not the 'final' candidates for a hazardous waste disposal site," Dunn states in the letters. "The areas are 'proposed' and a great deal of work remains to be done in order to analyze each area and determine its suitability, acceptability of unsuitability for a possible hazardous waste disposal site.

". . . In order to obtain the information needed to accurately analyze the 'proposed candidate areas', exploratory drillings will be undertaken at various sites. Property owned by some of the landowners within the proposed candidate areas will — in November, December and early January — be subject to these 'soil borings'. The soil borings will help in analyzing the natural conditions of the areas and determining whether they are suitable or unsuitable for a hazardous waste disposal site," Dunn's letter states.

"The drillings will be made under careful supervision to ensure that no property is damaged. In addition, payments will be made for the drillings to the landowners affected, based on prior arrangements with the individual property owners. Residents whose property is involved in the soil borings will be personally contacted ahead of time by a board representative, and landowners will be provided with a copy of the drilling results.

"In a public process such as the waste management board's siting of a hazardous waste disposal facility, rumors and misinformation can often spread within the areas involved. Through frequent and personal contact with you and other residents in

COUNTY DITCH 20 carries nearly all of the run-off water for the three-mile area in Espelie township being considered by the Minnesota waste management board as a hazardous waste disposal site. Ditch 20 empties into the Thief river, which flows into Thief River Falls and provides part of the city's water supply. This view is from a bridge a mile north of the northwest corner of the proposed hazardous waste disposal area.

Annual ADA Meeting Set Here Nov. 11

Dairy farmers throughout Pennington county are invited to attend the annual county meeting of the American dairy association (ADA) of Minnesota November 11 at Florences' cafe, Thief River Falls Dinner, served at noon, will be followed by an in-depth discussion of programs important to Minnesota dairy farmers.

County ADA board members will lead the group

Cleve Johnson, Battle Lake, ADA of Minnesota area representative, will provide an update on new state and national programs promoting dairy products.

Current members of the Pennington county board are Marvin Koop, chairman; Clarence Swanson, vice chairman; Howard Person, secretary-treasurer; Dale Ayers and Duane Vatsaas, producer delegates, and John Erickson (Red Lake Falls) and Mitch Swanson, alternate producer delegates.

County Welfare Levy $430,000

Local levy for the operation of the Pennington county social services department for 1982 will be $430,000 — about 20 per cent of the total county expenditure for its welfare program, according to Gary Erickson, executive director of the department.

Approved in early October by the county welfare board and at mid-month by the county board of commissioners, the local levy represents an 11.4 per cent increase over the $386,000 levy of a year ago. The 1982 local levy includes $250,000 for income maintenance programs and $180,000 for social services while the 1981 levy included $220,000 for income maintenance and $166,000 in social services.

While the local levy increased by 11.4 per cent, the cash effect on the county welfare budget will be noted in an anticipated reduction in fund balance. While the beginning balance for 1981 was $183,600, the projected balance for 1982 is only $114,400.

Welfare funds paid out through the county office in 1982 are budgeted at $1,983,400 in comparison with $1,797,387 in 1981 — an increase of $186,013.

But the greatest expenditure in the welfare program — medical assistance — is paid primarily by the state and is not included in the county budget. Medical assistance of $116,000 is included in the county expenditure budget for 1982 but approximates only 4.5 per cent of the total expenditure.

County expenditure budget for 1982 by department with 1981 comparative figures listed in parentheses is as

Thackham And Johnson Vows Said in Michigan

Marriage vows were exchanged recently at the Seminary chapel on the campus of Andrews University at Berrien Springs, Mich., by Brigitte Marguerite Thackham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Thackham of Fenton, Mich., and Dean Leland Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lavern Johnson of rural Thief River Falls.

Elder William Richardson officiated at the candlelight ceremony. Pedrito Maynard-Reid, a friend of the couple, was the organist, playing the traditional wedding march. During the ceremony, the bride's brother, Richard P.M. Thackham, played the trumpet solos: "Somewhere," and "Trumpet Voluntary."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a gown of white polyester organza over taffeta. The empire bodice, appliqued with Venice lace with pearl trim, was styled with a scooped neckline, short sleeves, and tapered peplum edged with lace. Matching lace graced the edge of her skirt and chapel-length train. Her fingertip veil of bridal illusion was held by a Camelot headpiece of Venice lace embroidered with seed pearls. She also wore white crocheted wrist-length gloves. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow silk roses, white carnations and lilies of the valley.

Kathleen Dawn Thackham attended her sister as maid of honor. Bridesmaid was Elizabeth Laughlin, a friend of the bride. Both are residents of Berrien Springs. They wore yellow floor-length gowns with pleated skirts and carried silk bouquets, similiar to the bride's.

Serving as flower girl was Sara Price, Cicero, Ind., a friend of the couple. She wore a yellow dotted Swiss floor-length gown, trimmed with yellow eyelet lace ruffles and yellow ribbon.

Bible boy was Zachariah Spruill, a friend of the couple. He wore a yellow sailor suit trimmed with white, and a yellow rosebud boutonniere.

The groom was attended by his brothers: Gary S. Johnson of Berrien Springs as best man, and Keith Johnson, Minneapolis, as groomsman. Richard P.M. Thackham, Fenton, Mich., a brother of the bride, was usher. All wore summer brown cut-away tuxedos with brown bow ties and cummerbunds. Their boutonnieres were yellow silk rosebuds, lilies of the valley and flocked fern.

The mother of the bride was attired in a gown of peach chiffon complemented by a corsage of white roses. The mother of the groom wore a gown of ivory and peach floral print with a corsage of peach colored flowers.

Special guests at the wedding were Mrs. Marguerite Mills, Ithaca, Mich., grandmother of the bride; Gerald Thackham of St. Petersburg; Fla., and Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Wolf, Itheca, Mich., uncles and aunt of the bride; Mrs. Pauline Baltz, San Gabriel, Calif., sister of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. David Farbo and Candy of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Schwerzfeier, Hallock, and Gordon Johnson, Lancaster, uncles and aunts of the groom.

A reception followed with Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Macomber, cousins of the bride as host and hostess. Mrs. Lori Hunt, sister of the bride, was at the guest book. The groom's sister, Mrs. Pauline Balta, and his aunt, Mrs. Helen Schwerzfeier, cut and served the triple-tiered applespice wedding cake, iced in beige with a white lace overlay. To correspond with the bride's chosen colors, the cake was decorated with yellow and peach colored flowers.

Also assisting at the reception were the bride's friends: Sandy Veldman, who served the punch. Peggy Block, who served ice cream, and Mrs. Sari Butler, who was at the gift table.

Following a wedding trip to Michigan's upper peninsula, Mackinac Island and Sault St. Marie, the couple is now at home at 114 First Street, Apt. 11, Berrien Springs, Mich. The bride is a graduate of Fenton high school and is completing her senior year at Andrews university, where she is also employed in the periodical department in James White library. The groom, a graduate of Maplewood academy and Andrews University, is employed by Gateway Rehabilitaion center at Berrien Springs, Mich. Denise Welk Marries Dan Comstock at Roseau

Miss Denise Welk of Warroad and Daniel Comstock of Salol exchanged marriage vows at a private wedding ceremony on September 26 at 6:00 p.m., at the Moe Lutheran church at Roseau.

The bride is the daughter of Yvonne Welk or rural Newfolden. Parents of the groom are Duane Comstock, Salol, and Shirley Heinen of Warroad.

Rev. Erling Huglen officiated at the double ring ceremony witnessed by the immediate families and a few close friends. Attending the couple were the groom's cousins, Nancy and Bill Comstock, rural Roseau.

For her wedding, the bride selected a white street-length dress topped by a burgundy vest, matching the burgundy dress worn by her maid of honor. Their corsages were of blue-tipped white carnations with the bride's carnation centered with a red rose. The groom wore a light blue suit with a navy turtle neck sweater. His boutonniere was a red rose. His attendant wore a navy blue suit with a white carnation tipped in blue pinned on his lapel.

A reception given for the couple by the bride's family was held October 11 at the Newfolden Community center. Centering the serving table was a white, three-tiered wedding cake decorated with red roses.

Sheryl Payne, a cousin of the bride, registered the guests as Linda Welk, sister of the bride, and Marg Abraham, a friend of the bride, served hot apple cider. Agnes Olson, grandmother of the bride, and Hazel Olson, an aunt, cut and served the cake. The gifts were opened by the bride and groom.

Following a wedding trip to Grand Forks, N.D., the couple is at home at Salol, where the groom is engaged in farming.

The bride is a graduate of Lincoln high school and Northland Community college Thief River Falls, and the Lake Area Vo-tech, Watertown, S.D. She is employed by Marvin Windows at Warroad. The groom is a graduate of Warroad high school and the Navy Nuclear Power program. Photo, Margo Peterson, Thief River Falls.

Smart Shoppers Learn Ways To Cut Costs

The closer you can buy foods to their original forms, the greater the savings. Smart shoppers look for ways to bypass the processing and distribution steps — steps that are reflected in the price of the food item, notes Laurence Hursh, M.D., consultant to the national dairy council.

Sometimes that means buying vegetables and fruits fresh instead of canned or frozen. Other times, it means buying whole cuts of meat and doing the butchering yourself.

A University of Arizona study has revealed where nine per cent of the groceries we buy end up — in the garbage or down the disposal.

One way of eliminating food waste in the home is by dividing and storing foods in serving portions. Hamburger patties, for instance, can be made from a package of ground beef and then wrapped and put in the freezer. That way, you can defrost them as you need them — and only as many as you need.

Balanced nutrition means eating every day from the four food groups — milk, meat, fruits and vegetables, grains. But does that mean you have to serve four different dishes at every meal to make certain that you — and your family — are adequately nourished?

Not at all. There are plenty of ways to combine the four food groups in single-dish meals. For instance, there's casserole and stew. Even pizza can be a complete nutrition meal. Use your imagination and experiment.

Nutrition questions for Dr. Hursh may be sent to "Nutrition for Today," P.O. Box 721, Rosemont, IL 60018. Answers to questions will appear in future columns.

Pay Hike Given County Board, Some Workers

Some Pennington county employees were granted an eight and a half per cent salary increase, and the board of commissioners raised their own per diems from $35 to $45 at their regular meeting held Tuesday in board rooms at the Pennington county courthouse, according to county auditor Ken Olson.

The salary increase, which becomes effective the first of next year, would affect road and bridge and revenue employees, but would not include law enforcement, union members and welfare employees, whose salaries will be set at a different time. Employees will also receive normal step scale increases during their first five years.

Olson pointed out that the per diem which was raised $10 is an amount which the board members receive for attending meetings other than regularly scheduled board meetings.

According to Olson, most of the meeting was spent discussing budgets and salaries, although no levies were set.

In other business, the county board:

+Set a maximum amount of $125 per month which the county will contribute toward family health insurance policies of county employees;

+Approved a $15,500 appropriation to the Pennington county soil and water conservation service, which is $500 more than the unit was given last year;

+Passed a resolution supporting the Pennington county emergency board, in a disaster declaration made so that farmers can get low interest loans through FHA; and

+Set the next county board meeting for November 13, due to a conflict with an Association of Minnesota Counties convention on November 10.

Wheat Council Buys Alcohol-Powered Car

Minnesota wheat research and promotion council has provided a grant to the Minnesota alcohol fuels association for the purchase of an experimental automobile that runs on ethyl alcohol. According to Einer Satter, chairman of the Minnesota wheat council from Norcross, the car, a new Ford Corcel Belina, was recently imported from Brazil and is the first imported assembly line Ford automobile completely engineered for burning alcohol.

According to Satter, the automobile will be utilized during a two-year period specifically to determine the applicability of using alcohol fuels under cold weather conditions. The tests will be conducted by Glen Kiecker, executive administrator of the Minnesota alcohol fuels association. Evaluations will be made on pollution emmissions, mileage, cold weather drivability and maintenance, and other tests utilizing different qualities of alcohol.

"One of our primary interests is to check the environmental aspects of ethyl alcohol or ethynol as a fuel," Satter said. "We are sure that a simple mixture of 90 per cent alcohol and 10 per cent water could completely solve the carbon monoxide problems in downtown areas of major cities in the United States," he said.

Alcohol burning engines have been available for some time but problems have existed with the cost and availability of aocohol, and the production of automobiles that burn alcohol, Satter reports. Recently quite a number of automobiles have been converted from gasoline to alcohol in the U.S., but the council had to look to Brazil, where a lot of work has been done on alcohol fuels, to find an automobile that was specifically engineered to burn ethyl alcohol.

The alcohol automobile will be on display at the Minnesota wheat growers annual convention November 18-19 at the Hawaiian Inn in Moorhead. "What we are trying to do with the automobile is to give it a good hard test here in Minnesota to determine and to dramatize the possibilities that alcohol fuels, made from grains and other material, offer to the public," Satter said.

Questions On Spondylitis Are Answered

Ankylosing spondylitis is a disease involving the sacroiliac joints, according to the Arthritis foundation. Until recently it was thought to affect men far more frequently than women, but improved diagnostic techniques disclose that both sexes can be its victims, a foundation spokesman reported.

Disease usually strikes in the teens or early twenties and is often mistaken for specific, localized ailments like "disc disease," but it is a general body illness, accompanied by weakness, fatigue and often other arthritic symptoms.

Relief from the pain of the disease is sought by stooping over. If this flexed position, with the back and neck bent, is continued, back joints may become fused and erect posture cannot be resumed.

During November the message center at the Arthritis foundation has a special message on ankylosing spondylitis. It may be heard by calling their toll-free number, 1-800-552-1278. Questions on spondylitis and other kinds of arthritis will be answered.

This free message center if one of the foundation's services made possible in most Minnesota communities by United Fund support.

KITCHEN KARNIVAL

Featuring recipes from the Kitchen of

Beattie Mickelson
Route 1
Goodridge

Beattie Mickelson, who has worked for many years in the 4-H club program, is very concerned about food waste, especially this time of the year. She said, "In place of tossing all the jack-o-lanterns into the garbage cans, they should be converted into pumpkin. The process is very simple. Peal the pumkin, cut into pieces and boil, like potatoes. When tender, drain off the water and mash with a potato masher. Place over low heat and simmer, until thick and most of the moisture has evaporated. Stir to prevent scorching." She does not recommend using a blender as pumpkin should be solid packed and not filled with air. When pumpkin has been cooled, it is ready for use in pies, bars, muffins, breads, or doughnuts. Her recipe for muffins follows.

Bran Pumpkin Muffins

1½ cups all purpose flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
One-third to ½ cup sugar
1 cup all bran cereal
Two-thirds cup milk
1 cup solid pumpkin
1 egg
One-third to ½ cup shortening
6 cups raisins, optional

Method: Sift flour, baking powder, spices and sugar and set aside. Combine all bran, milk and pumpkin in a bowl. Stir and let stand for two minutes. Add egg and shortening and beat well. Add flour mixture and raisins and spoon into greased muffin tins or cup cake liners. Bake in a 400 degree oven for about 35 minutes. Makes about 15 muffins.

Beattie Mickelson is a crossing guard for the Thief River Falls school district. In addition to her work, she raises chickens, turkeys and geese, tends flower and vegetable gardens and enjoys various types of crafts. She is also a volunteer 4-H club worker and teaches Sunday school at Bethany Lutheran church, rural Thief River Falls.

thief river falls chamber of commerce

REPORT

Your Chamber of Commerce in Thief River Falls conducted a session for the purpose of making Thief River Falls a better place in which to live, to work, and to raise a family. The meeting was held on Saturday, October 24, which several business leaders from Thief River Falls, who were also joined by representatives from Red Lake Falls and Crookston attended. Milt Fletcher from the United States Chamber of Commerce assisted the chamber in a board retreat setting short and long range goals and priorities.

The session began at 8 a.m. at Northland community college. Our leading community business leaders suggested 370 ideas which they felt would make Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls, Crookston, Northwestern Minnesota and Minnesota a better place in which to live, work and raise a family. Leading the list were job development, economic development, taxes, transportation, worker's compensation, unemployment compensation, expanding the tourism market, informing the community on the attributes of this area and impact on present business in Thief River Falls.

The next step will be to get ideas categorized and assigned to the committees and task forces of the chamber of commmerce. Each committee or task force will then arrange them in priorities and divide them into short and long range goals. Each group will also identify what needs to be done in each area in order to arrive at measurable attainable goals for 1982 and the future.

Thief River Falls chamber of commerce board of directors at the regular monthly meetings held in November suggested that the chamber supply information to the Times weekly in order to keep the community up to date on chamber happenings. This column is the first attempt at that task.

The 1982 annual meeting for the chamber of commerce has been advanced to Saturday, January 9, to give the 1982 president a full 12 months of opportunity. Dick King and his classic swing band will provide entertainment after the meeting which will be held at the Thief River Falls armory. Mark your calendar now and watch for more details.

Dear Readers,
When the original Smokey the Bear passed away, his 250 pound body was flown to New Mexico for burial at Smokey Bear Historical State Park. When a human death occurs away from home, one wonders why some folk criticize the expense of bringing the body home for funeral service and burial in the family cemetery plot.
Respectfully,
Belmont Funeral Home

Charge SBA Waste Due To No Bidding

Small Business Administration (SBA) involvement in federal procurement through the 8 (a) program continues to waste millions in tax dollars when federal agencies are looking for ways to make appropriations go farther, the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC) charges.

AGC cites recent cases which it says demonstrate cost savings possible when open competitive bidding is used rather than preference programs such as 8(a).

For a highway relocation, Elephant Butte, ID. (Federal Highway Administration) the 8(a) negotiated price was $3,024,000; the low competitive bid was $2,355,000; for a savings of $669,000 or 22 per cent.

For an environmental test facility, Yuma, AZ. (Army Corps of Engineers) the 8(a) price had been $1,839,872; the low bid was $1,558,884; for a savings of $280,988 or 15 per cent.

For a flood wall project, Delta, LA. (Army Corps of Engineers) the 8(a) price was $416,000; the low bid was $188,950; for a savings of $227,050 or 55 per cent.

For a water supply project, Riverton, Wy. (Bureau of Reclamation) the 8(a) price was $580,000; the low bid was $353,812; for a savings of $226,188 or 39 per cent.

Under the 8(a) program, SBA awards contracts for federal projects through sole-source negotiation with a "socially and economically disadvantaged small business" firm. This process generally precludes any comparison with the prices available through open competitive bidding. In the cases above, however, procurement agencies have decided that the 8(a) firm's offer was too high and have solicited bids through the open competitive bid system. Only in rare instances, such as the four cited above, have valid cost comparisons become available.

AGC points out that the $1.4 million saved on these four projects represents only a small fraction of the tax dollars that could be saved if the 8(a) program were taken out of federal construction procurement.

"These examples have surfaced only because the procuring agencies decided to draw the line in these cases," said AGC executive vice president Hubert Beatty. "In most cases, the comparison never is made. But as we have told the agencies, SBA and Congress repeatedly, the open competitive bidding process is the only means to ensure the maximum return on federal funds invested in construction projects."

AGC has testified before Congress three times during the past six months on various aspects of the 8(a) program, and has asked that the program be removed from construction because it does not develop competitiveness among small construction firms it is designed to help, and because in certain areas small firms outside the program are being deprived of market share due to disproportionate numbers of projects — particularly army corps of engineers projects — being reserved for 8(a).

AGC's criticism of the 8(a) preference program was substantiated last spring in a report by the General Accounting Office (GAO), the investigative arm of Congress. GAO found that the 8(a) program, during its 12-year history, has "served as a haven for a few chosen firms that receive substantial sole-source contracts and have no incentive to leave the program." GAO pointed out, as AGC has, that SBA had become more concerned with increasing dollar volume of contracts going to 8(a) firms than with helping the maximum number of 8(a) firms become competitive.

Beltrami Aid Improvements Up For Bids

Up for bids the week of November 16 will be federal-aid improvements in Beltrami, Goodhue and Lyon counties, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) announced, acting for the counties.

In Beltrami county, improvements call for reinforced concrete pipe arch culverts to be installed on County Road 703 at a ditch three miles east of Grygla, and on Township Road 451 at a ditch two miles east of Grygla.

Bids will be received until 4 p.m., November 17, by county auditor Jim Thoreen at the Beltrami county courthouse in Bemidji.

Carlson Living In Courage Residence

James Matthew Carlson, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Carlson of Thief River Falls, is currently living in Courage residence. Disabled from a 1980 auto accident, he hopes to learn how to live more independently through the residence's therapeutic program.

Courage residence is a transitional residence for adults with physical disabilities which adjoins Courage center, a United Way-affiliated regional rehabilitation organization in the Minneapolis suburb of Golden Valley.

Men and women from throughout the United States who are severely disabled enter Courage residence each year. They often leave behind a life of dependence and isolation, and enter the program to learn the skills necessary for living as independently as possible in the community.

Their goals are self-directed, implemented by a contract system entered into upon admission to the residence. The contract, which spells out the resident's specific program, is signed by the resident and his or her staff team, and reviewed monthly. For some residents, this system represents a first step in taking responsibility for their own lives.

Residents puruse their goals through a combination of counseling, therapies, instruction in daily living skills, continued education and career exploration and development, while living in a relaxed, dormitory-like atmosphere. The non-institutional atmosphere fosters an attitude of self-reliance and personal decision making.

Courage residence is open to adults with physical disabilities regardless of race, religion or ability to pay. Information is available by writing to the administrator, Courage Residence, 3915 Golden Valley Road, Golden Valley, MN 55422, or by calling (612) 588-0811.

Solar-Powered RR Signals To Be Installed

Minnesota's first solar-powered railroad crossing signals will be installed at the intersection of TH 114, northwest of Lowry, and the Soo Line railroad company line, said Commissioner Richard P. Braun, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

Solar-powered railroad crossing signals may solve the problem of providing signals in isolated rural areas where there are no electric lines nearby to provide electric service, he said. Cost of running an electric line to provide power for one railroad crossing signal in such areas would be very expensive, Braun said.

Solar-powered flashing light signals with gate arms will replace rail crossing signs presently used on TH 114. Solar energy is stored in a battery so the signal system will be operable day or night. Installation will begin the spring of 1982, with completion expected in the summer.

If the solar energy signals prove to be effective and cost efficient, Mn-DOT will consider the possibility of establishing solar-powered signals in similar locations, Braun said.

Project costs $60,000 and is being funded with 90 per cent federal and 10 per cent state funds.

Hazardous Waste Site Is Carey Yard

the months ahead we are confident we will be able to keep you fully and accurately informed of the board's activities.

"One common assumption that we wish to dispel is the belief that the waste management board will site a hazardous waste 'dump'," chairman Dunn writes. "The board is working to help bring an end to the improper hazardous waste dumping which now threatens Minnesotans, and will find safe and acceptable solutions to managing hazardous wastes.

"One of these solutions may include a suitable and effectively-monitored hazardous waste disposal facility. That facility would provide for the secure containment of treated hazardous wastes which cannot be totally reprocessed, incinerated, safely stored or recycled. Measures will be taken in the construction and operation of the facility to ensure the health and safety of Minnesotans."

It's not that Carey and other landowners want to call Dunn a liar, but they are more than a little skeptical of the board's impartiality in site selection and the safe containment of hazardous waste for an indefinite period.

And lest Thief River Falls residents think they need not concern themselves with an eastern Marshall county problem, they better think again. The area in question floods frequently, the water drains away through County Ditch 20, and that ditch empties into the Thief river which flows into Thief River Falls. It is part of the city's source of its water supply.

"Maybe there wouldn't be any problem or any danger," Carey suggests. "Maybe nothing would be done with the site for a long time and maybe if it is used there is nothing to worry about. But I don't think anybody really knows for sure, and that's enough to bother me."

Another thing that bothers Carey is that it seems the waste management board is ignoring its own criteria for site selection. One is to avoid wetlands, flood plains and shorelands. Another is to be most protective of groundwater resources.

The land floods during most spring seasons, he says. Furthermore, it has a wide variety of soil types, including porous sand and gravel deposits. "I don't think you could find 20 acres in any spot on the whole piece with the same kind of soil," he said. He and farmers living around the area fear potential contamination of groundwater supplies.

There is also a cemetery on the proposed site, located next to the stone foundation of a church which reportedly burned down years ago. Trees now grow where the church once stood but a number of gravestones mark the cemetery site. Most recent grave, according to the markers, appears to have been used in 1955.

"Cemeteries are another thing the board says it wants to avoid in establishing a site," Carey said.

Apart from the potential for pollution and contamination at some future point, Carey is concerned about the near future. If the board selects the site for acquisition and he loses his 480 acres and building site by negotiated sale or condemnation, his farming operation is in jeopardy.

"You need about 1,000 acres for a reasonable farm out here," he said. "There isn't a lot of land available if I would want to replace what I might lose, and I'm not sure I'd want to live next to a hazardous waste site anyway. I wouldn't look forward to going someplace else to start over even if I could. I'd just as soon keep what I've got."

On an even more immediate basis, Carey is undecided whether or not to go back into the cattle business. "I'd like to buy 100 or 125 head of beef cows, but I don't have any idea how fast this thing is gonna move," he said. "It looks right now like I'm just going to have to sit tight and see what happens.

"But I don't have to like it, and I'll tell the world I don't."

Crime Index Shows 3 Per Cent Increase

The FBI's crime index showed a three per cent increase in volume during the first six months of 1981, as compared to the same period in 1980, Attorney General William French Smith announced.

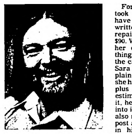
According to Uniform crime report statistics released by FBI Director William H. Webster, the first quarter of 1981 registered a seven per cent rise in the index over the same three months of 1980. The second quarter, as compared to its corresponding period in 1980, showed a two per cent decrease.

Collectively, violent crimes reported to law enforcement rose five per cent in the first half of the year from year-earlier levels. Murder increased four per cent, robbery jumped 11 per cent, and both forcible rape and aggravated assault were up one per cent.

Property crimes, as a group, were up two per cent in volume. Burglary rose five per cent, and larceny-theft increased two per cent. Motor vehicle theft, the only index crime to show a decrease, fell four per cent. Valid trend information for arson, the fourth property crime, will be available next year when the preliminary 1981 annual crime figures are released.

All city population groupings registered rises in the total Crime Index, with cities having between 250,000 and 499,999 inhabitants showing the greatest increase, five per cent. Cities outside metropolitan areas reported a two per cent rise; the suburban areas recorded a one per cent upturn; and the rural areas showed no change from the same six-month period a year ago.

Among the four geographic regions, the southern states recorded a four per cent rise, the northeastern state a three per cent increase, the north central states a two per cent upturn, and the western states a one per cent increase.



JAY GJERNES, son of Earl Gjernes, Thief River Falls, will play the role of the Archbishop of Canterbury in the upcoming University of Minnesota theatre production of "The Life of King Henry V," scheduled October 30 through November 15 in the Stoll Thrust theatre in Rarig Center on the west bank of the Minneapolis campus. Shakespearean drama focuses on a war between England and France that results in an engagement between Henry and Princess Katherine of France. Within its historical framework, the story deals with the transition of a young man into adulthood, and follows him as he learns to take responsibility and face love and the death of friends. Gjernes, a junior in theater arts at the university, is a 1968 graduate of Lincoln high school, Thief River Falls. He has appeared in "A Doll's House," at Northland community college, Thief River Falls, and in "Servant of Two Masters" at the University theatre.

Law Protects Consumer From Repair Ripoffs

Under a new Minnesota law, consumers are now protected against unwarranted charges or "rip offs" for auto, home, TV and appliance repairs when such repairs are over $50 and under $2000, done in a repair shop, or part of service done under a warranty.

Under the Truth in Repairs Act, consumers now have the right to receive a written estimate of cost for such repairs before the repair is started. Once this written estimate is made, the shop cannot charge more than 10 per cent over the estimated cost of the bill. If the shop cannot repair the item for the estimated cost, it must either accept the amount of the estimate plus 10 per cent as payment in full, or put the object back into its original condition and charge only a reasonable estimation fee.

For example, Sara Johnson took her car to a garage to have the fuel pump fixed. The written estimate from the repairman placed the cost at $90. When she came to pick up her car, he told her other things were also wrong with the car and her bill was $199. Sara refused to pay, explaining that under the law she had to pay him only the $90 plus $9 (10 per cent over the estimate), and if he didn't like it, he had to put the car back into its original condition. She also noted he was required to post an explanation of the law in his shop. He agreed to charge her the $99. It pays to know the law!

Sugar Company Hurt By Strike And Weather

October's freezing temperatures and above average rainfall, combined with continuing disastrously low sugar prices and a September strike by factory workers, have dealt the 1,700 grower members of American Crystal Sugar company a $50,000,000 headache, states Al Bloomquist, the company's vice president for public affairs.

With some 2,000,000 tons of an estimated 5,000,000-ton beet crop still in the ground and subjected to seven consecutive below freezing days, growers were told by their cooperative that a projected $25 per ton payment for 1981 crop beets had shrunk to an estimated $15 a ton, a $50,000,000 lost attributed to the weather, the low price and the September strike.

In a letter to growers following a special meeting of the cooperative's board of directors on Tuesday, October 27, growers were told that the original estimated value of $25 per ton was based on a beet containing 15.7 per cent sugar with factory recovery of 226 pounds of sugar per ton harvested. As a result of the seven-day freeze, the new estimated value of $15 per ton is based on 14.9 per cent sugar content in the beets and a recovery of 194 pounds of sugar per ton harvested.

The frost stopped the accumulation of sugar in the beets, will undoubtedly cause more than normal losses of sugar during storage, increased receiving costs (for both the co-op and the grower) and will result in more sugar losses to pulp and molasses.

The company returned to its normal 24-hour-a-day harvest schedule early Wednesday and will continue to receive beets on that schedule as long as the weather cooperates. Normally, all beets are lifted by October 25.

Charles D. Shamel, American Crystal president and chief executive officer, said the situation facing the company would probably force a non-co-op company out of business. He blamed the low sugar prices, which make the situation even gloomier, on the uneconomic marketing practices of the highly subsidized European Economic Community sugar program.

European beet producers and processors are guaranteed prices that ensure profitability, and they have expanded production to a point where they have so much excess sugar to dump on the world market they have made a mockery of the so called "free market", Shamel said.

American Crystal is the nation's largest beet sugar cooperative with five plants in the Red River valley of Minnesota and North Dakota.

RLF Residents Complete U.S. Army Training

Two 1981 graduates of Lafayette high school, Red Lake Falls, recently completed one station unit training (OSUT) at the U.S. army infantry school, Fort Benning, GA.

Students are Pvt. 1 Gary J. Pfann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Pfann; and Pvt. Philip C. MacGregor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald A. MacGregor, all of Red Lake Falls.

OSUT is a 12-week period which combines basic combat training and advanced individual training.

Training includes weapons qualifications, squad tactics, patrolling, landmine warfare, field communications and combat operations. Completion of this course qualifies the soldier as a light-weapons infantryman and as an indirect fire crewman.

Soldiers are taught to perform any of the duties in a rifle or mortar squad.

The first strike by master craftsmen was a protest in 1659 by New York City bakers against the low prices they were receiving for their goods, according to "Labor Firsts in America," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Guest Editorial

Robert P. Van Tries, formerly assistant commissioner of education in Minnesota and responsible for the state's vocational education program, is now retired but retains a keen interest in his former field.

"Since I have retired," he wrote in a letter to the Times editor, "I feel I have had my constitutional freedoms restored. . . The situation as I describe has existed for a long time and the state board, legislature and commissioner of education have had many opportunities to correct the situation. . ."

Mr. Van Tries is perhaps as knowledgeable about the vocational program as any person in the state. He has given permission for his letter to state legislators "from those district where the students have been locked out of AVTI job training programs because of K-12 teachers strikes" to be published as a guest editorial. The letter follows:

After the present wave of teachers strikes has concluded, I assume there will be a review of the labor laws with the intent to legislate improvements. If such a review takes place, I hope the following comments will be considered in your deliberations.

Som concerns that should be addressed are:

(1) The local school district having an AVTI has a greater economic and financial responsibility to the students enrolled in the AVTI than they do to the elementary-secondary children. Persons attending an AVTI are paying substantial tuition to attend classes. The K-12 students are not. Some AVTI students are working against a time deadline to meet licensure requirements. A strike can delay the completion of a program and exam by many months.

More important is the fact that a large number of AVTI students may receive family maintenance benefits from a veterans program of a similar program. The rules usually require daily attendance in order to qualify for these payments. Since payments stop when attendance stops, whole families may be left without funds because of a teachers strike. The victim is the AVTI student.

(2) K-12 negotiations are primarily concerned with the issues of teachers and management of the elementary-secondary programs. Very few issues apply to the post-secondary. The master contract will apply to all. Very seldom is there an issue which could not be better handled by separate negotiations. Schedules are different as are school calenders and work hours. The state through its appropriation process dictates some of the decisions that contribute to the difference.

(3) Most K-12 children are nonmobile. They will be present when the strike is over and most will be enrolled in the same classes because of the compulsory attendance laws or because of the economic realities of living at home in the school district. AVTI students, on the other hand, are adults and move to jobs or other institutions when they are locked out of classes because of a teachers strike.

Since the AVTI's income is dependent on attendance, the loss of returning students at the end of the strike could causé a crisis. The presence of the AVTI under these conditions is an additional weapon in the strike arsenal to be used by the parties in the strike; a weapon not available to 404 other districts in the state.

(4) The K-12 systems have resources and flexibility in the use of these resources which the AVTI's do not have. The local district has access to local tax dollars which the AVTI's do not have. Furthermore, the AVTI's are not permitted to retain any surplus monies from year to year since these are tax dollars applied to the next year's aids. Therefore, the AVTI's have limited funds with which to discharge obligations during a strike.

(5) The money a school district spends on the operation of an AVTI is 100 per cent state dollars. The negotiated strike settlement applies to all teachers including the post-secondary AVTI faculty. This makes the state and taxpayers outside the local district helpless observers in a process which directly affects the operation of a post-secondary institution and dollars appropriated by the legislature.

There has been no suggestion that the AVTI teachers should not have the right to strike or that they should not have a representation of a union of their choice. The only suggestion is that post-secondary problems are different and the consequences of a strike are different to the teacher, the student, and the institution.

It seems only reasonable that if AVTI teachers strike the reasons should be theirs. The responsibilities for the welfare of the AVTI students and families should be the concern of the parties involved in an AVTI strike. Except for the pressures these concerns can generate, they will not be the concern of the K-12 negotiators.

The number of K-12 teachers in the district compared to the number of teachers in the AVTI faculty means that the post-secondary faculty can seldom have much influance. Only when the votes are close do the AVTI numbers make a difference.

Over the past years these concerns have been made known to the commissioner of education and the state board. Several years ago the teachers strikes at Faribault and Winona provided such a chaotic situation at those AVTI's that the message should have been apparent. Neither the state board nor the commissioner felt the problem was serious enough to incur the wrath of the teachers unions by suggesting legislation to correct the problem.

Legislation should make it mandatory that AVTI faculty constitute a separate bargaining unit. This may cause an inconvenience to the local board, but if they really want to retain local governance, they should be willing to accept the responsibility.

Sincerely,
Robert P. Van Tries

MFT Viewpoint

Dick Bennett, editor of the Minnesota Federation of Teachers' "Action" publication, editorialized as follows in the current edition:

Recently, new Minnesota Commissioner of Education John Feda stirred up a hornet's nest by saying that he might favor a change to a statewide contract for all Minnesota public school teachers. Governor Quie quickly set his new appointee straight and Feda then said that he regarded statewide bargaining as an "option" but that he didn't endorse the concept. Senator Charles Berg, (IR-Chokio) wanted Feda's resignation over the matter.

The MEA wants statewide bargaining also. In case you wonder why, let us suggest some reasons for their thinking that way.

We think that the MEA, being the majority teacher union in the state, would sacrifice local bargaining and local autnomy for the chance to lock in all of Minnesota's teachers through fair share. MFT's 17,000 plus would then have to pay a fair share to MEA and President Hill' coffers would overflow.

Since the MEA will probably deplete their crisis fund this year and since even MEA members may be at the point where they may resist further large dues increases, it would afford MEA a chance to negotiate one contract rather than 300 thus making the process cheaper.

This would also help MEA in their political lobbying by blunting the teacher input into the labor movement. Grandoise, perhaps, but we don't underestimate strange political maneuverings in this day and age.

Statewide bargaining would be the death knell for local autonomy and would greatly increase state government and MEA bureaucracy. The disparity in salaries ranges from LaPorte's low MA maximum of $18,210 to Richfield's $32,172. That a difference of $13,962 and both are MEA locals. How would a statewide salary be arrived at with such existing discrepancies as those?

We hope cooler heads prevail and that the MEA doesn't get its way. Don't relax, however. The same folks who gave up meeting and conferring may still try to give us statewide bargaining and statewide fair share. They never really did like pure collective bargaining.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Asked to name their favorite Bible character, the Sunday school students responded in turn. "King Solomon," one little girl said, "because he was so kind to ladies and animals."

"Who told you that?" asked the somewhat startled teacher.

"Nobody told me," the youngster replied. "I read it myself. It says Solomon kept 700 wives and 300 porcupines."

Patient: "Doctor, are you sure this operation is absolutely necessary?"

Doctor: "Of course it is. When I got back from Bermuda I found I was three payments behind in my mortage."

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

I have waited and watched the fiasco called 'negotiations' and maintained silence about as long as I can. I feel the public is entitled to know some of the underlying causes of the current teachers' strike. I have been in public education for 28+ years and have witnessed many injustices and some deserved disciplinary acts to colleagues and friends by administrators and school boards.

As a result of discrimination, which the public would never believe, teachers organized and began to bargain for a contract which requires fair and equal treatment of all certified employees. We have worked hard to get salaries and working conditions which will provide a living and give adequate job security to attract and hold capable people as teachers.

For a while, at least, we were making progress. Teaching was attractive enough that there were teacher surpluses. Administrators could choose from applicants. The inflation rate of the past decade has eroded the take home pay very badly. Yes, the take home pay of a beginning teacher is as previously stated; and, it makes little difference whether married or single. The reduction in income tax for one extra dependent nearly offsets the withholding necessary to pay for a family health insurance plan. True, the salary earned is divided by 12 — the number of months a teacher must live in a year. It is also true the area, state, and country is experiencing a recession which makes it even harder to find a part time or seasonal job to supplement that income. As a result enrollment in teacher training programs is down and teacher shortages are evident in some fields already.

The school boards of Minnesota have been organized as the Minnesota School Board Association (MSBA) for a number of years. This organization has close ties to the law firm of Peterson, Popovich, Etal. This law firm, which has represented a number of schools in the state in negotiations, has done everything in their power to get the negotiations process drawn out so they can spend a higher percent of their time representing more schools for a fat fee.

Many of you have experienced a workman or contractor who has taken on too much work and spends a few hours per week at each site trying to keep everyone happy. Your project never seems to get finished. At our last go around with negotiations we went through this. Sixteen months to settle a two year contract is ridiculous.

As a result of this frustration we have supported legislation making the right to strike legal in the hope of getting the process speeded up. Has it helped? Only time will tell. We hoped we would never have to use it. However, our negotiations have again become a series of delaying tactics until we decided to prepare for a strike, hoping still only to get the contract settled. More delays until it seemed only the actual vote to authorize a strike might work. More delays and we walked. Are we proud of what we are doing? I detest what the public apathy has forced me to do. I am sure every teacher in the District would rather be doing what they have been trained to do. We are proud of our profession and are willing to stand up and be counted for what we feel is right.

We feel very badly about the loss of time and the effect on the education of the students who are caught in the middle. A strike, however distasteful it might be, is better than having a community develop a bad name, loose all its good teachers, and not be able to find suitable replacements because of their reputation.

When the strike ends, the teachers are still here, education will resume even at a higher level than before because the time and attention of the teachers can be focused on teaching and not on what to do to get negotiations off dead center.

Education today is expensive but the main effect is a standard of living, a freedom to enjoy, and a population that can read, write, compute and adapt. If we keep looking for something in a bargain basement, eventually that is what we will get — Bargain basement quality, or maybe a better term would be Krazy Day Special.

As a concerned parent, taxpayer and citizen of this community I am concerned with getting my money's worth. The front line, the classroom, that is where the action is. That is where education takes place; that should be priority number one when the money is spent.

Oh, yes, Dear Concerned Taxpayer, I have to disagree with you on a few points. All teaching jobs are not completely without hazards; I have some scars to prove it. One of the scars is from an automobile and semi-truck accident while traveling on school business but on my own time. I have also spent 7 years teaching in the "comfort" of a bus garage after it was abandoned by the buses.

Why don't I move, you ask? That's a cop out! Each District has its problems. I have resolved to stay here and help solve the problems here. I (we) would appreciate your support in our effort to do so.

Sincerely,
Al Dalen

To the Editor:

Due to a lack of verification, the TRF teachers have credited me with writing the Letter to the Editor in the October 21st issue of the Times. I cannot, however, take the responsiblity for writing that letter, well written though it was.

I am writing this letter on behalf of the concerned and angry parents who feel the rights of their children are being denied, parents who are paying taxes to support our education system and feel manipulated and used because their children are not in school.

I am writing this letter on behalf of the school board, elected by us to handle the affairs, economic as well as others, of our school district, a school board that is striving to do what is right and fair for the community, a school board that is torn between the demands of the teachers and the economic conditions of our community.

I am writing this letter on behalf of our TRF teachers who are using their legal right to strike and are demanding what they consider a fair wage, teachers who are feeling unsupported by the community and alienated by their friends, teachers who don't necessarily feel the strike is right but can't cross the picket line, teachers who are ignored when they do their job and ostracized when they strike.

But — most of all — I am writing this letter on behalf of our children, our elementary school children who are already three weeks behind in their studies and too young to withstand a six-day week to get caught up; our high school students who are just plain bored at home; the seniors who are hoping to graduate in May of 1982; and the ambitious, education minded AVTI students who have paid tuition for fall quarter and rent for October and November, many of whom have job offers after they graduate. I am writing this in behalf of all of our children who have a right to an education, from September to May — not June, July or August.

I am writing this letter on behalf of and as an appeal to every concerned citizen of the Thief River Falls school district.

It is time to start asking ourselves whether the $1,000 difference between the teachers' demands and the board's offer equals the worth of our children. It is time to ask ourselves, teachers, school board and citizens as well, whether the $1,000 is worth the broken friendships, lost respect and loss of integrity.

Is the welfare of our children based on economics, or is it based on love — parents' love, teachers' love — and mutual admiration and respect between both groups? What are we doing to our children, to their respect for both parents and teachers? Do we want our children basing their value of people on money, either our demand for our fair share or our refusal to give the "next guy" his due?

"Children, obey your parents," is one command of God's that we adults frequently impose on our children. What about the command of God's that says, "Fathers', do not provoke your children to anger, but bring them up in the discipline and instruction of the Lord."? (Ephesians 6:4).

What are we provoking in our children? Is it anger — or is it love?

"My children, our love should not be just words and talk, it must be true love, which shows itself in action." (I John 2:18)

Are our children worth our love?

A concerned parent and friend,
Mrs. James (Darlene)

To The Editor: Teachers: Before the strike I was earning $189.00 every two weeks (before taxes). Now, because you feel you deserve more money and are striking, my hours had to be cut and my earnings every two weeks have dropped to $94.50 (before taxes), and I'm not even connected with the school district.

What I would like to know is this — who is going to reimburse me for my lost wages? I'm trying to support three people on my salary and I found it hard before — now it's impossible.

Who gave you the right to take my child's food away? Who gave you the right to take clothes and toys away?

Which one of you is going to come over to my house on Christmas and tell my daughter, "Sorry kid, you can't have any presents this year 'cuz we teachers need more money"?

This is your fight — not mine!

You all seem to want everyone to feel sorry for you 'cuz you're only making $600 a month (most of you one heck of a lot more). Well, this is one taxpayer who will never feel sorry for you.

The school board is offering you more as a raise than I make in a year. I'm not looking for sympathy, all I'm looking for is my right to go back on full salary.

Why don't all of you teachers get off the picket line and back into school and let me get back to work.

I hope you all have a Merry Christmas 'cuz it doesn't look like we will.

Sincerely,
Sheila Panek

To The Editor:

School Board Members and Teachers:

The AVTI has 530 students enrolled and 60 new students waiting to begin classes. Have you forgotten about the 590 AVTI students who are waiting to continue their educations? Our concerns are:

What happens to our tuition fees that have already been paid? We have paid for 60 days of instruction. When do we make these days up; how do we make these days up? Graduating later than other vocational students leaves all of us at a disadvantage in obtaining a job in our professions.

Is all this going to be done at the expense of the students? It has affected students' lives in many distressing ways. With classes terminated, for example, where do we get the finances to pay the cost of living expenses? Students receiving help from various agencies such as CETA, VA and state aid have now had benefits terminated because of the strike. Every day that the strike continues students are forced to make serious decisions concerning transferring to other schools or dropping school completely just to support themsleves and-or their families.

The average student spends monthly: Rent, $100; food, $125; tuition and schooling, $170; entertainment, $100; auto expenses, $65; and miscellaneous, $25, for a total of $585. Can this community afford to lose this?

We need our education, but the community also needs us. Are we being forced to transfer to one of the other 32 AVTI's in Minnesota? Other towns would be happy to have our patronage in their businesses and schools.

We students would sincerely appreciate it if at the next meeting each of the sides drop their defenses in order to come to a mutual decision. It might help if someone swallowed a little pride.

Concerned AVTI Students,
Chris Lawrenz

To Appoint HS Junior For Japanese Visit

Senator Rudy Boschwitz will appoint an outstanding high school junior from Minnesota to visit Japan next summer to participate in a family-living experience.

"In these times when America is striving to increase its involvement in the international community, we need to increase our young people's awareness of other cultures so they will be prepared for their leadership roles in tomorrow's world," Boschwitz said.

"This unique opportunity will afford the chance for a young person to have a better understanding of international affairs while helping to improve the United States' relationship with Japan," he said.

The scholarship is funded through the government of Japan and administered by Youth for Understanding, a non-profit international student exchange organization headquartered in Washington, D.C. Each U.S. Senator appoints one student to live with a specially selected family in Japan beginning in June of 1982.

Those named to the Senate scholarship program will be brought to Washington prior to departure for four days of orientation designed to introduce them to the Japanese culture and language. The student appointed by Boschwitz will also have a chance to meet with him at that time.

While in Japan, field trips and special language seminars will be scheduled as well as a visit to Washington in the fall to attend a follow-up workshop.

Any high school juniors who would like to be considered for this program should contact their principal during the first week in November. The deadline for each school's nomination is November 27.

"This is an excellent opportunity for young people to become acquainted with another culture," Boschwitz added.

Sandy Hoff In UND Band

Sandy Hoff, Thief River Falls, performs as a flag girl in the University of North Dakota marching band under the direction of Mike Blake, lecturer in music.

After an 18-year absence, renewed interest and financial support produced a marching band, complete with new uniforms, in the fall of 1980. Students audition in the spring for the band. UND marching band, with seventy-four members, includes musicians, flag girls and a drum major. The band performs at all home games in Grand Forks and at the UND-NDSU game.

Agri-Growth Council Opposes Fee Hikes

Minnesota Agri-Growth council (MA-GC), the state's foremost agribusiness trade association, has launched an all out lobbying effort to prevent planned increases in waterway user fees. Pointing to evidence indicating massive increased per-bushel shipping costs for Minnesota's agricultural commodities, the council will campaign against the charges on both the Mississippi river and the St. Lawrence seaway.

According to MA-GC president Russel G. Schwandt, the farm organization will "carry this fight through the U.S. Senate, the House of Representatives, and right to the door of the White House in order to make our case on the injustice of these planned increased fees."

Schwandt, a former Minnesota commissioner of agriculture, is a member of the board of commissioners for the Seaway Port Authority of Duluth.

"Our calculations indicate," Schwandt said, "That some of the user fee proposals, now pending in the congress, would cost Minnesota farmers as much as 20, 25 and 30 cents per bushel more in transportation charges from Twin Cities terminals to New Orleans."

As part of the intensified lobbying effort, the MA-GC released a fact sheet with information related to the calcaulation of so-called "operation and maintenance" charges on the Mississippi river. According to the Agri-Growth information, the cost of maintenance dredging on the Mississippi has increased from 46 cents per cubic yard in 1970, to $9.50 per cubic yard in 1981. The cost increase, the MA-GC contends, is due primarily to the activities of the environmental agencies of the federal and state governments.

Taking figures from the St. Paul district of the corps of army engineers, the council states that it cost 73 cents per cubic yard for river dredging in 1974. Using an annual 12 per cent inflation factor, the cost of traditional methods of dredging in 1981 should be $1.70 per cubic yard.

"Based on our assessment," Schwandt stated, "The corps' operation and maintenance costs have skyrocketed 600 per cent since 1974, due almost entirely to environmental impacts on these costs."

The position of the farm-business organization is two-fold: First, Agri-Growth feels that commercial users should not be made to bear the full burden for the added costs of environmental regulations, for fish and wildlife efforts, and other similar costs unrelated to the commercial use of the waterways.

Secondly, the commercial waterway users are already paying a four-cent per gallon diesel fuel user tax that was added, through federal legislation, in October of 1980. That same law calls for this tax to escalate to 10 cents per gallon in 1985. Based on conservative estimates that the water carriers will consume some 700 million gallons of diesel fuel in 1985, the present law will raise $70 million dollars.

"Keep in mind," Schwandt cautioned, "that goods coming up the river — such as coal and fertilizers — will have any user fees merely added on to the cost of the goods at the time of sale. Minnesota's grain producing farmers can't do that. The market sets the price and the farmer and the country elevator must take that added 30 cents per bushel right out of their pocket. There is no pass-along of costs from the farmer to the retail consumer."

The Agri-Growth council is as concerned about the imposition of added fees on the ports of the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence Seaway as it is about fees on the Mississippi.

"Both are absolutely vital to the future viability of the agricultral economy of the upper midwest," Schwandt insists.

"The Great Lakes ports, particularly our Port of Duluth, are being treated in a wholly unjust and unfair manner by the imposition of tolls designed to keep this waterway forever in an unfavorably competitive position with East and Gulf ports," Schwandt stated.

Under pressure from these other ports, the Agri-Growth official said, the Congress in 1959 made the St. Lawrence seaway the first and only waterway built by the United States to require repayment of all construction costs. This was coupled with a "pay-as-you-go" user fee system for all administrative, operational and maintenance expenses of the seaway. These fees were imposed in the form of seaway tolls.

Minnesota Agri-Growth council is calling on the federal government to come up with an equitable fee formula that will not pit one U.S. port against another, place one region of the nation against another, allow one waterway in this country to subvert another through unfair fees and tolls.

"In addition," Schwandt said, "the Agri-Growth council joins with the Midwest Governors conference in calling on the federal government to forgive the existing construction debt of the St. Lawrence seaway and that any cost recovery for the maintenance and operation of the seaway be calculated into a uniform, federally-administered fair and equitable user fee for all ports."

Schwandt announced the council's decision to launch this new campaign in opposition to waterway user fees at a special one-day seminar on the subject held in Minneapolis. A crowd of some 65 persons participated in the conference.

Schwandt told the conference participants that the MA-GC had already commenced contacting Minnesota's Congressional delegation on the waterway user fee issue. Based on initial conversations, Schwandt said the organization had obtained assurances of support from Rep. Tom Hagedorn (R-Minn-2nd Dist.) and Rep. James Oberstar (D-Minn.-8th Dist.). Schwandt also told the group that Minnesota Governor Al Quie has been a strong opponent of the user fee increases being proposed in the Congress.

Minnesota Agri-Growth council is a statewide umbrella agribusiness trade association with close to 500 members involved in all phases of agricultural endeavor from production and processing through marketing.

Answers from the Bible by Pastor Don Peros
Q. Pastor Don, is there really coming a day when we will be judged for the way that we live?
A. Christians are sometimes accused of being so heavenly minded that they are no earthly good. But as often as not, the truth is just the opposite. We are so earthly minded that we are no heavenly good and the Christian who is no heavenly good is not likely to be much earthly good either.
Time and time again, Jesus tried to impress upon His hearers that this life is not the end, that there will come a time when we shall all have to give account of ourselves and be judged accordingly before God.
We discover that in the New Testament that there will be two judgements a thousand years apart. One for the Christian who will be judged for the way he has lived and one for the non-Christian for the way they have lived.
II Corinthians 5:10 mentions that all Christians will appear before the judgement seat of Christ; that everyone may receive the things done in his body, according to what he hath done, whether it be good or bad.
In the Book of Revelation it teaches that one thousand years after the Christian is judged for his lifestyle; that the non-Christian, those who have rejected Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour, will be judged for their lifestyle.
Revelation 20:12-15 says "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death and whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire.
Revelation 21:8 (Living Bible) teaches, "But cowards who turn back from following me, and those who are unfaithful to me, and the corrupt, and the murderers, and the immoral, and those conversing with demons, and idol worshippers and all liars — their doom is in the lake of fire that burns with fire and sulphur. This is the Second Death.
Since God is Just and Holy, it is impossible not to believe in a day of reckoning. That's why I would encourage everyone to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and do their best to live for Him day by day.
If you have any questions that you would like to have answered from the Bible, please write Pastor Don Peros, Box 129, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Make Your Own Snack Treats To Save Money

"By making your own snack mixes, you can concoct treats to tickle your own taste — and save money in the process. Take, for instance, the popular high-energy trail mix snack, known to backpackers as 'gorp.' It contains raisins, dried fruit, coconut and assorted nuts and seeds," notes Dr. Laurence Hursh, consultant to the national dairy council.

You can buy trail mix at grocery stores and camping supply stores — premixed, weighed and packaged. Or you can buy the ingredients separately and mix them yourself. You'll find it's easy and inexpensive.

When choosing fruits, decide when you intend to use them. In some cases, you'll find it's wiser to buy bananas and tomatoes green. That way, they'll be at their peak ripeness when you're ready to serve them.

By breaking tradition now and then, you can use a food in various ways. This lets you buy that food in larger quantity when the price is right. It's not written in stone, for instance, that eggs can be served only at breakfast. What about an occasional omlette as a dinner entree?

Using cheese as a meat substitute once in a while is a thrifty way to serve your family a high-quality protein food rich in A and B vitamins. Furthermore, cheese is an excellent source of calcium, Dr. Hursh notes.

Before driving to the grocery store to take advantage of a single food bargain, consider the hidden expenses. Consider, for instance, the climbing cost of gas. Ask yourself, "Will the 19 cents I save per pound be worth the $1.35 I spend per gallon?" If the answer is "yes", then you have a food bargain. If it's "no," save yourself the trip — and the money.

Smart shoppers consolidate their driving — and their shopping.

TRF Opponents Finish 48-22

During the 1981 high school football season, it was pointed out repeatedly that Thief River Falls was facing an extremely tough schedule. Several frustrating close losses left the Prowlers 0-6 before they had to forfeit their final three games because of the teachers strike here, leaving them 0-9 for the year.

Quality of the Thief River Falls schedule surfaced as the 1981 regular season came to a close last week, revealing that eight of the Prowlers' nine scheduled opponents finished with a better than .500 record. Only crookston at 2-6 had a losing season, and two of those losses were forfeits because of the teachers strike in that community, robbing the Pirates of an opportunity to finish 4-4.

Four Thief River Falls opponents had their seasons extended, with Grand Rapids and Moorhead competing in the Minnesota Class AA playoffs; Detroit Lakes and East Grand Forks entered in the Minnesota Class A playoffs; and Grand Forks Red River playing in the North Dakota Class A playoffs.

Grand Rapids led the regular season won-lost list of Thief River Falls opponents with a perfect 9-0 record, beating Duluth Denfeld 28-0, Duluth East 20-8, Thief River Falls 13-6, Duluth Morgan Park 29-14, Hibbing 25-6, Cloquet 27-0, Duluth Cathedral 14-6, Bemidji 21-6 and Duluth Central enroute to the Northern Lakes Conference title.

Moorhead lost its opener to Fargo South 20-14, then shut out six of its next seven opponents for a 7-1 finish and a playoff berth as a Class AA independent. The Spuds beat Fargo North 20-0, Superior 17-0, Burnsville 7-0, Thief River Falls 16-0, Fergus Falls 24-0, Hibbing 21-6 and Bemidji 28-0 before finishing with a ninth week open date. They play St. Paul Suburban Conference Park Tuesday at Concordia College in a Class AA playoff opener.

Grand Forks Red River had its best season ever at 7-2, beating Thief River Falls 29-0, East Grand Forks 6-0, Grand Forks Central 28-0, West Fargo 28-0, Fargo North 20-6, Jamestown 32-6 and Wahpeton 66-6 while losing close back-to-back late-season games to Fargo South 14-7 and Fargo Shanley 9-3 in overtime.

Detroit Lakes won the Mid-State Conference championship this fall while going 6-3. The Lakers beat Thief River Falls 13-8, Perham 14-7, Crosby-Ironton 26-6, Aitkin 14-13, Wadena 26-13 and shut out Staples 14-0 Thursday in a match-up of Mid-State leaders with a playoff berth on the line. Detroit Lakes finished with four straight conference wins after early season trouble when the Lakers lost to Fergus Falls 21-0, Bemidji 19-6 and Park Rapids 19-13 in overtime.

Bemidji also finished 6-3, but unlike Detroit Lakes, the Lumberjacks had their problems at the end of the year after opening with six straight wins over Crosby-Ironton 28-0, Little Falls 21-20, Detroit Lakes 19-6, Park Rapids 13-7, Fergus Falls 13-0 and Thief River Falls 3-0 in overtime. Then came three straight season-ending losses to Grand Rapids 21-6, Moorhead 28-0 and Hermantown 21-13. First year as a Class AA independent saw the Lumberjacks finish 2-2 against Class AA competition.

Fergus Falls joined Detroit Lakes and Bemidji as a 6-3 finisher. The Otters, while picking up a 2-0 forfeit decision over Thief River Falls, beat Detroit Lakes 21-0, Litchfield 13-6, Crookston 15-9, St. Cloud Cathedral 17-7 and East Grand Forks 7-6. They lost to Alexandria 13-7, Bemidji 13-0 and Moorhead 24-0 for a 0-3 mark against Class AA opposition while playing for the first time as a Class AA independent.

Staples had a 5-4 finish, missing a Class A playoff berth with its 14-0 Thursday night loss to Detroit Lakes. The Cardinals also lost to St. Cloud Cathedral 6-2, Frazee-Vergas 20-14 and Wadena 13-6 while beating Perham 39-7, Thief River Falls 15-14, Crosby-Ironton 18-6, Aitkin 13-6 and Park Rapids 26-7.
